107th year, No. 132

Seniors awaiting Reagan decision

By Tim Koehler
Lantern staff writer

They say no news is good news, but the planners of this year's spring commencement at Ohio State may disagree.

The 300th Commencement Committee is anxiously awaiting word from the White House as to whether President Reagan will be the guest speaker at spring commencement.

The ceremony, which marks the 300th graduation from the Ohio State University, is scheduled for June 12 in Ohio Stadium.

"We have no further news since we last talked with them (Reagan's administrators)," said Lisa Holstein, director of editorial projects.

Because of his presidential commitments, Reagan's administrators told Ohio State not to plan on him coming until the president's June schedule is released.

No alternative speakers have been announced.

"We definitely will get an alternative speaker," President Edward H. Jennings said. "We don't want to announce an alternative at this time, because it may cause an embarrassment to them, being second choice."

Jennings said it will be late May before information concerning an alternative speaker will be released.

"We don't know if he (Reagan) is coming," said Bill Wahl, manager of community and visitor relations. "They have not acted yet, but we're banking on Reagan."

Wahl hopes to make the spring graduation celebration a major event.

To commemorate the ceremony and to restore an old campus landmark known as the Five Brothers, five red oak trees were planted on the Oval this week, Wahl said.

He explained that on Arbor Day 1891, students planted five English elm trees on the Oval, 10 feet apart from each other.

These trees provided a shaded area and a popular meeting place on campus. This small grove became known as the Five Brothers.

In the mid-1950s, Dutch Elm disease killed off several of the trees. The last tree was cut down in the early 1970s.

For several years, a huge rock with a plaque on it has marked the spot where the Five Brothers stood, Wahl said.

Because there is still no cure for Dutch Elm disease, Wahl was advised to plant red oaks, which are similar to English elms and are more resistant to the disease.

Other plans for the graduation ceremony include dressing up the campus and the city with banners and decorative drapes.

University offices are planning to use stationery letterheads commemorating the event.

A time capsule containing articles from the commencement will be buried.

Each of the graduates is expected to carry a colored balloon, with each color identifying a specific college.

Holstein said that other plans for the upcoming graduation are still being developed.

Weiffenbach quits as Wexner curator

By Lisa Cayton-Stockdale
Lantern staff writer

Jean-Edith Weiffenbach resigned Tuesday as curator for the Wexner Center for the Visual Arts because of differences with the director of the center.

Weiffenbach and the director of the center, Nathan W. Green, released a joint statement that attributed the resignation to "differences of curatorial approach and philosophy."

Weiffenbach said she will not continue as curator after her contract expires June 30.

Green said Weiffenbach has been on leave of absence since the middle of February because of the differences between her and Green. Weiffenbach will stay on leave for the duration of her contract, he said.

"Jean was hired into a position we all thought she would do well in, but what emerged was a difference of opinion," said Andrew Broekema, dean of the College of Arts.

Broekema said he is hoping to form a search committee soon, but he wants to be sure to have an accurate job description before beginning a national search.

"We are using this opportunity to make sure we really have the job description that we want," he said.

Weiffenbach said she wishes the center well, but that it was not possible for her to continue working there.

She assumed the position of curator for the Wexner Center July 1, 1986. She came to Columbus from Boulder, Colo., where she worked as director and curator for the University of Colorado Art Galleries.

Prior to her work in Colorado, she worked at the Museum of Modern Art in New York for eight years.

Weiffenbach said she doesn't have any immediate plans, but she is looking into several possibilities.

"I am making a major effort to find out what the situation is across the country," she said.

Rapid changes are taking place around the United States in the funding of art galleries and in the artists' involvement in the organization of galleries, she said.

"I really want to be involved in the forefront of that change," she said.

Neither Weiffenbach nor Green said they feel the resignation will hurt her career.

Galleries are complex undertakings that allow many different philosophies and approaches to exist, Green said.

He said he didn't think Weiffenbach will have trouble finding a "place to fit into."

COTA work order set to expire

By Jim McCann
Lantern staff writer

The on-again, off-again COTA bus strike will be on again if a contract agreement is not reached by 12:01 a.m. Tuesday, when a court-ordered injunction expires.

Members of Local 208 of the Transport Workers of America have scheduled a meeting Sunday at the Barnett Recreation Center to decide whether to except COTA's last contract offer or to go back on strike.

COTA's last offer included: a $1,000 ratification of contract payment; a 25 cent, hourly-wage increase in the second and third years of the contract; a limit of 48 part-time workers for three years; a limitation of subcontracting only to new transportation services; and a raise in the number of sick days from six to nine per year.

Fred Thivener, president of Local 208, could not be reached for comment, but he did mail a letter to COTA this week saying drivers and mechanics will resume the 66-day strike Tuesday.

COTA's trustees met in executive session for two hours this week to discuss their options in the event the union goes back out on strike. However, no decision will be released until after the union has had their meeting, said Mari-Jean Porterfield, spokeswoman for COTA.

Negotiators for COTA and the union have been unable to break the stalemate over COTA's demands concerning the hiring of part-time help, subcontracting services and reduction of sick days.

Richard J. Simonetta, general manager for COTA, has said that the board has several options if the union decides to go on strike.

Buses could continue operating on some routes by hiring replacement drivers or subcontracting to private carriers. Another option would be to wait the whole thing out. A third option would be to seek third-party intervention, which would need the union's approval, he said.

Franklin County Common Pleas Judge Frederick T. Williams ordered both parties back to the negotiation table March 22, in an effort to settle the strike. At the same time, he also extended his back-to-work order until Tuesday, April 14.

Last Tuesday, the Court of Appeals upheld Williams' previous decisions. Appeals Court Judges Donna Bowman, Archer E. Reilly and John McCormac found that the strike did create a clear and present danger to the public and that Williams had the right to order negotiations to continue.

The judges did not rule on the possibility of Williams extending the 60-day, back-to-work order. Ohio's collective-bargaining law does not say whether a back-to-work order can go beyond 60 days.

Defector reunites with family

By John McElfresh
Lantern staff writer

After defecting from the Soviet-controlled country of Romania three years ago, Emil Vrabie, instructor of Romanian language, has been reunited with his family.

When Vrabie, 59, left for the United States in August 1984, his wife Harriet, and his 14-year-old daughter Ann, were not allowed to leave the country to join him.

Communist regulations prohibit many citizens from ever leaving Romania, a small country situated in Eastern Europe behind the Iron Curtain.

While Vrabie was a professor at the University of Bucharest in Romania, he had the chance to travel to the United States to work on a joint linguistic project with an American professor. Vrabie accepted, although he was discouraged from leaving Romania by Communist officials.

The day following Vrabie's arrival in the United States, he decided he would not return to his native country. He applied for American protection.

"With all there was at stake, including the possibility that I might have never seen my family again, it was a very difficult decision to make," Vrabie said.

After being married for 33 years, communicating solely through letters added to the uncertainty of Vrabie's decision.

Communist officials, unhappy that another citizen had defected to the United States, began to pressure Vrabie's wife to separate from her husband.

When Harriet repeatedly refused, they demoted her from professor of French and Russian languages at a University of Management to the job of "a simple librarian, in order to set an example for other Romanian citizens to observe," she said.

This was a difficult change for Harriet Vrabie, who holds master's degrees in French, Russian and literature. She also has a doctorate in linguistics.

After Vrabie arrived in the United States, he immediately began to seek employment as an instructor for Slavic languages. Within two weeks he was back in the classroom, teaching at the University of Virginia at Charlottesville.

He met Rodica Botoman, supervisor of the OSU Romanian language program, while he was teaching in Virginia.

Ohio State has the largest Romanian language program in the United States.

When he was offered a position teaching Romanian at Ohio State a year and a half ago, Vrabie accepted, and moved to Columbus.

Efforts to have his family released "would have been in vain," until he was settled in the United States, Vrabie said. Once he had established himself in Columbus, he decided to try to gain permission for the rest of his family to join him.

However, Harriet did not receive a reply for 11 months after filing out the necessary paperwork in April 1986.

This made it very uncertain, she said, because of the hundreds who apply each day to leave Romania, only a few succeed.

Harriet and Ann were finally granted permission to leave Romania last month.

The Vrabies' older daughter Helen, who married recently, decided to remain in Romania with her husband.

Harriet and her youngest daughter arrived in Columbus March 31 after a

Quadriplegic says trial fair

By Tonya Flory
Lantern staff writer

Thanks to his attorney, OSU quadriplegic student George Lindsey's six-month legal battle ended in March and cost him only $110 in court costs.

Lindsey was arrested June 1, 1986 for driving his wheelchair on Interstate 71. He was charged with resisting arrest, disorderly conduct, operating a slow-moving vehicle on a highway and being a pedestrian on a highway.

Lindsey had approximately $1200 in attorney fees dismissed by his attorney, Ross Long.

Long, a friend of Lindsey's since 1979, said he represented Lindsey because he needed help. The attorney fees were never an issue, he said.

After numerous court appearances, Long eventually succeeded in having Judge Robert Wasylik drop the resisting arrest charge.

Lindsey's last court appearance was March 31. He said he and his attorney met with Judge Wasylik in his chambers and discussed the pros and cons of the case and the easiest way to solve it.

According to Lindsey, Judge Wasylik said he could not drop the other charges. He said the $50 fine and $60 in court costs would have to be paid by June.

"George agreed to pay the money and we had a speedy trial, after the meeting in the judge's chambers," Long said.

"We could not have accomplished this the first time in court," Long said. "George needed to see how the system worked. He needed to lose his steam."

Long said their final court appearance went well.

Judge Wasylik handled the case excellently," Long said. "He spent a lot of time working with us. Normally, with the docket load, judges only have enough time to sit down for a couple of minutes to review the case. He spent a couple hours sitting down with us — you can't do that with everyone."

Lindsey said this was the first time he thought he had "a fair shake in the (legal) process."

Conflicting reports delivered in weekend High Street fight

By Sarah L. Christian
Lantern staff writer

Bouncers from two High Street bars were recorded in Columbus Police Department reports as having started a fight outside the bars in which several people were injured from beatings Saturday night.

Police reports from the Columbus Police Department indicated that a manager from Wilson Farms, 1551 N. High St., called the police at 11:30 p.m. because there was a brawl going on in the parking lot. Police said bouncers from both Spring Break and Mother Fletcher's were involved.

Spring Break manager John Boll said the bouncers from Spring break were not involved in the fight. The only incident, he said, that involved his bouncers was their asking some patrons, who were fighting inside the bar, to leave.

Boll said the people in the parking lot of Wilson Farms had been throwing snowballs all night at the line of people waiting to get in to Spring Break.

"The guys from Mother Fletcher's went outside to tell them to stop and the people started pelting them with snowballs, too," Boll said. "That's how the big fight got started. There were no bouncers from Spring Break involved. I was at the door the whole time."

David Steiger, a junior from Cleveland, said in a letter to the Lantern he had witnessed the incident and had reported that there were bouncers from both bars in the fight. He said he saw the men wearing Spring Break and Mother Fletcher's shirts and that is what led him to believe they were employed at the bars.

After gathering into a group of about 20, "the bouncers and their friends attacked a group of students throwing snowballs. The bouncers singled out people and intimidated their victims with verbal abuse, spitting and, in many cases, beatings. They used their size and strength to terrorize a group of people who they thought were acting unorderly. So, they decided to bring order with violence," Steiger said.

Man murdered

A 28-year-old Columbus man was shot to death Thursday night following what police say was a domestic dispute.

Melvin Johnson, of 1521 E. 24th Ave., died at 9:52 of a gunshot wound to the chest, said Robert Helber, a University Hospitals spokesman.

Columbus police detective Robert Cupp said Johnson was shot after he forced entry into a house at 1257 E. 23rd Ave. A woman there apparently shot Johnson after a fight broke out, Cupp said. Police took the woman into custody, but no charges have been filed. A homicide spokesman said she was released.

"I was amazed to find the city so clean," she said, in fluent English. "Also, it is so brightly lit up. In our native city of Bucharest, it is very dark at night because all the power is saved for industrial purposes."

She is also impressed by the variety of goods one can buy in the United States.

After going to a local supermarket, the Vrabies were amazed at all the food that was available. They got their first taste of such fruits as oranges, pineapples, and bananas — none of which are available in Romania.

Having been here for less than two weeks, Harriet said she feels "as if (she is) in a dream" and cannot believe that she has finally made it to America. She said she wants to begin teaching French or Russian again as soon as possible.

SOVIETS CLAIM ESPIONAGE:

The Soviet Union put on display Thursday microphones and other gadgets it said were dug from the walls and floors of its U.S. missions and claimed the devices prove that Soviets are victims of American spies.

The devices, some crammed with miniature electronics and no bigger than a pencil, are "material evidence of who is really intruding into the sovereign territory of others," Foreign Ministry spokesman Boris Pyadyshchev said at a news briefing.

The briefing and the display of objects allegedly planted at Soviet missions and residences in Washington, San Francisco and New York was a clear Kremlin response to reports that the KGB laced the U.S. Embassy in Moscow with bugging devices and compromised its security.

The Soviet counterattack came as American officials were trying to gauge a sex-and-spy scandal that allegedly involved U.S. Marine guards who became sexually involved with Soviet women and were enticed into allowing KGB agents inside the American Embassy.

ARMS PROPOSAL DEAD: President Reagan's proposal at the Iceland summit to scrap all U.S. and Soviet ballistic missiles over 10 years is a dead issue, nuclear arms control director Kenneth L. Adelman said Thursday.

"The Soviets have rejected it out of hand," Adelman said.

He told reporters the U.S. proposal is still on the negotiating table in Geneva. But, he added, "I don't think it's going to come on the radar screen on arms control again, if you ask me."

Reagan proposed a two-stage plan to Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev in Reykjavik, Iceland. In the first five years, the two sides would cut by about one-half their long-range bombers, missiles and submarines. In the next five years, all ballistic missiles would be phased out.

INDIANA LOSES COLLIDER: Indiana is all but out of the bidding for a $4.4 billion nuclear research project, but will still benefit as long as the project goes to the Midwest, state officials said Thursday.

The giant "supercollider" partial accelerator is aimed at answering some of the most fundamental questions in physics, concerning the nature of matter and how it is created.

The facility will use thousands of superconducting magnets to accelerate two beams of protons in opposite directions through a 52-mile oval tunnel. Subatomic particles released when the beams collide will be analyzed for clues to the composition of the universe.

Ohio is one of the states scrambling to be the site of the Superconducting Super Collider, which President Reagan has given his endorsement but Congress has not approved.

FLOODWATERS RECEDING: Floodwaters receded slowly in the Northeast while damage estimates soared past $114 million Thursday, with Maine health officials warning that raw sewage may expose rescue workers to disease and the National Guard on patrol in Lawrence, Mass., after a man shot at suspected looters.

Officials in Maine estimated damage at $63 million, while in Massachusetts state Secretary of Public Safety Charles Berry said there may be $50 million damage in the Merrimack Valley alone.

Floodwaters receded slowly in most areas, the National Weather Service said Thursday, although flood warnings remained in effect. In Billerica, Mass., Civil Defense Director John Riel said it may be nearly two weeks before all 35 evacuated families can return home.

USG distressed by team apathy

By Heidi Gunther
Lantern staff writer

Several members of the Undergraduate Student Government Assembly were disappointed by three of the five presidential candidate teams Wednesday night when they did not attend their meeting.

After a Tuesday evening debate, Michele Evans, representative of the College of Education, invited the teams to speak at the Wednesday night assembly meeting. She said to the best of her knowledge, all the candidates were going to be there.

Only the teams of Patrick Piccininni/David Jackson and Scot Zellman/Jim Shaefer showed up.

Piccininni said he and Jackson would have attended the meeting even if they had not been invited because he is the chairman of the Finance Committee, and Jackson is an alternate to the USG assembly.

Schaefer said he and Zellman attended the meeting to meet the current assembly members and because they feel that a person cannot be a representative of an organization if he or she is not involved in it.

Current USG president, Brian Hicks, said this is the first time the candidates were invited to speak to the assembly.

Evans said none of the teams called her to say they would not be able to attend.

"I even talked to one team about 15 minutes before assembly and they said they were going to be here," she said. "They never showed."

Geoff Snyder, the parliamentarian of the assembly, who was sitting in as chairman for Tom Sydnor, said he didn't understand why the other candidates didn't come.

"I am quite disappointed that we invited five candidate teams to come speak to an organization that they hope to be the head of next year, and only two of them showed up. And I think that reflects poorly on those other candidates," Hicks said.

Jim Chambers said he and John Mazor did not attend the meeting because he had to work at the Acacia House Board of Trustees, and Mazor had a speaking engagement with a sorority.

Chambers said they did not say whether they would or would not attend.

Packy Malley said he and James Crates did not attend the meeting because he had to work at WOSR radio and Crates had to attend an OSU waterskiing club meeting, of which he is a member.

Jon Cohen and Si Pitstick were unavailable for comment.

Women in business lagging, group says

By Etsuko Motoki
Lantern staff writer

Women have made progress in the business world, but still have a long way to go, members of the American Association of University Women were told Wednesday evening at the Battelle Memorial Institute.

Maryanne Guadagno, research associate for Nationwide Insurance, and two other spokeswomen, spoke before approximately 40 women about "Working Women's Issues: Problems and Predictions for the Future."

In order for a woman to succeed in the corporate world, "she has to be well-versed, versatile, willing to travel and willing to work 80 hours a week and not complain," Guadagno said.

Women have to be more than perfect, very well-educated, persistent and professional all the time in order to hold management positions in business, Guadagno said.

Eleven percent of people in business hold management positions and 34 to 42 percent of them are women, she said. However, she added, "most of them get caught in middle-management levels and never make it to the top."

Only 1 percent of senior management positions are occupied by women, she said.

"It will take a long time before we really see any kind of equality in the senior management level because people like to work with people most like themselves, who are mostly men," Guadagno said.

Melanie Kennedy, associate professor in pathology, discussed women in medicine. She said the number of female students in medicine has increased from 8 to 35 percent in the last 20 years.

Even though the number of female physicians has increased dramatically, they still hold lower-level positions, Kennedy said. There are still very few women surgeons, she said.

Most women physicians are less than 35 years old; for these young physicians, a greater number of older female physicians are needed as role models, she said.

In the academic world, only 2 percent of department heads and 6 percent of professors in medical schools are women, she said.

Judith Moody, project manager at the Battelle Memorial Institute, discussed women in the physical sciences and engineering.

While women in business and medicine hold a minority status, women in the physical sciences and engineering hold a token status, she said.

Token status means women have high visibility but are isolated from their colleagues and are expected to behave in the stereotypical female way. For example, women are expected to remain silent in discussion groups, Moody said.

In the physical sciences and engineering, women receive as little as 62 to 65 percent of a male counterpart's salary.

CONDOMS: Make them available

We live in the '80s; that is not a secret. AIDS has claimed more than 30,000 lives since its appearance in America; that is not a secret either.

But where are the condoms? Now, that is a big secret, especially if you need them at odd hours such as midnight, or need to find them in odd places such as a dorm or a friend's house.

Condoms should be made as available as possible to OSU students. Installing condom dispensers in the dormitories and student unions would help make the more accessible.

The Office of Residence and Dining Halls should approve the bidding of contractors to install condom dispensers in all the dormitories and on the bathrooms of student unions.

Miami University and the University of Cincinnati are considering the proposal as well.

Dispensers can also be placed in campus bars, but that decision will depend on the willingness of the bar owners.

It has been estimated that single condoms would cost between 50 cents and $1 — a low price to pay when your health is at risk.

The need for dispensers has never been greater than now, when it has become clear that the AIDS threat exists in Columbus, and all over the country. Widespread sexual experimentation on a campus inhabited by a vast majority of single students only contributes to that threat.

As an added benefit, vending machines would assure anonymity for those afraid of buying condoms at stores.

PADDLING: Not in Ohio schools

Wack! Gov. Richard F. Celeste is trying to remove this sound from Ohio public schools.

Celeste is attempting to implement a policy prohibiting corporal punishment in Ohio public classrooms. Celeste made his recommendation after receiving a report from an appointed task force that traveled the state for three years before making the report.

The major reason for prohibiting corporal punishment is simple — the use of violence to discipline children can convince them that it is OK to solve problems with force. It is also argued that corporal punishment, in some cases, leads to future domestic violence.

The message is easy to see — corporal punishment doesn't work. It deals only with supposedly "immediate" results to disciplinary problems. The long-term addition to the problem is not considered.

In addition, the report gave these proposals that involve:

- strengthening domestic protection orders
- requiring counseling for abusive parents
- limiting spousal immunity from sexual abuses
- increasing child sex abuse penalties
- reporting and investigating abuse.

The state should approve this plan. Parents wanting more "traditional" discipline for their children will still have the option of private schools.

Of course, this plan will not remove the problem of family violence from the state of Ohio. It may help remove one cause of domestic violence, however.

More to college life than studying

People tell me I've got a warped idea about what college is supposed to be.

OK. Polls indicate that more and more of us are here to get a degree so we can get a good job and make lots of money. College is but a stepping stone to success, it seems.

Are most students only interested in what college has to offer them after they've graduated? I hope not.

Just sit back for a minute and think real deep about what college has to offer and what you plan to do or have been spending your time doing.

If the first thing to come to mind is drinking on High Street, don't laugh it off — you may be in a lot better shape mentally than a lot of other people out there.

No, this isn't a column about substance abuse (I leave that to Sister Nancy Reagan). No, it's more about having a good time. After all, is it a crime to see college as something more than a lot of books and classes?

Alcohol has really been getting a bum rap lately. Obviously overdoing it is self-destructive, but we shouldn't have to feel guilty if we get drunk on weekends. Drinking is simply one of many optional forms of social recreation that I feel are necessary for some people to be able to do well in college.

Sure, studying hard and getting good grades are important and admirable, but by themselves they don't

Bob
Payne
Lantern
Columnist

necessarily reflect a good college education.

Along with doing well in school, I consider involvement in some kind of social activity and a bit of physical exercise as important elements to the all-around course on life that is Ohio State.

These three elements go hand-in-hand with getting the most out of college. Ohio State provides more than enough opportunity for satisfying this objective.

Good grades are important in that they reflect an interest in the subject matter of a class (or at least they should). The grades themselves are not as important as how much you absorb or how much the class stimulates independent thinking on your part.

We've all heard it before, but it's true — college serves to expose young people to as many different ideas as possible. That's why we have to take basic education requirement courses, or BERs, in addition to our major courses.

This is not done to make your life a living hell. Like your mother used to say, take it, it's good for you.

And after you've studied a while, go out and have a drink or play a video game or see a movie. You've got to have a release — something to get you away from the books and away from the place where you spend your time studying.

Believe it or not, the people who run this university want you to do more than study. That's why there's an Ohio Union.

The powers-that-be say we should take 15-20 credits each quarter. This amount is not supposed to take up all of your waking hours (don't give me the argument that some majors are harder than others; they're all relative).

It's too bad a lot of people have to work full or part time while taking classes.

I've known people who say that I've got it easy since I don't have to work a part-time job to pay for school.

Is that supposed to make me feel guilty?

Damn, I should easily graduate with a 4.0 since I don't work while in school. Maybe I ought to volunteer for public service or something.

We must realize that college offers a unique learning experience outside of the classroom. It's the kind of opportunity you won't have when you are bustin' your behind 40 hours a week in the real world.

You see, college students are supposed to be somewhat irresponsible. People outside of campus think we're crazy because of the things we do, but they give us slack because we are college students. It all sounds like an open invitation to reckless abandon to me.

Once you've got the studying and the partying down pat, it's time to do your body a favor and do something that pumps your blood and gets air to your lungs: physical exercise.

I suppose this is related to social recreation in that some people claim to get a high from intense physical activity. What's important is that it clears the mind and gives you a chance to release a lot of excess energy or any violent tendencies.

After you've cleared your mind you'll be in a lot better shape to do some more studying, and then some more partying — it's just a vicious circle.

I've talked to many people several years out of college who envy the freedom and opportunity that college life offers. A lot of us are lucky to be here in the first place, so let's take advantage of it.

Marines at fault, but system deficient

Soviets know how to pick their spies. It's too bad the United States doesn't know how to pick Marine guards who can control their hormones and watch over the American Embassy in Moscow.

It, or should I say she, was their secret weapon. The Great Man Theory of history may have to be renamed The Great Moscow Vamp Theory of History if the damage of this episode proves to be as great as has been argued.

And all because of a woman. Here she is.

•Name: Violetta Seina.

•Clothing: Uniform consisted of the most fashionable attire, designed to lure innocent Marines into the wild world of sexual promiscuity no matter what the consequences.

•Training: KGB academy. Special section: How to Trick Americans with Lipstick.

•Weapons: Russian know-how, and understanding the needs of an unmarried young man from Brooklyn such as Sgt. Clayton J. Lonetree.

Lonetree found her irresistible; irresistible enough to allow her and another agent a free run of the embassy's communications center.

But Seina wasn't just Lonetree's girlfriend, she was also once a receptionist at the ambassador's residence and a secretary in the embassy office.

She knew just what she was looking for and just where she could find it. All she needed was to locate the weakest link, or should I say the weakest male will-power.

And she did.

But Lonetree wasn't the only Marine sexually used by a spy, there were at least two others; probably countless others in other European embassies.

The tragic thing about this incident is that the Marine guards are the ones being implicated, but it is the whole system that failed in the embassy. Senator Patrick J. Leahy, D-Vermont, and former vice chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, was reported as saying "They (embassy officials) don't seem to realize that the Moscow embassy was the candy store for the KGB."

And the candy came cheap. Because of a 1972 agreement, the United States allowed the new embassy to be built by Soviet workers who used the occasion to bug the whole building.

On Monday, Rep. Dan Mica, D-Fla. and Rep. Olympia Snowe, R-Maine, made a surprise visit to inspect the embassy and reported that it would take tens of millions of dollars to de-bug the $191 million building.

I think no extermination is necessary. They should just torch the place and build a new complex with those tens of millions of dollars. Put Americans back to work, let them build the embassy.

The KGB certainly did a good job, and the Americans let them do it right under their noses. In 1978, an antenna was found in the chimney of the embassy. Incredibly enough, the Soviets had been moving the antenna up and down to pick up signals from devices installed in the typewriters on various floors.

As someone typed at the typewriter, the letters were transmitted to the Soviets.

Soon after the spy scandal was revealed, all of the code machines, which work by taking letters and scrambling them into electronic signals to be decoded by the receiver, were returned to the United States to be disassembled in a search for monitoring devices.

The stories of the virtual electronic maze sounds like a 60-cent spy movie. Where is James Bond when you need him?

This isn't just a movie though, it's a series. April 13-16, Secretary of State George P. Shultz is scheduled to meet with Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze and other senior Soviet officials. Unlike other meetings, Shultz may be forced to bring a special trailer for communicating with Washington.

I wonder what kind of trailer it will be? I wonder if the driver will be a Soviet, or whether the toilet will be bugged?

College is an experience, graduation a fresh start

I've spent 17 years of my life becoming formally educated and now, as college graduation lies in wait for me a couple of calendar pages away, I'm looking at all of it in a new light. I'm wondering what the point of it all was, and I've come to some unorthodox conclusions about an incredibly orthodox period of time.

So let's take a trip down memory lane, if only to show, among other things, that my time spent watching Dick and Jane run or eat or sleep in 1971 doesn't count for a hill of beans several years down the line.

In 1971, during third grade, my main priority was to find new ways to torment Molly Morgan, who sat across from me, and the great irony here is that when I finally hit on the ultimate insult it was totally spontaneous.

As we were standing to say the pledge of allegiance, I suddenly recalled the smoked sausage I'd had for dinner the night before. As we sat down it flew out of my mouth, over my desk without touching it and then flowed heavily over Molly's desk, dripping over the sides and making a splatty sound on the floor. I felt fine after that, but Molly looked almost dead, and although I had to go to the nurse-principal for a while, I was permitted to stay in school for the rest of the day. Molly was excused and her mother came to pick her up.

Eventually, we were in high school and I had it on good faith from a friend that Molly wanted me to ask her out to the prom. I wanted to, but I ignored her — it was easier than risking embarrassment. So I stayed home and watched "Hee Haw" while Molly went with some bogus jerk named Brad and hopefully had an uncomfortable time. They say that teenage girls mature faster than boys, and, well, I proved them right.

In fact, it wasn't until I reached college that I decided the risk of embarrassment was one worth taking. Over the summer before my freshman year, some guys I worked with who went to college told me the best place to meet girls was in class and so, on the first day, in my first class, I looked around.

It was disappointing. As Barney Fife once remarked in "The Andy Griffith Show," "if somebody let a quail loose in this room I'll bet every girl in here would point."

There was an exception, however, and I noticed her looking my way. After a few days I noticed her sitting next to me and so I decided to write her a note (I still didn't have much confidence in Mr. Mouth). At the end of class one day I handed it to her, saying "Here, I think you dropped this on your way out of class yesterday." She took it, glanced at it, said "No, no I don't think so. See, isn't this your handwriting?"

I was embarrassed beyond recognition, but it was good for me. Years of embarrassments, some remarkably similar to the above, have forced me to grow up.

So now 17 years of education come to an end. I've been bored by Hawthorne, disgusted by Poe, moved by Arthur Miller. I've translated "Some of the boys ate the bread slowly" into Spanish, written essays about post-Maoist China and about pre-Leninist Russia; I once even knew the structural formula of dimethyl hexane. But is that really the point? I haven't the slightest idea today of how dimethyl hexane is structured, nor do I care, nor did I care when I did know.

Chances are I would've grown up without a formal schooling, but what 17 years of education has given me, what the point of it all was, is exposure to the world. Now I'm hearing that an entirely different world exists out there, and it looks like I'm going to have to start all over again.

Soviet ventures shame U.S.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — More embarrassing than the behavior of the Marine guards in Moscow or the bugs in the U.S. Embassy walls was the surprise American officials seemed to show at the extent of Soviet efforts to penetrate embassy security.

Robert H. Kupperman, an expert on terrorism at the Center for Strategic and International Studies, refused to speculate on the potential security damage at the embassy but added, "I suspect it has far higher embarrassment."

President Reagan said Tuesday that "it is clear the security implications are widespread." He suggested that the new U.S. embassy building in Moscow might be so riddled with Soviet listening devices "it may be necessary to destroy and rebuild it."

The president was asked whether the seduction of Marine guards and the bugs built into the new building had "changed the way you look at the Soviets?"

News Analysis

Imagine asking that question of a man who, in his very first news conference as president, said Soviet leaders "reserve unto themselves the right to commit any crime, to lie, to cheat...."

So, in response to the question during his latest encounter with the press, Reagan implied his view hadn't changed much.

"I think I've been rather realistic about the Soviet Union for quite some time, and believe me, it doesn't surprise me a bit," he said.

But the tough attitude at the top was not reflected at other levels involved in embassy security.

Kupperman called it "utter negligence" that U.S. officials did not have a greater role in supervising construction of the new facility in Moscow.

David Newsom, who was undersecretary of state for political affairs during the Carter administration, said it was his understanding that the main embassy building was to be built entirely with American contract labor.

"I had thought this central building in our compound had been built with security very much in mind," he said.

Asked to assess the potential damage, Newsom replied, "I just don't know how much Uncle Sasha saw in the interior of our embassy. Naturally, if he were taken into the inner sanctum of the communications and if he was an expert in equipment and had a chance to judge its nature and its vulnerabilities, that would be serious."

While saying he wouldn't underestimate the seriousness of the incidents, Newsom said, "it may not necessarily extend to our whole operation."

Hot line clarified

I would like to take this opportunity to correct a recent headline in the Lantern. The April 7 front page stated "Students' hot line gives legal advice." The second paragraph of the article begins by accurately quoting, "We do not give legal advice." In protection of the service being provided and the law students who volunteer, it is paramount that this point be clarified.

The Columbus Tenants Union does not give legal advice. The phone line at the law school is run by law students who are there to explain what remedies an individual may have in a given situation. Options are suggested. It is the caller's place to decide what route of action they want to take. We are not attorneys, are neither qualified nor authorized to give "legal advice" and frequently refer callers to legal aid or to their own attorney if the situation so merits.

Letters

The content of the article was accurate and fairly portrayed. Only the title, but unfortunately that is the part people will remember, was inaccurate. I would like to thank the Lantern for assisting in clearing up this point, so that the service being supplied may continue without complications.

President wrong

I am writing this letter in response to letters by both Mr. Trakas and Mr. Gladman that appeared in the Lantern, Monday, April 6.

I am sure that President Reagan has done some good things for some people, but those are not students nor the needy and homeless people in the streets of this country.

Just because some of us, including Mr. Bob Payne and I, realize a potential for mutual trust and cooperation between the United States and Soviet Union, instead of "bullheadedness" that does not make us "shortsighted individuals."

And when it comes to the violation and cheating of any treaties, Mr. Gladman forgot to mention that President Reagan's S.D.I. program violates the A.B.M. treaty, and how about the fact that Reagan's administration has cheated American people in the Iran-Contra affair?

Mr. Trakas was right about Reagan, however, when he wrote "when we elected Reagan, we knew what we were getting." That's right, Mr. Trakas, we knew what we were getting, a good actor but a bad politician.

Auto club requests survey of highways

Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Ohio auto club officials want state lawmakers to thoroughly evaluate rural interstate highways before deciding what to do about a new law that allows states to raise the speed limit to 65 mph on some stretches of rural interstate highways.

A bill pending before an Ohio Senate committee would raise speed limits on some parts of Ohio's interstate highways.

But auto club officials said Thursday that some rural highways may be unsafe for motorists driving 65 mph and suggested that speed limits on some stretches of roadway be lowered.

"If the state decides to go to 65 mph, then they should do some careful studies before deciding which highways will receive the higher speed limits," said Jerome Turk, a spokesman for AAA-Ohio Motorists Association of Northeast Ohio.

Turk said his organization has not determined which roads would be hazardous at 65 mph or now are dangerous at 55 mph. He also said the club supports highway evaluation criteria being proposed by the AAA-Ohio Auto Club in Columbus.

The AAA-Ohio Auto Club is proposing that only rural interstates with low accident rates and traffic volume be considered for higher speed limits.

The club's proposal also said that if the state opts to raise the speed limit, a move strongly opposed by Gov. Richard Celeste and the Ohio Department of Highway Safety, the higher limit should be restricted to rural interstate roads outside areas with populations of more than 50,000.

It also asks that if the state approves a raise in the limit, officials check roads where the speed limit has been adjusted to determine if accident rates and public compliance has been affected and suggests that all trucks traveling interstates not be allowed to drive faster than 55 mph, no matter what action the Legislature takes.

Hood ornaments becoming popular target

Associated Press

The latest rip-off fad among teen-agers is driving luxury-car owners mad, as a growing number of chrome and gold-plated hood ornaments disappear from their automotive perches and turn up in necklaces and belt buckles.

The thefts apparently are responsible for as much as a three-fold increase in hood ornament sales during the past year at General Motors Corp. and Mercedes-Benz.

"Anybody who has a hood ornament better watch out, they-

're taking them," said Joseph Timko, public safety director in Farrell, Pa.

The craze has prompted several dealers around the country to remove the emblems from cars while they sit in the lot and replace them after they're sold.

"We've been advising our customers not to replace them for a period of time. We figure it's a cult deal and sooner or later it will go away," said Bob Swetkis of Wetzel Motor Works, a Mercedes-Benz dealership in Pittsburgh that has received 100 replacement orders during the past three months.

Show choir ready for energetic debut

By Elizabeth Schuster
Lantern staff writer

This weekend, the Scarlet and Gray Show Choir opens the new quarter with two performances at Mershon Auditorium. The shows begin at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

The show choir consists of 20 singers and four instrumentalists all auditioned from the OSU student body, said James Gallagher, choir director.

"It's a different kind of a show than you'd expect to see on Broadway, but I think the talent is excellent and the dancing is sensational," he said.

The assistant director and choreographer for Scarlet and Gray, Andy Haines, creates all the dance in the numbers. Haines and Gallagher have both been involved with the choir for six years.

Haines said his three years working as a member of Scarlet and Gray opened his ability to set music to motion. "I think because of my training first vocally, choreographically there's a better understanding of what singers can and cannot do and how far they can be pushed as movers who also have to maintain a vocal sound," he said.

Gallagher said during pauses in singing, the intensity of the dance maintains the energy in a piece.

Besides its own choreography, Gallagher said Scarlet and Gray sings various original arrangements. Eric Delson, a student assistant, has arranged several pieces on this weekend's program such as "City Lights" and "I Got Rhythm."

"Energy. That's the name of the game," said Jim D. Stevenson, a sophomore from Marion who sings second tenor in Scarlet and Gray.

Like most members, Stevenson is not a music major. He said the daily practice brings a break from the books, and performing enhances his experience as a student.

Gallagher said Scarlet and Gray averages 35 performances a year. Many of these are at high schools around the state. In the past the show choir has gone to California and the East Coast.

The director said also each January the group hosts 1,600 to 2,000 high school students and show choir conductors. During this "Scarlet and Gray Festival," the choirs perform and receive vocal and dance coaching.

Few Scarlet and Gray members had dance training before joining the group. "They learn quickly because they have to," said Haines. After learning the music by heart, the singers master the steps that accompany the music.

Stevenson said being in Scarlet and Gray can be a challenge. "Our task is to make 20 people do the same thing at the same time." This means keeping the face expressive as well as the body in motion. He said choir members often coach one another in small groups.

Gallagher said a special factor in handling Scarlet and Gray is its small size. Stevenson said members must sing with the force of soloists to project the volume necessary and yet be able to blend as members of a group.

The shows this weekend consist of two acts. Haines said the group uses two kinds of costumes to reflect the difference between the acts.

For various elevations, the choir uses square blocks of different heights, he said.

The first act he described as "a collegiate Scarlet and Gray — strait-laced." He said the show then becomes more "glitzy." The opener for the second act will include tap dancing, a first for the choir.

The act will include "Everything Old and New." Gallagher said this medley of popular tunes from the early 1900s to 1980 is a favorite for the audience, because people know what is being sung and give a warm response. Stevenson said the choir also enjoys this arrangement and learning the period dance genres it involves.

Pimsler comes to Drake

By Kathy Gruber
Lantern staff writer

The Stuart Pimsler Dance Theater will present three new dance works along with two repertoire pieces at the Drake Union this weekend.

Stuart Pimsler, artistic director, describes his work as a blend of dance and drama in the theater tradition.

"The audience sees trained dancers dressed as people speaking modern, pedestrian vocabulary," he said.

Pimsler said he hopes the audience will leave the show with something, through the dance/theater technique, that they recognize from their own world.

Both he and Suzanne Costello, associate artistic director, perform with the company.

The production will premiere Pimsler's "Islands," a work commissioned by the Contemporary Dance Theater of Cincinnati. Five dancers dressed in swimsuits and evening wear move past each other on mats made of folded cardboard boxes, said Costello.

"The work examines the everyday desolation prevalent in society," she said. "Everyone's on their own territory."

Dancers from the Contemporary Dance Theater will make a special appearance for the piece, Costello said.

"Treasure," also a premiere work, functions as a companion work for "Islands," she said. In "Treasure," the cardboard boxes are open and only three people are dancing.

Janet Parrott, a graduate student in film and cinematography, makes her first appearance with the Pimsler Dance Theater in the piece. She will join Pimsler and Costello in the number.

"My character (in "Treasure") is very hard to define — it's sort of a confused character," Parrott said. "Parts of the character are me and other parts are not me at all."

The Dance Theater will also present "Blue" and "A man. A woman," which premiered in Columbus last December.

Pimsler moved his Dance Theater from New York City to Denison University in Granville to serve as faculty and company-in-residence. As of next year they will be fully based in Columbus, he said.

Concerts to liven spring

By Katy Delaney
Lantern staff writer

WOSR kicks off its Spring Concert series Saturday at the Mirror Lake Amphitheater with the Richard P. Boals Rhythm and Blues Band, and The Beetkeepers.

The series continues for 10 weeks with two bands playing at each concert featuring a wide selection of bands for all musical tastes. Styles will include rhythm and blues, jazz, rockabilly, reggae and acoustic rock.

Most of the bands are from Columbus but some come from Cleveland, Athens and Kent.

One band from Athens, the Saffarions, plays music that they call "vine-swingin' psychedelic safari jungle music."

A second show on Sunday will include Irie, and upcoming weeks will bring bands such as the Object, Harvest, the Columbus Jets, T.C. and the Cats, Eurogression, the Swimmers, First Light, The Black Hole Jokers and many more.

This is the second spring concert series in addition to a series held last fall. It gives people a chance to see local bands, take a break from the bar scene and enjoy spring weather, said Packy Malley, WOSR disc jockey and coordinator of the series.

Malley, who will emcee the shows, financed the show through local merchants on High Street.

"This year we've got more shows and twice as many bands. It's a hot event. I had some bands just call and ask when I could schedule them," he said.

All shows are free and are from 2 p.m. until 8 p.m.

Have a meaningful relationship this summer.

Sun rising on Northwestern's lakefront campus

Quick. What do George Balanchine and Margaret Mead have in common? Good question, right? Yesterday lunchtime got into a long conversation about it with a guy taking a course here at NU called ethnography of performance. Sure beats over an hour. Sure beats usual summer drive about tan lines. Mine's good by the way.

Youth is theme as ballet opens

By Kathy Gruber
Lantern staff writer

The innocence and wonderment of childhood; the stormy transition into adolescence; the nurturing attitude of adults towards children.

These are the basic ideas artistic director John McFall had in mind when he created his new ballet, "Chrysalis." The ballet will make its world premiere in "Spring Awakening," presented by BalletMet.

The ballet is set to the music of Paul Hindemith's 1944 work, "Metamorphosis." "I had an idea for a ballet with youngsters, and this music is ideal because it's very upbeat," McFall said.

McFall's premiere features eight dancers under 15 years old. The children are enrolled in the BalletMet Dance Academy.

The work consists of four movements. Each movement is unique and represents a phase in the experience of growing up, McFall said.

He said although he wouldn't want to tell an audience how to interpret his ballet, a viewer could come away with three different experiences.

"The aspects of being a young person, or an adult remembering their youth, or the adults and youngsters interacting together" are strong themes in the piece, he said.

For instance, in the third movement, a young dancer does a series of movements where she seems to be exploring her world. Three adult dancers lift and carry her throughout the movement in a display of nurturing and reinforcement.

"When she climbs on the dancer's shoulder, nothing happens to her... the adults are always there for reinforcement and security," McFall said.

McFall finds working with the children highly rewarding.

"You spend time with the young dancers and find out how artistic they are," he said. "They pick it up so quickly — they're just like sponges."

Keith Saunders, one of the adult dancers in the company, says he admires the commitment and maturity of the younger dancers. "John has treated the kids as professionals, and they have responded as such," he said.

But good dancing alone, McFall said, by no means makes up the total work. "Any ballet is the result of a lot of collaboration," he said.

He stresses that the right lighting and stage lay out are also important factors for setting the proper mood.

Dain Marcus, costume and set designer for "Chrysalis," said simplicity of costume and set is mixed with the intricacy of the music and the theater itself.

Marcus said he has designed sets all over the world, and is impressed with the Ohio Theatre.

"With very modern, very crisp music and a fantastically ornate theater, the setting should be very sharp and simple to add contrast," he said.

The set consists of two pieces of white fabric stretched across a dark background and above the stage. The dancers wear simple, brightly colored tights and T-shirts.

Daren Savage and Sara Rothrock, left, and Sonia Welker and Ethan Stiefel perform in John McFall's world premiere of "Chrysalis," which runs through Saturday at the Ohio Theatre.

"Chrysalis" was conceived and designed specifically for the BalletMet. The company holds exclusive rights to the work, McFall said.

"Spring Awakening" will also feature repertoire pieces from BalletMet, including Marius Petipa's "Paquita," George Balanchine's "Allegro Brillante" and Jose Limon's "The Unsung."

Evening performances of "Spring Awakening" begin at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, with a Saturday matinee beginning at 2 p.m. at the Ohio Theatre.

Tickets are available at the Ohio Theatre Box Office and at all Central Ticket Office locations. Seat prices range from $6 to $21.

California mimes speak through satire

By Sarah L. Christian
Lantern staff writer

Political intrigue, terrorism, a string of mysterious murders, singing and dancing — You can find all these at the Martin Luther King Center for the Performing Arts this weekend.

The San Francisco Mime Troupe will be performing their latest effort, "The Mozamagola Marsalis to perform"

Trumpet virtuoso Wynton Marsalis who will be appearing Sunday at 7:30 p.m. at the Ohio Theatre, 55 E. State St., sports a phenomenal list of musical accomplishments. They range from performing with the New Orleans Philharmonic at age 14 to becoming the only man in history to receive a Grammy Award for best jazz album ("Think of One") and for best classical album ("Haydn/Hummel/L. Mozart Trumpet Concertos") in the same year, 1984.

Performing before Marsalis will be another Grammy Award winner, solo jazz vocalist Bobby McFerrin who is renowned for singing in the voice of many instruments such as a saxophone and a lead guitar.

Tickets for the Wynton Marsalis and Bobby McFerrin Jazz Session are $15 and available at all CTO outlets and the Ohio Theatre box office, 39 E. State St.

Caper," at 8 p.m. Saturday.

Don't go expecting mime in the traditional Marcel Marceau fashion. The troupe started out in mime and progressed into a singing, dancing, and acting group. They kept the name because that's how they were already known, said Joan Holden a playwright for the group.

The cast takes a satirical look at issues in South Africa and the troubles of the people and government that interweave with U.S. covert action in the Third World.

The story focuses on the tangled loyalties and boundaries of the new South African state Mozamagola, parodying the complicated ties that bind governments and people in the country.

The play, written by Joan Holden, John O'Neal and Robert Alexander, begins in a Harlem bar. Here former CIA agent Regretta Johnson is persuaded by her old boss to take one last assignment.

The assignment leads her to Africa to protect Bishop Desmond Tata and to spy on her ex-lover, who is now the Marxist president of Mozamagola, and possibly an assassin out to murder Tata.

Six actors portray more than 20 characters in a performance filled with action.

"The characters are very distinct," Holden said, "(One performer playing many roles) is our trademark, but you can't get them confused."

The mime troupe was formed 25 years ago starting as street players. "They started out performing in parks and streets," Doyle said, "Now they travel all over the world."

Water polo club takes third

By Eric E. Heckelman
Lantern staff writer

The Ohio State Men's Water Polo Club made waves over spring break, finishing third among 10 teams which competed in the International Swimming Hall of Fame Water Polo Tournament in Ft. Lauderdale.

Team captain Ken Zak said the strong finish may help earn the Buckeyes invitations to the Outdoor Nationals, held in Southern California in August, and the Indoor Nationals, held in Florida in October. The club has never received an invitation to either tournament.

Zak stressed the importance of the third place finish to the team, which was seeded fifth. "That has given us the initial recognition," he said. "It has given us a little notoriety."

We've advanced to another level with that tournament (finish), he said.

The club won tournament games against Orlando, North Miami Beach, Florida State University and the University of Minnesota. A 12-6 loss to first place finisher Chicago and a 13-10 setback to runner-up University of Miami (Florida) were the only two losses the team suffered.

A controversial call late in the Miami game which went against the Bucks may have affected the outcome, according to Zak. "The ref later admitted it (the call) was a screw-up," he said.

Miami placed second in the 1986 Indoor Nationals, finishing behind the Olympic Club, a team consisting of ex-Olympic players.

The game against Chicago was the only contest the Buckeyes played badly in, according to Zak. "We played pretty poorly against them," he said. "It was the one game we felt we didn't play well."

Zak pointed out that Chicago was a club team, comprised of older, more experienced players than those playing at Ohio State, a university team made up of students and alumni. In fact, most of the teams that competed in the tournament were club teams.

"Club teams are usually stronger than university teams," Zak said. "It was a real strong field."

Members of the Hungarian National Team, the Cuban National Team and Olympic players competed for various clubs in the tournament. "Our guys were playing against guys who are legends in their own countries, and we played up to their caliber," Zak said.

Zak, who plays offensive center and wing, led OSU scorers with 22 goals in six tournament games. Wing Jim Roberts scored 15 goals.

The Bucks' "ability to contain the other teams scorers" was a significant factor in the team's success," Zak said. He complimented driver Quinn Guist, defensive guard Mark Stephen and driver/defensive center guard Scott Clines on their defensive performances.

The Buckeyes host the Ohio Spring Invitational this weekend at the varsity pool in Larkins Hall. The University of Cincinnati, Cleveland State University, the University of Michigan and Slippery Rock College are participating. Games begin at 7 p.m. Friday and 9 a.m. Saturday. Admission is free.

OSU lacrosse loses to Denison

By Betsy Bohner
Lantern staff writer

After an outstanding performance, the OSU lacrosse team lost 8-7 in overtime to Denison University Wednesday night.

The Bucks lead in scoring for the entire game until the bottom of the fourth quarter when Denison tied the game with less than 50 seconds left on the clock.

Going into overtime, with 53 seconds remaining, Denison's freshman attacker Dave Smethurst, scored to lead his team to victory.

"Ohio State deserved to win," said Denison's head coach Tommy Thomsen after the game.

"They (OSU) out-hustled, out-balled and out-coached us. We were very lucky to win the ball game," Thomsen said.

Fred Koval, OSU's head coach, said this game showed a better team effort and demonstrated very little weakness compared to the game Ohio State lost to Michigan State earlier in the season.

Koval said Tim Achatz, the team's freshman goalie, played his best game ever and said that he was also pleased with Tim McCabe's performance. McCabe, a sophomore, plays an attacker position.

There were some technical problems during the game because the electrician who was supposed to set up the public address system and the communication system between the scoreboard keepers and the statisticians did not show up, but the game continued with minor difficulties.

"I was happy with the teams performance but unhappy with the outcome of the game," Koval said. "We are a young team consisting primarily of freshman and must learn that the game still comes down to the final crunch time which determines the final score."

The Buckeyes' record is 2-4. The OSU lacrosse team will face Ohio Wesleyan in Delaware on Saturday. The next home game for the Buckeye's is at 7:30 p.m. April 17 against Lake Forest in Ohio Stadium.

Williams' recruits look promising

By Roger McNeal
Lantern staff writer

Ohio State basketball fans can finally begin to see Gary Williams' first recruiting class; it has a list of three high school all-Americans and the possible addition of a junior-college all-American.

Wednesday was the first day for high school basketball players to sign letters of intent. Ohio State has two scholarships remaining for next season. Two players were committed last fall during the early signing period in November.

Heading the list of signees is Perry Carter, of Pittsfield, Maine. Carter verbally committed to the university on March 10, but has not yet signed.

A 6-foot-8 power forward, Carter averaged 24.3 points and 18.7 rebounds per game for Maine Central Institute in Pittsfield. MCI is a postgraduate program which is similar to a prep school.

Carter chose Ohio State over other schools because of its high academic standards. "Perry is very concerned with gaining a degree," said Don Rick, Perry's junior high coach and closest friend. "Ohio State is getting a very special young man, he's extraordinary. He is very physical, mobile and loves to play an inside game. He also has strong work ethics. He will fit into Williams' style of play very well," Rick said.

Rick said that Perry feels he won't have to carry a load like Dennis Hopson had to because of the other players that Ohio State has for next year.

The other scholarship has not been awarded, but the leading candidate is junior-college all-American Rudy Archer.

Archer is a 6-1 point guard from Allegany Community College in Cumberland, Md. He averaged 19.0 points and 13.8 assists per game in leading his team to a 38-3 record.

Archer has delayed his decision until May because he has just started to visit the schools. He has narrowed his choices to Ohio State, Maryland, Clemson, Wake Forest and West Virginia. Ohio State's final scholarship belongs to Archer if he wants it.

Another candidate was 6-4 shooting guard Kirk Taylor from Dayton Dunbar. Taylor averaged 25.6 points per game, was named to the AAA all-Ohio team and won the most valuable player honor in the state tournament while leading his team to a championship. Taylor, however, signed with Michigan.

If Archer signs along with Carter this spring, they will join two other high school all-Americans, who signed last fall, to cap off Gary Williams' first recruiting class at Ohio State.

The other all-Americans are 6-8 Cleveland St. Joseph forward Treg Lee and 6-3 Columbus Wehrle guard Eli Brewster. Both were named player-of-the-year in their respective classes, AAA and A.

Lee and Carter will team up to provide support for the inside game. Junior center John Anderson, last season's starting center, said it will be very competitive inside. "I'm looking forward to playing with them. If they can come in and work like everyone else they will really help us out."

Three more newcomers will help provide straight to next year's team. Two of the newcomers transferred from other schools and one was ineligible because of grades.

Last year, 7-0 center Grady Mateen transferred from Georgetown; In January, 6-1 Beechcroft guard James Bradley transferred from Miami University. Also, 6-6 forward-guard Randy Doss, from Chicago, was a victim of NCAA Proposition 48, a minimum entrance requirement.

Gary Williams is out of town and could not be reached for comment.

Dodgers' Campanis regrets statements

Associated Press

HOUSTON (AP) — Al Campanis, vice president of player personnel for the Los Angeles Dodgers, resigned Wednesday at the request of the team following his statement that blacks may not be qualified for high-level jobs in baseball.

Upon arrival Wednesday afternoon at Los Angeles International Airport from Houston, where the Dodgers opened the season against the Astros, Campanis called his resignation "something that I think that had to be done for the good of the club and for all concerned. That's all I've got to say."

"Comments given by Al Campanis are so far removed from what the organization believes that it is impossible for Al to continue his responsibilities," Dodgers President Peter O'Malley said after breaking the news to the 70-year-old Campanis.

Campanis had been in charge of player personnel since 1968 and a member of the Dodgers' organization since 1943 in capacities ranging from player to vice president. Fred Claire, the Dodgers' executive vice president, will assume the player personnel duties.

Campanis was asked Monday night on ABC's "Nightline" about the paucity of blacks in baseball front offices and as managers.

"I don't believe it's prejudice," Campanis said. "I truly believe that they may not have some of the necessities to be, let's say, a field manager, or perhaps a general manager ...

"I don't say all of them, but how many quarterbacks do you have? How many pitchers do you have that are black? So, it just might be — why are black men, or black people, not good swimmers? Because they don't have the buoyancy?"

Campanis apologized Tuesday for the remarks, calling the incident "the saddest of my career." But O'Malley said he thought about the situation all night and decided to ask for the resignation Wednesday, calling it "the only proper and appropriate thing to do."

Dodgers Manager Tom Lasorda broke into tears as he talked to reporters at the Houston Astrodome.

"This is a sad day for baseball," Lasorda said. "Al is like my brother and father combined. He made a mistake and it cost him, but I guess Peter felt like he had to make this decision."

Buckeye right hander David Burba came within one out of accomplishing what every pitcher dreams of — throwing a no-hitter — in OSU's 2-0 victory in the first game of a doubleheader Wednesday against the University of Toledo.

Ohio State also won the second game 3-2 to raise their record to 7-6, as freshman pitcher Carl Myers threw a four-hitter.

Burba's no-hitter came to an end with two out in the bottom of the seventh (doubleheaders consist of two seven inning games) as Rockets' centerfielder Tom Marsh singled up the middle. OSU shortstop Scott Meadows was able to field the ball, but his throw pulled first baseman Pat Thompson off the bag.

Burba retired the next batter to end the game and seal his one-hitter. He raised his record to 3-0 and leads Buckeye pitchers in innings pitched, with 27.1, while maintaining a 2.96 ERA.

The Buckeyes host Wright State in a Saturday doubleheader which begins at 1 p.m. Ohio State is on a three game winning streak and has won five out of their last six.

Medical college plans annual variety show

By Betsy Bohner
Lantern staff writer

Students and faculty of the College of Medicine are getting ready for their annual variety show.

This year's show has been extended to two evenings because last year's performance was sold out, said Jeannie Capella, a third-year medical student and director of the show.

The theme of the show is a take-off of the television series "St. Elsewhere" and is called "St. Tzagournis" after the dean of the college of medicine, Manuel Tzagournis, said Ann-Marie Campione, a second-year medical student and a volunteer on the show's publicity committee.

The show is kind of a play within a play, explained Campione. All the scenes have the characters preparing for a benefit show except for the final scene which is the opening night of the benefit and reflects back to the first scene.

Overhead costs such as the reception, programs, props and room rental were sponsored by various pharmaceutical companies, Capella said.

The auditions for the show were very competitive with over 40 acts to choose from, Campione said.

The judges for the audition included Cappella, a first-year and a second-year medical student who had some background in the arts.

The show will include 17 students' acts and four faculty acts, Capella said.

She said the show is expected to last two and a half to three hours and she is hoping to see 350 or more people come to the show each night. Proceeds from the show will go to the Columbus Free Clinic.

The show is at 7 p.m. today and Saturday in the Fawcett Center for Tomorrow's main auditorium.

Tickets are $4 and can be purchased at the door or by calling the medical college administration office at 292-5674.
