With the assistance of the Ohio State Hillel Foundation yesterday, OSU students remembered the approximately 6 million lives lost during the Holocaust.

For 24 hours, beginning Sunday evening, the Hillel Foundation held a remembrance vigil for all who lost their lives during the tragic Nazi campaign. A tent was set up with books containing the names of all who perished, candles for participants to light in remembrance and information about those affected by the event.

The vigil began with a remembrance service before the risk of breast cancer as much as 49 percent, according to a study spearheaded by an Ohio State researcher.

The study shows low doses of ibuprofen, brands of which include Advil or Motrin, can reduce the risk of breast cancer by 49 percent. Aspirin may reduce the risk of breast cancer by about 21 percent, while acetaminophen, or Tylenol, showed no decrease in risk.

The idea that inflammation and cancer are linked together is nothing new. It's been around for decades," said Dr. Randall Harof the study. "But the proof is, I think, now irrevocable.

Harris said the effects were seen when women took one standard ibuprofen tablet -200 milligrams — per day. One 325 milligram aspirin tablet was effective as well. Baby aspirin, on the other hand, was too low of a dose to achieve results.

Harris, who also serves as director of the Center of Molecular Epidemiology and Environmental Health at OSU, led a national team of researchers in compiling the information.

Data came from 80,741 postmenopausal women between the ages of 50 and 79 across the United States. It was collected by the Over-the-counter pain relievers may reduce Women's Health Initiative, a national organization that studies disease risk in older

> One of the reasons that we can look at these effects is because so many people use these types of compounds for the treatment of arthritic conditions or inflammatory conditions, and they use them on a regular basis,"

The report also shows high-risk women, ris, professor of pathology and lead author such as those who are overweight or have a family history of breast cancer, had results consistent with other women.

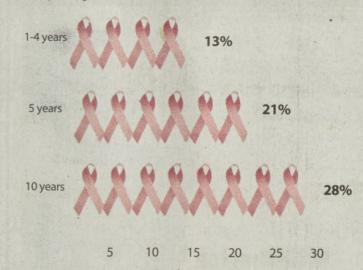

Harris said many other studies indicate ibuprofen and aspirin may also fight different types of cancer. Most of those studies focused on colon, lung and testicular cancer, as well as breast cancer. They all show a similar reduction in the incidence of cancer.

Harris has been studying the cancer-fighting effects of ibuprofen and related drugs since 1987. In that time, his studies and others

Ohio was ranked 10th but ninth place Connecticut on the 100-point scale.

California is much farther along than everyone else, and Massachusetts is very strong," Stuart said. "But the last six states are not all that different."

The ratings will not attract people to Ohio, Stuart said.

You need something stronger than that for people to settle in a state," she said.

Stuart said Ohio's strong applied science programs and engineering schools' coalescence with small technology research in medical, military and space labs contributed to its ranking.

Nanotechnology is the creation and use of objects through the manipulation of molecules and atoms. It is used in coatings and materials for fibers, metals and cosmetics.

Nanotechnology should have extensive uses in computing, communications, drug delivery and defense, Stuart said

Microsystems normally originate through technologies used to develop silicon-based integrated circuits and are built on a scale of millionths of a meter. They usually contain mechanical and sensing capabilities and are used in many consumer elec-

"The scope of the research ranges from the development of theoretical contact model to design and fabrication of sophisticated triboapparatus and associated instrumentation and the acquisition of tribological data," Bhushan said.

The aim of the nanotribology laboratory is to conduct research in the general area of tribology cal systems and magnetic storage systems, which includes tape drives, flexible disk drives and rigid disk drives.

Speaker focuses on plight of gay Asian Pacific-, Asian-Americans

By Mary Tramonte Lantern staff writer

Students of all races, sexualities and genders attended a multimedia lecture on the struggles of gay Asian Pacific-Americans yesterday.

Kevin Kumashiro, director of the Center for Anti-Oppressive Education in California, presented "Perverse Pleasures: Troubling Stories of Queer Asian Pacific-Americans" by alternating video clips that displayed gay Asian Pacific-Americans and their lives with quotes and stories from gay Asian-Americans.

"Perhaps the most commonsensical way of thinking about people who are both queer and Asian Pacific-American is to think of them as 'doubly oppressed' or 'double minorities," Kumashiro said.

Stereotypes deal with gender and gender deviation and limit the way gay Asian Pacific-Americans view themselves. They end up being seen as minorities in their own race, Kumashiro said.

"You end up forcing yourself to silence a part of yourself by conforming to society," he said.

Traditional Asian values, like marriage, having children and passing down the family name, make it difficult for many gay Asian-Americans to deal with their sexuality, he said.

Being a real or honorable Asian requires the performance of heterosexuality," he said. "Which means that Asians who are queer have somehow lost that traditional value, have been assimilated into white culture, have the 'white disease.'

There are many ways to think of the intersection of race and sexuality, and the intersecof every race and for every sexuality, Kumashiro said.

"It is uncommon to think in vigilance," he said. "Yet, it is the uncertainties, the gaps, the constant State, not just to Asian-American Studies Program.

He said after intervening, he used his phone to call for someone to pick them up when members of the crowd started yelling that he had a gun, Dann said.

Other witnesses said the man held the phone at shoulder height with both arms extended.

Police are still investigating all accounts. Dann said the man could face simple assault charges if detectives determine he deliberately made the crowd believe he had a gun.

Tuition increase in future for OU

(THE POST) ATHENS, Ohio -Ohio University President Robert Glidden proposed next year's budget to the Board of Trustees on Friday. Board members also discussed admissions and a new general education program at their meetings Thursday and Friday.

Glidden suggested a 9 percent tuition and fees increase for the 2004-2005 school year. Two percent of that would go toward improving OU's technological infrastructure, including a completely wireless campus, and another 1 percent would be for need-based financial aid.

He also figured in a 3.5 percent salary increase for university employees, without changing their current health benefits plan. Glidden will present the final proposal, which still needs to be cut by $4.5 million to balance the budget, at the trustees' next meeting in June.

Lauded poet graces Southside

By lan Story Lantern staff writer

Poetic expression and social charity combined last Thursday night at the Southside Settlement House. The former Poet Laureate of the United States, Robert Pinsky, conducted a free reading of his most noted poems.

Pinsky, Poet Laureate from 1997-2000, was on hand as part of the Settlement's second annual fundraiser event, called "A Celebration of Poetry and Poets."

The readings were open to the public and were followed by an intimate discussion of his poetry and an autograph session, as well as a reception hosted by Pinsky and the Settlement House workers.

'We are delighted to have a poet of Mr. Pinsky's stature," said Mari Sunami, executive director and CEO of the Settlement House. "Mr. Pinsky's poetry draws upon the broad spectrum of the human experience. That in and of itself is an ideal example of the house's objective."

Robert Pinsky was appointed the Poet Laureate Consultant in Poetry of the United States, the highest honor a U.S. poet can receive, in 1997. The position is Congress and carries a term of October to May.

According to the Library of Congress' Web site, the Poet Laureate "serves as the nation's official lightning rod for the poetic impulse of Americans." During his or her term the Poet Laureate seeks to raise the awareness of poetry and make it more accessible to the American people.

English at Ohio State, says Pin- and literacy classes for immisky's poetry is so accessible because the poet is in tune with the people and doesn't write for a was the first area of Columbus an after-school program and a

"I think he is an amazing poet," said Citino. "He has translated some of the greatest works of literature, including The Inferno of Dante, and I believe he is responsible for the resurgence of popularity in poetry in America."

As part of his work as Poet Laureate Pinsky founded the Favorite Poem Project. It is a collection of poems of all genres submitted to Pinsky by more than 18,000 Americans.

The project has spawned two anthologies containing reprints of more than 200 submitted poems, the Favorite Poem Project Videos, reading tours of the United States and a highly trafficked Web site, favoritepoem.org.

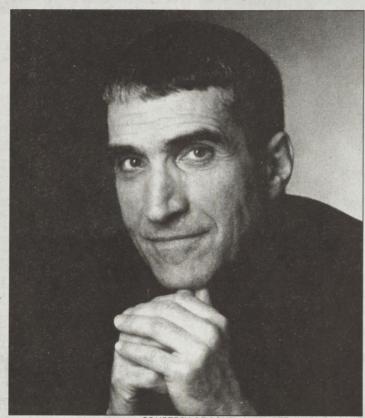

The Settlement House believes that along with donations, volunteer work and philanthropy, art of all forms contributes to the improvement of the human condition.

Art and poetry, especially that of Mr. Pinsky, is an essential part of our effort here at the house" said Sunami. "People are made up of more than just their physical self; they need to be enriched in other ways as well."

The Southside Settlement House was founded in 1899 by a group of female members of the Women's Home Missionary Sociawarded by the Librarian of ety of the Methodist Episcopal Church. AMANDA OSTERSTOCK am not Japanese, I'm German

We are all guilty of evaluating other people by their physical characteristics when we first meet. That being said, during the past few years, I have become a casual observer of a social phenomenon that I first experienced as a child and have noted in recurrence ever since: It appears that people from all walks of life feel compelled to notify me that they, in fact, know someone who is Korean, Chinese, Japanese, Vietnamese or Thai.

Invariably, I receive this information in the form of a brief, awkward exchange that typically goes something like this:

Stranger: "Hi! What's your name?

Amanda: "My name's Amanda, what's yours?" Stranger: "Oh my name's (insert name here). So, uh, where are you from?"

Amanda: "I'm from Columbus, where are you from?" Stranger: "Um ... no ... uh ...

(light bulb appears above head) Have you always lived here?" Amanda: "No ... I grew up in eastern Pennsylvania, and then I moved to Columbus when I was 15. Stranger: "Oh, okay. So, what's your ethnicity?"

Amanda: "Oh! I'm South Stranger: "Oh really! Yeah, my (insert relative, friend, or coworker) is (insert adjective for any East Asian country)!

I have learned that the reply "I know some white people too!" is returned with a blank stare and a slow headnod. Considering my experience, I should know how to meet this line of questioning with the perfect combination of charm and intelligence.

But I don't.

In the past, I have attempted to feign a brief look of shock and surprise, followed by an interested facial expression and a clever retort like, "Oh really? That's interesting!" I might also have said, "Neat!" and smiled brightly.

Recently, however, when asked the question, "So, are you Japanese?" I blurted out, 'Bye!" and ran away.

While I realize that this is a poor coping strategy, it seems that I've developed such a strong aversion to the situation that I would rather have people think I'm a huge weirdo than converse about my homeland.

If, for some reason, the conversation happens to continue, I will most certainly be asked at least one of the two following questions, often both: 1. "Do you eat dogs and cats?" and or 2. "Do you speak any Korean?" I no longer bother to answer the first question, and to the second question, I offer the information: "No, but I speak Spanish." This comment is then completely ignored.

A look of vague disappointment will be followed by a request for me to say something in Korean, Chinese or Japanese, and an inquisitive look to determine whether I am telling the truth. When I affirm that no, I really can't speak any East Asian dialect, the asker graciously translates.

There are also several variations — sometimes we talk about kimchi, other times I am regaled with war stories from retired military men that were once stationed in Seoul.

While I realize that these people are just curious, it seems rather thoughtless and sometimes slightly offensive when I am confronted with a situation like this.

It is one thing if we are friends, and you simply cannot figure out how I ended up with a last name like "Osterstock." It is another thing entirely to meet someone and instantly become a contestant in the game "20 Questions About Your Race."

And while I realize these topics may be of cultural relevance to some, I grew up on a cattle farm in rural Pennsylvania with five white people. I don't know any Korean, I don't eat domesticated pets, and I don't know your Asian friend. I'm sorry.

Amanda Osterstock is a senior in marketing. She can be reached for comment at osterstock.5@osu.edu. She was an infant adoptee from South Korea and she misses her dog Barley, whom she doesn't eat.

Band takes artistic license to new level

By Ellie Sanders Lantern arts writer

Artistic music comes in many forms and occasionally it is worth time and money. Conquerors of noise, the music of Sunburned Hand of the Man is fine art. It is well worth the price, as the group displayed Friday at the Mershon Auditorium.

Squeezed onto a small platform behind the curtain of the main stage, masks of skeleton faces and Mexican wrestlers, among others, stare into the crowd as if they were designated to guard the plethora of various instruments.

One at a time, Sunburned members find themselves on stage, each tapping this or shaking that, providing texture to a low rumble that eventually gives way to a beat.

Bizamerrie appears as each person takes charge of something different, creating sound together. Simultaneously, they appear completely disjointed as if they are in separate rooms. One works a sound machine behind a sitting fellow using a bow to stroke a banjo.

Throughout this seemingly chaotic scene, a thread of conformity seeps through in the form of a repeating keyboard pattern. Then it starts to get weird.

Drums rumble, voices slip in and out, and all of a sudden realization occurs of what it must sound like in Hunter S. Thompson's brain while he's having the fear. Then the beat changes to something reminiscent of a Beastie Boys instrumental while the keyboard drones on and on and an oboe makes an appearance.

Haunting sounds morph in and out, building to a climax, changing, falling, and changing again.

Dancing is out of the question for a while, and the mood takes a drastic turn to the tune of distorted screaming, seemingly harming the psyche with visions of hell's circus — then it's over as quick as it came.

In attempts to ease out of musical trauma, the drummer changes the tone to a "space" theme familiar to fans of the Grateful Dead.

After a while, a beat finds its way in and for the first time, the music is danceable. Vintage fight footage of the Boston Bruins appears on a large screen and group members take turns telling stories.

The end product is what would happen if Sonic Youth doubled itself and added the Talking Heads - tripped out in true, creative diversity. Intensity reaches its peak and equipment breaks off and flies in all directions but no one notices, considerations of the reality have been long forgotten.

In the head of everyone, Sunburned Hand of the Man has a place. Beauty offset with confusion, the occasional spurt of anger and perpetual complexity reign supreme. Lost entities yell out, finally heard, while others sit back in obscurity although their presence is key to the existence of the whole. The entire experience is charming and a trip to remember.

BRETT LIEBENDORFER/THE LANTERN

Lucero drew its fervent fans to Bernie's Sunday night.

Lucero energizes its fans at Bernie's

By Bret Liebendorfer Lantern staff writer

Ballads about whiskey nights and broken hearts entertained a sweaty, crowded and smelly Bernie's Distillery Sunday night when Lucero came to town. Hailing from Memphis, Tenn., Lucero has built a large, underground fan base by combining country and indie rock music. Its unforgettable live performances have also added to its appeal.

A diverse crowd included hipsters, punks, rowdy BMXers and even Lucero's former touring partners Against Me. Lucero toured with Against Me earlier in their tour and had some crazy experiences.

'Drunken nakedness ensued at the last show in El Paso. It was bad but also fun," said Ben Nichols, lead singer and guitarist for Lucero. "I feel sorry for those poor, 16 year-old El Paso kids who just came to see Against Me and all of a sudden there was full frontal nudity." Despite the fun Lucero had touring with Against Me and later the Breeders, it was excited to be headlinining its own shows. The band prefers to play in bars that can only hold up to 200 people, and such was the case Sunday night at Bernie's.

Perfect Day and Between the Devil and the Deep Blue Sea opened. The diverse crowd was hesitant until near the end of Between the Devil's performance. Their set included a handful of epic songs packed with intricate guitar lines and sudden tempo changes. The sleepy crowd finally became alive and began to pack the front of the stage.

Once on stage, Lucero opened with the title track of its latest album, "That Much Farther West." Everyone sang along, instantly transforming Bernie's previously stagnant atmosphere into a sweaty, energetic mess.

The crowd's liveliness only increased as the band fused its older , favorites with new songs the crowd had already memorized.

'The people are going with us; the sound does change from one record to the next, but we haven't lost too many people yet," Nichols said after the show. Lucero gave their three albums near-equal attention and played every request belted out from the crowd. This included their popular covers of Jawbreaker's "Kiss the Bottle" and the Replacement's "Hate and Jealousy."

It is common for the band to play to every request, as on at least one occasion — in Akron, when the two opening bands canceled — Lucero decided to play the entire night and exhausted its fans. However, Sunday's concert at Bernie's was scheduled to end by 11 p.m. to accommodate the weekly hip-hop show.

With time concerns approaching rapidly, Nichols asked the crowd what it wanted to hear for the last song. "Tears Don't Matter Much," an inspirational song about Nichol's local music heroes from Lucero's latest album, barely won out.

Anticipating the end of the show, the crowd sang louder and danced harder then it had all night. Before anyone had a chance to leave, however, Nichols finsished the night by playing a solo of another crowd favorite, "Sweet Little Thing."

Tennis stays perfect at home in coach's 100th win

MELANIE WATKINS/THE LANTERN Senior Jeremy Wurtzman played his final match at the Stickney Tennis Center Sunday. Wurtzman is nationally ranked at No. 1 in singles.

By Melanie Watkins Lantern editor

By recording his 100th victory Friday and his 101st Sunday, Ty Tucker was able to coach the Ohio State men's tennis team to an undefeated home season.

"It was good to go undefeated. I don't think we've gone undefeated at home before," OSU men's tennis coach Tucker said. 'As far as my 100th win, I would have liked to have gotten it sooner. That's where I am with that."

The No. 19 Buckeyes finished out the home portion of the season with their second Big Ten shutout, their 10th overall. OSU swept the singles after earning the doubles point against Wisconsin Sunday. The victory puts OSU at 19-3 overall and 7-1 Big Ten.

It was the final matches at the Stickney Tennis Center courts for two OSU seniors. Jeremy Wurtzman has been playing the No. 1 singles and doubles position for the Buckeyes this season. He is ranked No. 1 nationally in singles.

"It's a lot of memories — a lot of good memories. I've had a lot of matches here," Wurtzman said. "I've enjoyed every match going to come back and root the after the rest of the Buckeyes startguys on for years to come."

Brenton Contini spent much tini stepped onto the No. 6 singles court as well. It was only his third singles match this season.

"It was (Contini's) last match, and we are always looking to see if going to give us a little more power and a little more oomph," Tucker said. "He's been a good contributor and a positive team member.'

Both seniors finished their home careers by winning their doubles and singles matches. Wurtzman paired up with freshman Joey Atas in the No. 1 doubles court to hand the No. 33ranked tandem of Wisconsin's David Hippee and Alexander Kasorov an 8-6 loss. The lone doubles point had come down to the decision of court No. 1 after Contini and sophomore Dennis Mertens won their doubles match at court No. 3 for OSU, 8-1, and the OSU tandem of sophomores Ross Wilson and Scott Green fell in its doubles match, 8-6, in court No. 2.

'I thought I played some of the best points I've ever played," Wurtzman said.

Buckeyes won four of five there is someone out there that is other singles courts in straight sets. Freshmen Joey Atas and Chris Klingemann, Mertens and Contini did just that, while freshman Devin Mullings had to play a third-set breaker.

"I was a little bit rusty out there, especially in this wind," Contini said about his singles match. "At least I won and that's all that matters in the end.

Despite the win, Tucker was slightly disappointed in his team.

We're not holding serve right when we get breaks," Tucker said. "It's a must in men's tennis that as soon as you break serve, you must hold, and too many times we are giving the break right back.

"I don't think we played that well," he said. "It was a nice win; The momentum carried over to I am not trying to say anything Contini agreed with Tucker but said the wind made it difficult.

'I think it is hard to get going out in this wind. With 20 mph winds you've got to really concentrate and focus and move your feet," Contini said. "If you're not doing that it doesn't matter what kind of player you are — great players are going to have trouble in weather like this."

In the Buckeyes' Friday victory, they were able to defeat Northwestern 5-2. They took the doubles point and four of the six singles matches. Wurtzman, Klingemann, Mullings and Mertens won their singles matches in straight sets.

It was Tucker's 100th win coaching the Buckeyes. Tucker is in his fifth year as a coach with OSU.

"We wanted to win that one for (Tucker)," Wurtzman said. "Once we got that it gave us a lot of confidence and we really came together as a team which helped."

OSU will finish its regular season on the road this weekend. The team travels to Iowa Friday and Minnesota Sunday.

"Minnesota is going to be a real big match," Wurtzman said. "We hate losing to them and they hate losing to us just as much."
