Proposed bill calls for work in exchange for student aid

By Tomoko Kotaka
Lantern staff writer

Bills introduced to Congress requiring students to perform a minimum of one year of civil-service for financial aid have been met with mixed reviews since January.

But Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Georgia, and Rep. David McCurdy, D-Okla., are still standing firm in support of their legislation.

LeeAnn Alexander, legislative aide for McCurdy, said that under the new bills students would be required to commit one or two years of civil-service duty in order to receive aid.

Students would then get a voucher from the government that is designed primarily to cover education costs, Alexander said. She said the only exception would be if the recipient wished to use the voucher as a downpayment on a house.

Janet Lieberman, the legislative director for the United States Student Association, an organization that lobbies on the behalf of students, said the bills are not fair to students. She said the legislation leaves poor students with no choice but to work for a year to receive money.

Surgeons donate services, save Guyana woman's arm

By Cynthia Hall Henderson
Lantern staff writer

Two surgeons worked together at University Hospital Monday to donate their time and services to save a South American woman's arm.

Weis said such a tumor is rarely found in someone of Casey's age. They are primarily found in people between 40 and 50 years old.

Weis said Casey was born with an underlying bone abnormality, from which she had a number of small benign bone tumors. One of those tumors was diagnosed to be cancerous.

Casey said she noticed a swelling in her left shoulder about two years ago. Doctors at Georgetown Public Hospital were unable to surgically remove all of the tumor, so Casey was treated with radiation and chemotherapy which was also unsuccessful.

"I was not told that the tumor was malignant," Casey said, "until a doctor at the (Georgetown Outpatient) clinic told me my only hope was to get out of the country to get some help."

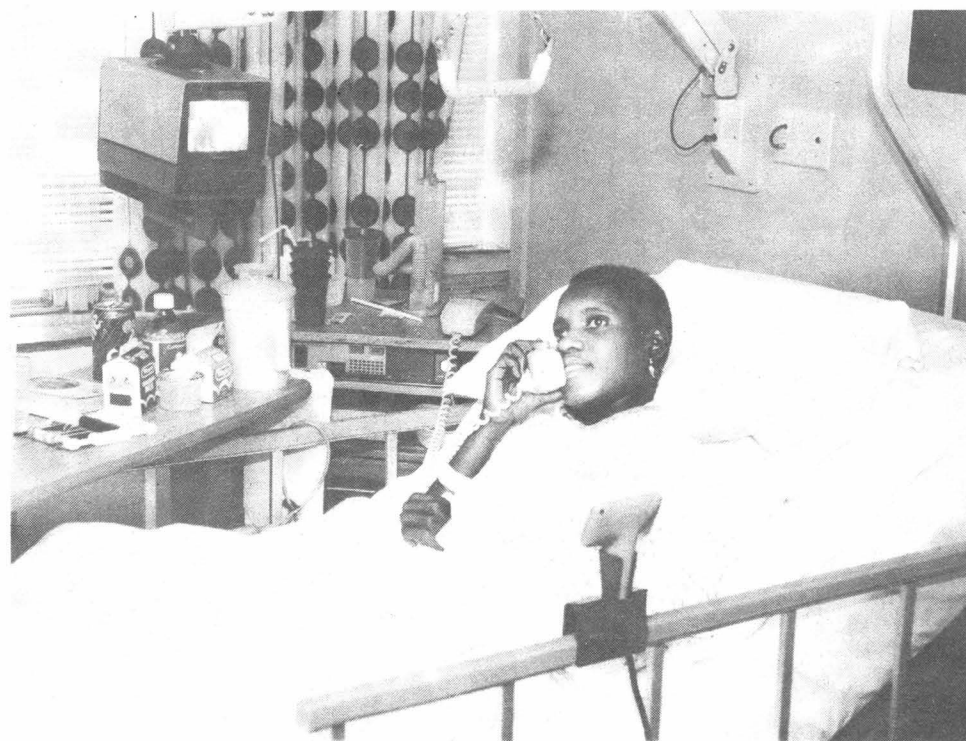

Doctors at Georgetown Public Hospital decided her arm would have to be amputated, and had scheduled the surgery for October 1988. The operation was to coincide with the arrival of a team of American doctors in Guyana that gives free medical aid to the country each year.

Porter was among the U.S. doctors to arrive in Guyana for Donors and Workers Now, an organization based in Savannah, Ga. that donates two weeks a year to treating patients at the DAWN Clinic in Georgetown.

Porter said he thought Casey's arm might not have to be amputated. He arranged for her to travel to Columbus and be examined by Weis, who agreed that her arm could be saved.

"I am happy and thankful to the hospital and to have a chance at life again," Casey said.

She said that without her arm she would have lost her job. Casey and her daughter then would have been dependent on Casey's mother for financial support.

Monica Casey, 23, relaxes in her hospital room after undergoing an operation to remove a cancerous tumor from her left shoulder. Casey was flown to University Hospitals from Georgetown, Guyana, specifically for the operation.

Stonewall Union blasts proposed adoption bill

By Jeffrey Brodeur
Lantern staff writer

A bill prohibiting homosexuals from adopting children or being foster parents was introduced in the Ohio Senate Thursday, with immediate protest from members of the gay community.

Sen. Gary Suhadolnik, R-Parma Heights, said he introduced the bill because he was concerned with the well-being of Ohio's adoptive children.

"I want to do what's best for the children," he said. "It is in the best interest of the child to be placed in a family setting with traditional role models, a mother and a father."

Suhadolnik said homosexual couples cannot provide the type of family structure needed by children.

"In this day and age, many communities do not accept homosexuality," he said. "Therefore, if children are placed with a homosexual couple, they will run a higher risk of added emotional trauma in terms of community acceptance."

Jerry Bunge, treasurer of the Stonewall Political Action Committee, called Suhadolnik's charges "outrageous."

"This bill is a piece of irresponsible legislation by an insensitive opponent," he said.

Bunge said thousands of children are raised by gays and lesbians each year, most growing up with no problems.

"The children of gays and lesbians tend to be more stable and self-confident when they grow up because they learn from the animosity they sometimes face," Bunge said.

He also said the children of gays and lesbians are less likely to grow up to be gay than their heterosexual counterparts.

Suhadolnik said even though judges are already reluctant to place children in the homes of homosexuals, the bill would give them strict guidelines.

"What we'll have is a precedent for the judges in the state, an ounce of prevention," Suhadolnik said.

Bunge said the more he thought about Suhadolnik's legislation, the angrier it made him.

"What he doesn't realize is that

Parking plans reviewed

By Lynnette Klessig

A pedestrian campus is not in the immediate future for Ohio State, but new parking options are being considered, said the assistant vice president for facilities and planning.

"For every action there is an opposite reaction," David Marsh said at the monthly faculty senate committee meeting Thursday afternoon.

Marsh said the repercussions of removing cars from campus needs to be looked at in an objective manner before any recommendations are made.

Caleb Brunson, director of traffic and parking, said the committee must look ahead five, 10 or even 15 years to see what the needs of the campus will be at that time.

"In the past, we have approached every panic situation with a Band-Aid, and now we have run out of Band-Aids," Brunson said. "We need to look down the road and see what the demographics are going to be and what we're going to need then."

Three different plans for a solution to long-range parking problems were also discussed at the meeting.

Maintaining the current decal system with some refinements, designing a system of assigned parking lots and developing an economically grouped system in which parking spaces closer to campus are more expensive, were among the options being researched by the committee, Marsh said.

Marsh said he hopes to have

Vets commission sets rules

By Tara Anne Powers
Lantern staff writer

For the first time in the 103-year history of the Veterans Service Commission, formal guidelines are being established for the release of funds.

Suggested plans to develop application guidelines for the Veterans Service Commission's emergency relief fund were recorded Thursday.

Arthur Sprankel, executive secretary and director of the commission, recorded the suggestions of Franklin County Common Pleas judges and Vietnam veterans at the first case hearing for emergency relief applicants since Tuesday's review.

The commission awards emergency financial relief grants to needy veterans and helps them obtain aid from other agencies.

John Flinn, office manager of the central Ohio chapter of the Vietnam Veterans of America, said the review and the media attention seems to have had some effect on the commission.

"I think if you would listen to the tapes before (the judges were asked to listen to veteran complaints), and the tapes after (the review), you would see a big difference," Flinn said.

A veteran, denied three times by the Veterans Service Commission, was awarded about $1,200 Thursday because he finally produced enough documentation to prove he needed financial aid.

"I asked what was the criteria before," the veteran said. "When I was denied, that was what tells me I don't meet the criteria."

Because the veteran did not know what documentation was needed and had no official guidelines to follow, his case has continued for months.

"If I hadn't been denied before I wouldn't be in this situation," the veteran said.

Although Flinn noted some changes and improvements in the way the commission handled the cases, he said his optimism is tempered with the way the system has been run in the past.

"It seems like he (Sprankel) is taking a new step toward cooperation, but we'll still be keeping an eye on the commission," Flinn said.

The commission said they would act on the suggestions to improve the relief funding program.

The suggestions are:
• agree to work with county prosecutors to establish guidelines

The Last Days of Elvis weather

Elvis awoke on the floor. He had a rumpled red mark on his face from where the plush shag carpet had dug into his cheek and forehead. He didn't remember how he got there, but then again, Elvis hadn't remembered much from the past few weeks.

He got up and made a little breakfast consisting of two dozen creme-filled Long Johns and a great big peanut butter and banana sandwich.

He was wearing only a diaper, which was in need of a change. He looked down at his toenails, which had curled under since it had been so long since . . .

Enough is enough. The weather censors have terminated this report due to a general disregard of one of the greatest American singers of all-time. This is a disgrace. Pick on someone or something a little more socially relevant like Wade Boggs, Barbara Bush and her puppies or Madonna's big mouth. Geez, you really have some nerve. Now just tell us the weather.

IT WILL BE SUNNY THIS MORNING BEFORE CLOUDING OVER IN THE AFTERNOON. THE HIGH WILL BE NEAR 65. THERE IS A CHANCE OF EVENING SHOWERS, THE LOW WILL BE NEAR 40. GUSTY WINDS ARE POSSIBLE - HUBBA, HUBBA.

Yippie leader dies at 52

NEW YORK (AP) — Abbie Hoffman, the Yippie who clung to his '60s ideals amid an onslaught of the '80s yuppieism, was remembered Thursday as a radical and a joker who could provoke a laugh even as he outraged and informed.

"It's like a hallucination," Jerry Rubin said of Hoffman's death. "I still don't believe it, frankly. I still think it's an Abbie media event."

Hoffman, 52 and still anti-establishment as ever, died peacefully in his bed Wednesday, according to Michael Waldron, his landlord in New Hope, Pa. An autopsy was scheduled to determine the cause of death.

Rubin, who co-founded the Youth International Party with Hoffman during the heyday of drugs, sex, rock 'n' roll and pie-throwing, said that "Abbie was a very, very serious person. But he did it all with a smile."

"During the Chicago (Seven) trial, he got the prosecution laughing, he got the judge laughing, he got the jury laughing — he blew kisses to the jury. He was extremely disarming," said Rubin, now an entrepreneur.

His hair a tangle of long, wild curls, Hoffman could be seen with the word "FREE" written on his forehead. He was arrested 42 times, the last two years ago when he protested CIA recruitment at the University of Massachusetts.

In a satiric gesture, he threw dollar bills on the floor of the American Stock Exchange in the late '60s, and people scrambled to pick them up. He went on television in the early '70s and talked about censorship, while his upper body was blacked out because he was wearing an American flag shirt.

He wrote books "Revolution for the Hell of It" and "Steal This Book."

"He was always thinking ahead and always laughing," said folk singer Pete Seeger, who most recently worked with Hoffman on environmental causes.

Hoffman's chutzpah also carried him through 6½ years on the run.

In September 1980, he turned himself in to New York authorities on a 1973 charge of selling 3 pounds of cocaine. For three years, he had lived as screenwriter Barry Freed in Fineview, N.Y. — playing on a softball team against the U.S. Customs Service and speaking on local television and radio shows about environmental issues.

As Freed, he even testified before Senate subcommittee hearings — and posed for a picture with an unaware Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan.

"The humor promoted the message," said fellow '60s denizen Mark Rudd, now an author and lecturer living in Albuquerque, N.M. "He was a genius at crystalizing people's feelings."

"Once, in 1968, we are at a movement conference that was getting too serious. He got up while I was talking and put on a great show of skill with his electric yo-yo."

But there was a darker side, as well.

Friends reported that Hoffman had seemed depressed before his death, according to Bucks County District Attorney Alan M. Rubenstein.

"A longterm depression was the flip side of his high. The thing about Abbie is that he was a visionary, possibly because he was manic-depressive," Rudd said.

"He was 52 years old and I think he gave up," said his brother, Jack Hoffman, of Framingham, Mass. "I know he was disappointed in the young people of today. He didn't feel he was getting through to them. He was disenchanted."

"The question of disillusionment? Never, never, never," Rudd said. "He had never given up."

The more fortunate students that can afford the cost of higher education can choose whether or not they want to participate in the program, she said.

"The bill is going to be overhauling the whole student aid system," she said. "Previously, we had a need-based system that allowed students that needed the aid to get it. We didn't have strings tied to it."

Alexander said the proposed bills would affect more than just the lower class.

"There's the entire middle class section (that doesn't) make enough money to pay for the education, but also makes too much money to be eligible for federal funding."

Mary Haldane, director of financial aid at Ohio State, said most current financial aid programs adequately provide students with funding. A change in the current financial aid system could be beneficial, but not necessary, she said.

"We have some programs that have been helping students through college for a number of years," she said. "While there may be some parts (in the financial aid system) broken, I would not say there are major changes that have to be made to make it work."

Alexander said with these bills, a student could earn $10,000 per year for a maximum of two years, provided the student is working full time in community service for that year.

Alexander said there are other bills similar to the Nunn-McCurdy bills in the process of being passed that would not force a student to commit to working full time. These bills would allow students to work on a part-time basis.

She said these programs would replace the federal funding program for all students between the ages of 18 and 26 who are requesting federal financial aid.

However, Alexander said if a student needed additional aid, he or she could apply for state and private loans.

The exception to this program would be a person who is incapable of public service such as the physically or mentally handicapped, or what the bill defines as "compelling personal circumstances," Alexander said. She said personal compelling circumstances would include family situations such as size and income that would make living on the limited weekly income virtually impossible.

If it is impossible to perform the required mandatory service for one of those reasons, a student may apply for the existing funds, Alexander said.

According to Lieberman, the default rate of student loans is not increasing. She said it appears to be growing because students are not getting enough money.

She said this causes students to take out bigger loans, and therefore, the dollar amount of the deficit appears much larger than it is.

Haldane said OSU's default rate was 2.65 percent in 1988. This means 97.35 percent of OSU students are paying back loans.

She said the national default rate was 13 percent in 1988.

Alexander said the legislation would help decrease the student loan default rate, which was about $1.6 billion last year.

She said if the bills are passed and a student is currently enrolled in a federal student loan program, the student is exempt from the civil service requirements.

"A lot of these (jobs) would be in child care needs, literacy training, conservation efforts, care for the elderly, care for the handicapped — anywhere there is not currently a group of people able to address these needs," Alexander said.

The civil service employment would require students to work one or two years at a full-time job, then attend school.

"Unless one participates in night school, then this is intended to be an earned benefit type program," Alexander said. "You do your service and then you receive the benefits."

There is also a military service option which would require two years of active duty for which the student would receive $12,000 at the end of each year, Alexander said. The student would live on the base and receive two-thirds of basic military pay, she said.

The amount of money the person earns through the Nunn-McCurdy legislation is the same for all students regardless of the school they choose, Alexander said. If someone decides to attend an expensive university and uses the money up in his first year, then he or she could apply for state funding, she said.

Alexander said this program would be beneficial to all students because it would make financial aid equitable for all socio-economic classes.

"The average Pell Grant in 1989 is roughly $1,400, which means over four years only $5,600," Alexander said. "We're talking about a minimum voucher of $10,000."

Haldane said postponing college to work for financial aid might enable some students to appreciate the importance of higher education.

two or three of the plans refined by the middle of May. This way people's reactions can be heard at the next public hearing.

"By the end of spring quarter I would hope we would be able to zero in on one particular recommendation," Marsh said. "Then it could be more fully developed over the summer so that by next autumn we would be able to come back with a plan that is more reasonably complete."

Barbara Thomson, chairwoman of the faculty senate committee and associate professor of science and education, said Marsh has approached the research aspect of his planning in an excellent manner by including people from all aspects of campus, as well as the local public.

David Todd, accounting clerk for romance languages, presented three questions before the committee, including putting another access gate to the Cunz Hall parking area.

Thomson said a possibility of giving access to this area has been discussed and is still under consideration.

Brunson said such a gate would cost anywhere from $4,000 to $8,000. These expenses are currently paid directly by traffic and parking, but the committee is trying to change this method of payment, he said.

Todd also asked whether there would be any possibility of reallocating some parking spaces during the summer months, when there are not as many student spaces needed.

This point has never been brought up before, but it is something that should definitely be looked into, Brunson said. He said the committee will need to look at summer enrollment figures in order to determine whether this suggestion would be feasible.

without gay and lesbian parents, many of these children wouldn't be adopted," Bunge said.

Chris Cozad, president of the Columbus chapter of Stonewall Union, said Suhadolnik has had conflicts with the gay community before.

"He was against the Hobson AIDS bill, but was beaten, so we're hoping for the same success with this issue," she said.

Cozad said the Stonewall PAC would be meeting in the next few days to plot opposition to the bill.

Suhadolnik said he was not adverse to taking on different, often controversial issues.

"In my heart, I know Ohio should adopt this legislation," he said. "If others don't support the bill, they obviously favor putting children in the homes."

Bunge said he would like to see the bill "die a quiet death."

"We don't want to fuel the fire by reacting quickly, but we'll watch carefully and if there is any activity, we'll be there," Bunge said.

Drug cases clog judicial system

By Melissa Eisen
Lantern staff writer

The Chief Justice of the Ohio Supreme Court said he wants federal funds for speeding up drug cases in the state's justice system.

Thomas Moyer said drug cases make up between 25 to 40 percent of the caseload of large general jurisdiction courts in Ohio.

Stephan W. Stover, administrative director of the Supreme Court, said Thursday he has sent letters encouraging judges of Common Pleas Courts in Ohio to request grants of up to $200,000 from the U.S. Department of Justice.

But James Kura, public defender for Franklin County, said he does not think $200,000 would be enough money to reduce problems associated with the heavy drug caseload.

Kura said even if $200,000 is granted, the changes this amount of money could produce would not be noticeable.

When the courts are overloaded with drug cases, Kura said, more courtrooms, judges, and lawyers are needed. He said jails become overcrowded and additional cells are needed.

He said federal grants are an unreliable source of funding because they can vary in amount from year to year.

Martin Feldmann, assistant administrator at the Franklin County Prosecutor's Office, said he thinks the grants are worthwhile.

He said drug-related indictments are up substantially this year, but did not know exactly how many more drug indictments were made in the first few months of 1989 compared to 1988.

Feldmann said it is often a long time from the initial arrest to the closing of a drug case because evidence may be analyzed at a lab for three or four months.

He said there is no set time for drug cases to go through the court system because each case is unique.

The volume of drug cases in courts will be discussed at the "Big Nine" conference in Philadelphia on April 21 to 22. The states represented are Ohio, New Jersey, New York, California, Florida, Michigan, Texas and Illinois.

Judge Charles R. Petree of the Franklin County Juvenile Court will attend the conference.

Petree said the purpose of attending is to get ideas from other states on how to deal with the number of drug cases. He said he hopes to find out which state is coping best with drug cases, and what Ohio can do to improve the situation.

Professor fights drugs worldwide

By Rebecca Snyder
Lantern staff writer

An OSU professor, who also is a nun, travels around the world to help combat the problem of alcohol and drug abuse.

Elizabeth Burns, professor of nursing and psychiatry, has dedicated her life to helping others by working to prevent alcohol and drug abuse. Although she is involved with many organizations in the United States, her work does not stop here.

Burns has been involved with various international programs and has gone to a number of countries in Africa to set up programs for the prevention and treatment of alcohol and drug abuse. She will talk about her experiences today at noon in Newton Hall Room 172.

"Alcohol is a serious problem in Africa," Burns said.

Although alcohol is the most widely abused drug in Africa, there is a significant number of people who are affected by other drugs, she said.

Even though valid statistics are not available on the number of alcohol and drug abusers in Africa, it is a serious health care issue, Burns said.

Sue Rainey, office manager of the film library at the Columbus Area Council of Alcoholism, said alcohol and drug abuse has been a problem in the United States for years and today one out of three adults is an abuser.

"It (alcohol) is the most common drug and is most likely to be used with something else," Rainey said.

Alcoholism is an almost universal problem, but there are a few countries in which other drugs are used more frequently, Burns said.

For example, countries such as Malaysia have a problem with the abuse of drugs such as cocaine or heroin. She said, 80 percent of the drug abuse in Malaysia is heroin related.

Brian Mahoney, planning administrator at the Bureau of Alcoholism, said, the use of cocaine has been climbing in the United States in the past few years.

Although her speciality is in the prevention and treatment of drug abuse, Burns works internationally in many different areas of health care.

"I listen to what problems they have and try to help," Burns said.

When Burns was in Africa she gave lectures and created research workshops to increase the knowledge of the medical staff. She has tried to help them "practice nursing safely."

Drug abuse program needs funding

By Reggie Anglen
Lantern staff writer

If the Columbus Alcohol and Drug Abuse Program does not receive more funding, the city will probably lose the only place for indigent people to get out-patient care, said the administrator of the program.

Kirsten McCloud said the majority of clients are referred by the courts to the program because they were arrested for drunk driving.

"However, we do get a number of clients that are referred here by hotlines, their attorneys, family members and Children's Services," she said.

Last year 1,300 people were referred to the program and 850 received treatment.

The program, which is funded by client fees and the state, provides therapy for people convicted of alcohol or drug-related crimes and for people who seek help voluntarily.

Two city council members are now lobbying the council for $113,000 to keep the program operating.

Councilwomen Arlene Shoemaker and Cynthia Cecil Lazarus have asked the council to appropriate enough money to improve and expand the program.

"We're looking at what can be done on a very limited budget to the physical plant in order to provide privacy," said Shoemaker, who is chairwoman of the council's health committee. "I put a request in for financial help to get us off and running in some of our programs and that has been in front of the council's finance committee."

Shoemaker said she does not think the council will deny funding for the program.

"I think it is pretty high on the list for some of those dollars," she said. "It's a program that needs our attention."

Shoemaker said she does not know when the finance committee will submit the legislation to council.

Thomas Horan, assistant city health commissioner, said the Health Department made a request for funding the program in January.

"We anticipate that we'll be hearing as soon as the first financial review is completed by the city," he said. "We are still working from the standpoint of being optimistic that the funding will be there."

The program has nine counselors and three support staff.

POLICE:

Get rid of racism

While the city of Columbus is busy flaunting its rising skyscrapers, Chinese exhibits and cleanest-city awards, there appears to be something dirty about its police department — racism.

Columbus Police Chief Dwight D. Joseph concedes that a problem exists as a result of a "few" black and white bigots.

So this might lead one to think that the chief would take steps to get rid of the bag of bad apples that are stinking up the police department with the rotten odor of racism.

Apparently two federal judges learned that it is not that easy. When a U.S. District Court judge found the Chief's police division guilty of "widespread discrimination" in 1985, he probably thought that was that, that proper steps would be taken.

Now, four years and $2 million (in taxpayers' money) later, a second federal judge found that nothing had changed. In 1987 he issued a court order to remedy the situation, and in 1988, issued orders charging Chief Joseph with a lack of commitment and dragging his feet.

What's hard to understand is how are the actions of a "few" of the chief's men be allowed to cause the strife and embarrassment within the division and the blatant waste of the taxpayers' dollars.

It's no secret that police are sworn to a type of allegiance to their brothers in blue, but is it worth it when the integrity and the pocketbooks of Columbus' citizens are at stake?

Chief Joseph says "I can't control peoples' feelings but I can control their actions."

Darn right you can. You can quit sacrificing the well-being of an entire city for that of a "few" rotten apples.

Then you can get on with protecting it.

DENIALS:

Veterans deserve more

Vietnam Veterans are fighting a new battle — the discrimination of a local review board.

In the past year, the Veterans Service Commission has denied 391 claims for emergency relief requests. Because of this, some veterans aren't receiving the aid they're entitled to.

The commission awards emergency relief grants and helps applicants obtain aid from other agencies. Members of the Central Ohio chapter of Vietnam Veterans of America say the denials have no justification — they've been done arbitrarily and without guidelines.

The director of the commission summed up the numerous denials with, "everything is an emergency" to the veterans. But how does that solve the problem?

It is questionable, nonetheless, that out of eight employees, only one is a case investigator.

Perhaps the problem is also buried within the fact that there are no solid guidelines set for an effective veteran aid system. It is relatively difficult to follow nonexistent guidelines.

There is no policy that eliminates discussing personal details about each veteran from case hearings. An overall tightening of the commission in its procedures and employment standards is necessary if there is to be any substantial change.

The commission should take a long, hard look and decide on an effective set of guidelines for determining financial need. Unless a policy is established, the denials will keep coming.

Peace in OSU parking lots?

Parking an automobile in an OSU parking lot can be a very stressful situation almost every day of the week for legions of students. Any conversation between students that speaks of parking includes horror stories of verbal fights and disagreements in the lots over a parking space.

Anytime after 9 a.m. parking lot "vultures," as one student so succinctly called those students, begin the weekday custom of waiting for the prey: a student who comes to drive his car but of the lot. For every empty space is one or more cars waiting to fill it. For this space, or rental students pay $33 a year.

It takes me 80 to 90 minutes to arrive at a campus parking lot from my home in rural Coshocton County. The pleasant drive is over, however, once I come into the OSU area to park my car. It may easily be a half hour before a space is available and meanwhile, I have to make a decision about the situation.

The options open at this time are: drive around to the other lots to look for a spot; settle for a drive to the remote lot on west campus and then catch the buses for the main campus or simply miss the first class. I have done all three this quarter. None is pleasant.

Finding an answer to the dilemma is where the problem begins to surface. Any student in this situation needs to decide how late to be for class. A drive to the remote lot means parking the car, walking to the bus stop and waiting for the west campus bus to take another at the Coffey Road turnaround. This ride can easily tie-up 20 minutes of time for the one mile distance between the two campuses.

One could get to the first class sooner, but not necessarily on time, by waiting in a stadium lot. These spots are close to the buildings but students waiting for them must not expect a space any sooner than six minutes before the next class, and a walk or sprint to the building requires seven minutes.

I myself have tried coming into the area early, and often, unless I park in the remote lot, I have to wait until the class period is over for a space. Coming early, except very early, is not a guarantee that one will get the first parking space available. The law seems to be if one is sitting near the person who is pulling out of the lot, that lucky driver gets the space.

The traffic division at Ohio State says there are at least 8,844 parking spaces for students on this campus. For these spaces there are about 17,000 commuting students. Naturally, all will not be on the campus looking for parking at the same time, because, of course, all the classes for these commuters are not scheduled at the same time. So where is the problem?

The problem is, and I risk repeating myself, in timing. When one comes into the university area is the criteria that determines whether or not one has a space within minutes of driving into the lot. This does not mean students come into a parking lot, early in the morning, quickly find a place for their automobiles and then go off to their classes, being on time and relaxed. Not at all.

Having a space early in the morning only means that a student arrived earlier in the morning. Any student with a green parking sticker can park his car in the commuter lots as early as 5 a.m. He can settle down in the library until class time, or the student might find the lot a cozy spot for his car while he has his breakfast before class time.

These are guesses, of course. However, I have heard students admit to coming to the campus early in the morning hours before their class time for the express purpose of getting a parking space.

Really, this is alright. But what it means is that all commuter students who buy parking tickets do not have the same access to the lots and students pay the same rate for the space.

Those coming into the campus area after 8:30 a.m. will find themselves parking further and further away from the buildings. Then the choice is either park in one of the 1,863 spaces on the west campus lots or trust to luck to be in exactly the spot from which a student is leaving following his class.

I talked to one student last quarter who told me she left an hour and a half before class time from Newark for her noon. She said she parked in the remote lot because it was the only place to find an available space. Furthermore, she explained, it took an additional 30 minutes from that lot by bus to get to University Hall for class.

I thought about my friend and admired her for her diligence. However, I began thinking of her need to spend an extra half hour getting to class after she paid for her parking ticket — the same rate that all others pay. Her parking in the remote lot every day, and need for an extra 30 minutes for her to get to class bothered me.

Then the idea of a proximity rate for parking occurred to me. Surely, it would work. The faculty and staff pay a proximity rate. The closer one may park his car to the main campus and therefore to the college buildings, the more one pays for the space. Give the students the same privilege so those who find it necessary to park in the remote lot will not have to pay for their inconvenience.

Now, a student who chooses to buy a remote lot ticket would be charged $5 annually for that space and the person who wishes to have the lot within a stone's throw of the campus would pay the going rate plus the difference of the once annual rate for the remote lot. Instead of everybody paying the same parking rate those parking closest to campus would pay $66 minus the $5 charged those who park in the remote lots.

This system should only include 3,726 parking spaces in the student areas. All the other spaces between the remote lots and those closest to the university will remain as they are now. The traffic division will need to have tickets to identify the special tickets but that should be simple. Say, remote lot users have bright yellow tickets and the other tickets can be bright red. The other tickets, those at the usual rate, can remain the same. Those spaces will have the normal parking rate. Naturally, there will be no limit on the number of tickets sold for any of the lots.

With this system, the university will not lose revenue. Also, the fairness here is immediately apparent. Students can choose to spend money and expect less difficulty getting a parking space near the buildings or students can save money with a remote lot sticker and expect to spend more time getting to class.

Peace might be gained in the parking lot, with fewer hurt feelings over lost parking spaces and less agitation for the students trying to park their vehicles quickly, without accidents or personal injury.

Letters

Do something!

Our letter is in response to last week's article concerning the decreased student activism in the '80s. It is extremely frustrating for campus organizations to operate within the present day climate of student apathy. Few people seem to notice that themes of racial, economic and gender equality, as well as issues of peace, are as relevant today as they were in the '60s.

While major victories were won in those active years, not one issue was sufficiently resolved. The United States continues to sponsor war throughout the world, and sexism and racism run rampant in our country.

To help put an end to these societal ills, we encourage all students to join the numerous progressive campus organizations at Ohio State.

Students can also support these organizations by participating in activities this spring, such as the 12 Hours of Peace, and Worldfest, which are aimed at creating a more peaceful and equitable world for ourselves and feature generations.

The Baha'i Club will share in the struggle by sponsoring its third annual peace forum in the Ohio Union Saturday.

The title of the forum is "Racial Unity: A Requisite For World Peace."

This event will allow people to become familiar with the relationship between racial harmony and peace, and also learn about area groups such as the World Federalists, Multi-Racial Families of Central Ohio, YWCA, and many others. By coming to this and other events this spring, individuals can become active and take a positive step toward improving the world around them.

Wrong quote

I am writing this letter in response to an article which was printed in last week's Lantern in which I said I wholeheartedly supported the tuition increase. The statement could not be any further from the truth. Had the reporter written everything I said into the article, the true statement I made — which was that I would support the tuition increase if the Governor and Democratic Legislators supported it in the General Assembly — would have accurately reflected my sentiments. Let me also emphasize that when asked to give an interview I gave my own opinions and not those of the OSU College Democrats per se.

I am, in this letter, not retracting what I said, only asking that its context be clearly stated. In reality, however, the Governor and Democrats in the Ohio Senate have always asked for money to be spent on education and have always been frustrated by the Republicans who have had the majority in the Senate since 1984. Any student who is foolish enough to believe that any other student would want to raise his own tuition is absurd. I would be insane to go against all common logic of my party to say such a thing. I would hope that all rational students realized that the paragraph was taken out of context and were not swayed by overzealous young Republicans who look to capitalize on all dirt and scum they can get their hands on. The ONLY party which cares about students and education are the Democrats!!! If you have problems remembering that just think of Governor Rhodes or President Reagan, that always seems to jog my memory.

Free to march

People are not jailed for being concerned about the protection of human life. People are jailed for endangering human life i.e. bombing abortion clinics, harassment of free individuals and obstruction of the freedom to obtain safe medical care.

No one has been arrested for a peaceful protest either pro or anti-choice. Everyone is free to march for their beliefs in order to influence and push for change in the government, as went on in Washington last weekend. My question is why do the "pro-life" people need to be PAID to march in front of the abortion clinics.

Lowry, Cline win women's basketball MVP award

Perozek captures 6th player award

By Don Oda
Lantern sports writer

Lisa Cline and Niki Lowry were selected co-Most Valuable Players at the OSU women's basketball awards banquet at the Ohio Union Wednesday night.

Lowry, a senior from Detroit, and Cline, a senior from Millersburg, were both unanimous selections to the first team all-Big Ten squad and hold the No.3 and No.4 spots respectively on the Ohio State all-time scoring list.

Coach Nancy Darsch said both seniors were major contributors in the Buckeyes' 24-6 record (16-2 in the Big Ten) and the conference title shared with Iowa this season.

"It's tough to say more than what the award Most Valuable Player says," Darsch said. "We're going to miss their points and rebounds. They gave visibility and leadership to the team that is going to be difficult to even come close to replacing."

Lowry, 21, is no stranger to the MVP award. She also captured the honor last season.

Lowry, a Kodak Division I All-American, led the Big Ten scoring chart for the second consecutive year with an average of 18.9 points per game and had a NCAA tournament average of 30 points.

Lowry said winning the award this year gives her an extra sense of accomplishment because of the injuries she has had to overcome this season and commented on the difficulty of deciding on such an award for just one individual.

"I'm glad I got to share this honor with Lisa," Lowry said. "It's so hard to single out one person for an award like this. The award means even more to me this year after battling back from my knee injury early in the season."

Cline, 22, OSU's leading scorer averaging 19.7 points per game, was named Big Ten Player-of-the-Year. Cline said both her and Lowry put forth a lot of effort to earn such a prestigious award.

"The MVP is a great honor to win in my last year at Ohio State," said Cline. "We both worked really hard this year and I think the award is well deserved by both of us."

The Best Defensive Player of the Year Award was also given to Lisa Cline for the third consecutive year in recognition of her 89 steals this season, bringing her career high to the No.3 position on the OSU all-time list with 237.

Senior team captain Geneva Sanford was also honored at the banquet with the William E. Brown Memorial Leadership Award. This award is given to the player who best embodies dedication, teamwork, unselfishness and leadership.

The Sixth Player Award, which recognizes the efforts of a non-starting player, went to sophomore Cheryl Perozek. She played in 29 games averaging 14 minutes.

Junior Mindy Smith walked away with the Most Improved Player Award for the second time in her career at Ohio State. Smith, who also won the award her freshman year, ranked fifth in the Big Ten this season in blocked shots with 17.

Ohio State finished the season with a loss in the NCAA tournament to Long Beach State after beating James Madison in its opening game.

The Buckeyes were ranked ninth in the final USA Today poll after being either left out of the poll or between 15th and 20th for most of the season.

Nikita Lowry, left, and Lisa Cline, share a light moment with Russell Spillman, vice provost for student affairs, after Spillman presented Lowry and Cline with co-MVP awards at the Ohio Union Wednesday night.

OSU golf teams host Kepler, Lady Buckeye Invitationals

By Aaron Buckles
Lantern sports writer

After a disappointing show on the road last week, the OSU men's golf team is looking to turn things around at home.

Today through Sunday the men's golf team is hosting the 21st Annual Kepler Intercollegiate at Ohio State's Scarlet course and freshman Chris Rule said the home tournament is important to the Buckeyes.

"This is kind of a turning point," Rule said. "We really need to have a good tournament to get our confidence back and get rolling again."

Earlier this week Rule, a business major from Lansing Mich., qualified to fill the team's fifth spot for the home tournament by shooting 74-75 on the Scarlet course.

This year, teams from 22 Midwestern universities will play in the three day-54 hole event, including seven Big Ten teams.

First played in 1969, the Kepler, named for the late Buckeye golf coach Robert Kepler, has been dominated by two teams. The Buckeyes have won 16 times, including 14 of the last 15, and Indiana won the remaining four.

The tournament allows five team members from each university to play and will count four of their scores.

This year, the five Ohio State members are: Ted Tryba, Jack Steinicke, Gary Nicklaus, Chris Smith, and Chris Rule. Besides the starting five, most of the other team members will play in the tournament individually.

Purdue Coach Joe Campbell said he likes the tournament.

"It's a nice tournament because we're playing three days on a good golf course," Campbell said.

The Scarlet course is the highest ranked college golf course in the country and OSU Coach Jim Brown, in his 16th year as head coach, said it can be tough.

"It's the best college golf course in the country, so you had better bring your A-1 game if you want to show well," Brown said. "If you're not playing well it will eat you up."

Brown said the tournament will be a big factor in getting a bid from the NCAA to play in the regionals because most of the teams in Ohio State's district are here facing each other this weekend.

Each year the NCAA invites teams to play in regional qualifiers to decide who makes it to the national championships. Ohio State's region plays in Dallas this year and the NCAA Championships are in Edmond, Oklahoma.

"It's the kind of tournament where you can measure yourself and see how you stack up against teams in your region now," Brown said.

This also is the first time Ohio State has met a lot of the teams, Brown said, and it will help the Buckeyes see how good some of the teams are and what his team will be up against later this year.

Looking at Ohio State's past record in the tournament, Brown said he would be unhappy with anything but a win.

"We play to win and I'd be disappointed if we didn't win this thing," Brown said.

Team captain Ted Tryba, a senior consumer services major from Wilkes-Barre, Pa., said he wants the team to do well.

"This is my last go at it," Tryba said. "I want to see our team down in the nationals and playing well."

The men's team is not alone in home tournament play this weekend.

The women's golf team is hosting the Lady Buckeye Invitational today through Sunday on the Gray course.

Coach Jana Shipley said she expects her team, the defending Big Ten champions, will be helped because many of the tougher teams she invited will not be coming.

"It's not really a strong field at all," Shipley said. "It's definitely a weak field, there shouldn't be any question that we should win it."

The tournament was first held in 1975 and the Lady Buckeyes have won three times. Last year, the NCAA Championships clashed with the usual tournament date and no tournament was scheduled.

Shipley said being at home and on the Gray course should help the 13th-ranked Buckeyes achieve low scores and help the team's NCAA ranking. The rankings are determined by comparing a team's scores with the ratings of the courses it plays on.

In the Lady Buckeye Invitational, each school can play six team members and the total scores of five are counted.

Softball team looks for improvement

Defense sparkles, but offense down

By Gary Hunt
Lantern sports writer

The OSU softball team split a doubleheader with Ohio University in Athens Tuesday, and in the process showed why the team's season thus far has been both a success and a disappointment.

Heading into the games with Ohio University, the Buckeyes were batting .196, compared to last year's .226.

Defensively, however, Ohio State is off to a better start in conference play with a team ERA of just 0.78 in the Big Ten, compared to 2.69 last year.

Ohio State holds a record of seven wins and 17 losses, and is 1-5 in the Big Ten, but could have a much better record with a few key runs.

The Buckeyes opened the Big Ten season last week in Indiana and dropped two games, both by a score of 1-0.

The team then traveled to Ann Arbor to take on Michigan and lost three of four games.

Again the scores were close, as they lost the three games by a combined total of seven runs. Ten of Ohio State's losses this season have been decided by one or two runs.

Before Tuesday's games, coach Gail Davenport placed a high priority on getting the offense to produce runs.

"The biggest thing for us today is we want to make some changes in our offensive output and try to get some runs up on the board," Davenport said. "That's really the only thing missing right now."

"Our defense and our pitching has been really solid. I think we want to put some runs on the board and get the kids back into believing that they're good hitters, so we're going to come out swinging."

Ohio State did just that in the first game with Ohio University, as they pounded out nine hits in a 4-0 win over the Bobcats. Edie Bargar, Susan Gahn, and Carolyn Urse collected RBI's, and pitcher Colleen Kennedy gave up just one hit to get the win.

The second game was a complete turnaround, as the Buckeyes dropped a 1-0 decision in eight innings. The winning run scored when OSU catcher Cathy Hansen was unable to hold on to the ball to tag out an Ohio University runner at home plate on a suicide squeeze play.

Ohio State had an opportunity to score in the sixth innings, but two questionable calls went against the Buckeyes.

Davenport said neither the officiating nor the game's final play were to blame for the loss.

"I don't think the officiating cost us the game, but I think what happened was it was just at a crucial point in the game and they (the umpires) took us out of a scoring inning," Davenport said. "The play that ended the game shouldn't have cost us the game."

"I think what happened was we became very complacent and we thought the second game was going to be an easy game. Everybody relaxed, and I don't think you can relax against anybody, I don't care how badly you beat them in the first game."

Tami Galvin, 21, who plays second base and pitches for the Buckeyes, agreed that the team was "lackadaisical" in the second game, but she said part of the team's offensive slump might be a problem with the team's hitting mechanics.

"The only way we can improve it is by practicing," said Galvin, a junior from Mequon, Wisconsin.

She said the unusually cold spring this year has not been responsible for the team's offensive woes.

"The hard part is playing with all the layers (of clothing) on," Galvin said. "It's just uncomfortable. I don't think it affects us that much, because that's where the mental toughness comes in. You have to play to win, and we're going to have more games like that (with cold weather)."

Galvin said that Wednesday the coaches videotaped the team during batting practice to see what problems they had with their batting stance and swing.

Galvin said it is this kind of "teaching" approach to correcting the team's problems which has led to the turnaround defensively.

"Right now we're ranked third in the Big Ten as far as defensive stats go," Galvin said. "I think the big difference is she (Davenport) is instilling a lot more confidence in us than our previous coaches did."

Galvin said pitching, which was considered to be one of the team's weaknesses going into the season, has emerged as one of its strengths.

"A lot of that comes from better defense," Galvin said. "When you've got a better defense behind you, the pitcher's ERA is bound to be better."

Iowa to visit for four game series

By Gary Hunt
Lantern sports writer

The OSU softball team will host Iowa, one of the teams favored to win the Big Ten conference, in four games at North Field this weekend.

Ohio State will be looking to improve its record of seven wins and 17 losses, 1-5 in the Big Ten. Iowa owns a record of 25-10, 3-1 in the conference.

OSU Coach Gail Davenport said Iowa should be considered a contender for the conference title because last weekend Iowa won three of four games with defending conference champion Minnesota.

"I think everybody in the beginning had thought it would be Michigan and Minnesota (as the conference favorites)," Davenport said. "Iowa, I think, is very similar to us; I don't think anyone knew what to expect."

Minnesota coach Linda Wells said she was impressed with Iowa. "I believe Iowa is the most improved club I've seen so far in the Big Ten," Wells said. "I think they are going to be a contender for the title."

Iowa is led by outfielder Amy Johnson, who is batting .301 with 14 RBI, and by freshmen pitcher Terri McFarland, who has an ERA of 0.56.

Iowa Coach Gayle Blevins said her team, which was fifth in the Big Ten last year with a 10-13-1 conference record, has played well, but is not taking anything for granted.

"I know everybody's pointing the finger at us, but we've got to keep working out there all the time," Blevins said. "The good teams do that; they're ready to play all the time. We're still working to get that done."

Blevins said what may be tough for her team this year is that other coaches in the conference know how well the Hawkeyes are playing.

"For an Iowa team, that's a new position to be in, because we haven't been there before," Blevins said. She added that Iowa may have been able to "sneak up" on teams last year, but that will not be the case this season.

Blevins said that at times, this year's Iowa squad has played as well as any team she has ever coached, but she is looking for the Hawkeyes to maintain that level of play throughout the season.

"The key to winning the conference, in my opinion, is to be the most consistent team," Blevins said.

She said she thought Michigan was the team to beat in the Big Ten. "They've been there before,"

Blevins said. "They were so close last year and just got nudged out at the last minute. They've played real well this season."

Wells agreed that Michigan will be good, but she saw pitching as a liability for the Wolverines.

"I think Michigan can contend if they get enough pitching," Wells said. "Depth of pitching could prove, in a four game series, to kind of haunt them."

Michigan finished the Big Ten season last year at 15-9, only a half game behind first place Minnesota. This season the Wolverines are 3-1, but Michigan Coach Carol Hutchins is not looking past the next game.

"Our chances are as good as anybody's right now," Hutchins said. "I think we've got a good team, and we're playing well, although we haven't been hitting the ball as well as we were earlier in the season."

Hutchins said that although she thinks Iowa and Indiana will have good teams this year, it is hard to pick a favorite.

"It (the Big Ten) is a tough conference to play in, because we kind of beat up on each other. Last year, everybody dumped everybody else," Hutchins said.

Hutchins also refused to count out defending conference champ, Minnesota, despite that Minnesota started the Big Ten season at 1-3. She pointed out that the Golden Gophers also started last season at 1-3.

Wells said her Minnesota team has talent and depth, but she is still searching for the right combination that will make it a contender.

"We have had to do a little more juggling (of players to different positions) than I would have liked," Wells said. "We're just kind of back here shaking our heads."

Wells added that her team has had difficulty scoring runs.

"Particularly of late, we haven't had an offensive thrust," Wells said. "We get people on base, and then we don't apply the pressure to get people home."

The Gophers graduated only two starters last year, so Wells thinks Minnesota's problem is a lack of team character rather than a lack of talent.

"Last year we were a very gutsy, never give up kind of team, and I feel we won a lot of games just because we did not quit," Wells said. "We're not showing that in our performances this year."

Ohio State finished at the bottom of the Big Ten last year, which fields seven teams for softball, but Hutchins said she was impressed with the Buckeyes.

Ohio State went 1-3 with Michigan over the weekend, but narrowly lost two of the games by scores of 1-0 and 2-0.

Baseball team travels to Wisconsin

By David Myers
Lantern sports writer

OSU baseball coach Bob Todd said his team needs to start winning some Big Ten series, but warned against placing too much importance on this weekend's series against Wisconsin.

The Buckeyes, with an overall record of 16-16 and 4-4 in the Big Ten, travel to Madison, Wis. for 1 p.m. doubleheaders Saturday and Sunday against the Badgers (10-19, 3-5) before a Thursday doubleheader against the University of Wisconsin-Whitewater.

Ohio State has split its first two Big Ten series' against Illinois and Purdue.

"In order to get into the Big Ten tournament we're going to have to win a couple of series", Todd said. "Last year, 16 (Big Ten) wins barely got us in."

"But I think you run into some serious problems overlooking certain opponents on certain weekends and that you begin to make mistakes if you try to gear up too much for one opponent."

Ohio State will gear up for a Wisconsin team that Todd said is aggressive at the plate and capable of scoring lots of runs.

Senior catcher/designated hitter Angelo Palladino agrees with Todd's assessment of the Badgers.

"They're a good hitting team," Palladino said. "We took three out of four from them last year but we had to score a lot of runs to do it."

Ohio State beat Wisconsin last year by scores of 6-3, 13-9, and 8-6 and lost by a score of 16-7.

Ohio State's offense, which this year has gone from being explosive to nonexistent depending on the game, continues to be led, going into Wednesday's doubleheader against the University of Cincinnati, by freshman designated hitter Ken Tirpack with a .359 average and senior first baseman Tom Eiterman with 27 runs batted in.

Junior relief pitcher Ben Regoli leads the pitching staff with four wins and a 2.77 ERA.

Wisconsin Coach Steve Land, in his sixth season as head coach, said his team struggled badly early in the season, but his team has not quit.

"With us struggling so much to win games it would have been easy for our seniors to call it a year after we just got started," Land said. "They certainly have not done that, though. The attitude that they come to the ballpark with each day is getting better every day."

Land said he has been pleased with the production he has gotten from his two catchers/first basemen — junior Carey Sadowski and senior captain Craig Brown — but that the team still needs to play with more consistency in all aspects of the game.

Sadowski leads Wisconsin with nine home runs and 25 RBI's.

Wisconsin lost a chance to make the Big Ten tournament last year by losing three out of four games to the University of Minnesota at the end of the season, but Land said he doesn't see that disappointing fifth-place finish having any negative effects on this year's team.

"I did see the effect early in the season but I haven't seen it so far in our first two Big Ten series", Land said.

Land said his starting rotation for this weekend's series would probably be junior right-hander Paul Quantrill, senior left-hander Brian Doudna, and senior right-handers Todd Borchardt and Eric Liebenstein.

Todd said he does not anticipate any changes in his starting rotation from the Purdue series.

The starters against Purdue were freshmen Tim Smith (3-3, 4.12) and Blase Sparma (2-2, 4.59), and seniors Bill Wertz (2-2, 5.52) and David Mumaw (2-2, 3.60).

BUCKEYE BASEBALL NOTES

Ohio State signed Cincinnati Oak Hills High School standout Scott Klingenberg to a national letter of intent Thursday.

Klingenberg, a six-foot, 180-pound right-handed pitcher is rated as one of the country's top 50 prospects by USA Today.

TaeKwonDo event comes to Columbus

By Eric Hagely
Lantern sports writer

The 15th U.S. National TaeKwonDo Championships will take place today and tomorrow at the Ohio Center.

The weigh-ins and preliminary rounds were held yesterday at Larkins Hall's Exhibition Gym.

More than 2,000 athletes including the state champions from across the nation will compete in head-to-head competition, which is as much an art as it is sport.

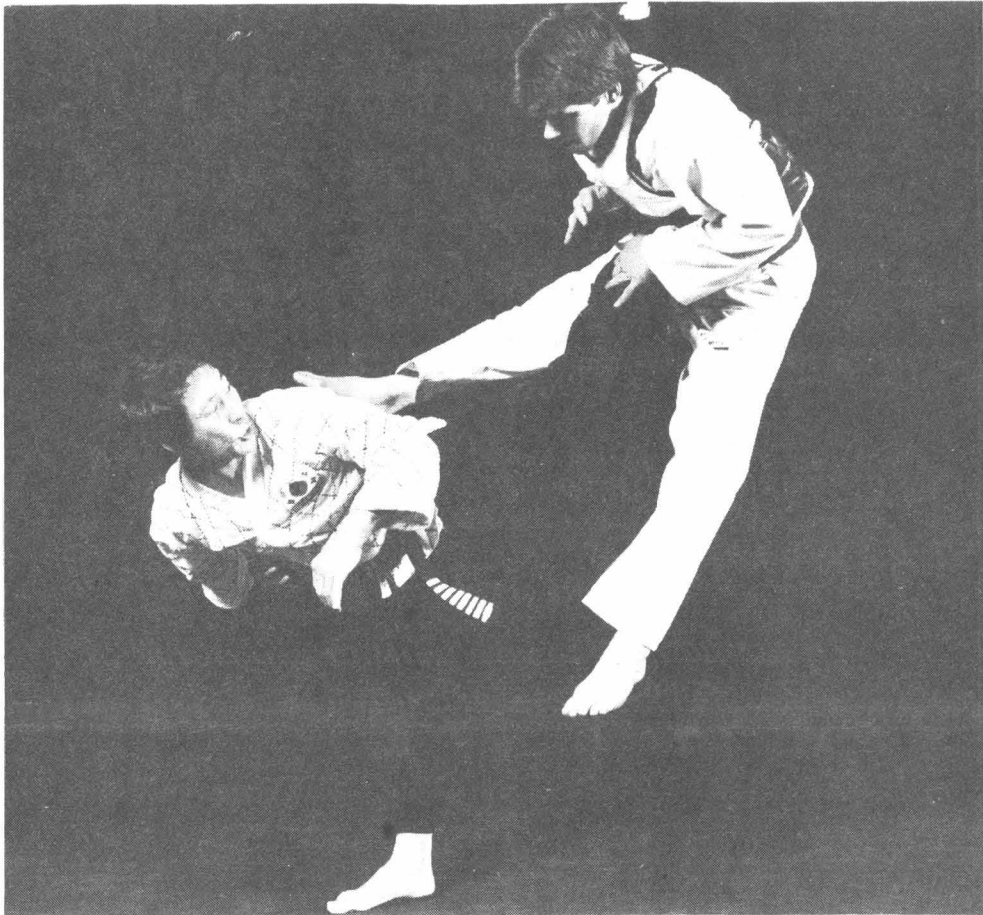

Participants will be vying for the right to represent the United States at the Olympic Festival, the World Games in Germany, and the Ninth World Championship in Korea.

Members of the 1988 TaeKwonDo Olympic Team, including bronze medalist Greg Baker, will be competing and Olympic Coach, Grand Master Joon P. Choi, the tournament director, will be on hand to oversee the action.

Master Choi was instrumental in bringing the championships to Columbus. He served as the head coach of the 1988 Olympic TaeKwonDo team and is the founder and director of the Oriental Martial Arts College.

Master Choi, an eighth-degree blackbelt, has produced more blackbelts than any one coach in the world.

This 2,000 year-old martial art originated in Korea and was initiated into the Olympics last year in the Seoul games. It emphasizes high, powerful kicking techniques to be used in self-defense and in sport.

Master Joon P. Choi demonstrates a powerful back kick on Olympic bronze medalist Greg Baker.

TRAIN WITH THE NUCLEAR INDUSTRY'S LEADER, AND YOU COULD END UP LEADING THE INDUSTRY.

Over half the nuclear reactors in America are operated by one organization. The United States Navy.

The technology is the most advanced in the world. The men in charge are the industry's best. That's why the Navy Nuclear Propulsion Officer Candidate Program is among the most sophisticated training available.

It has to be!

College juniors and seniors who qualify for the program can earn $1,100 a month while still in school. In addition, you get a $4,000 bonus upon entrance into the program and an additional $2,000 when you complete your Naval studies.

And, as an officer in today's Nuclear Navy, you receive a year of paid graduate-level training — gaining the experience and credentials that can put you at the forefront of the nuclear industry.

You must be a U.S. citizen, 25 years of age or younger upon commissioning, working toward a bachelor's or master's degree. You must also have completed a minimum of one year each of calculus and calculus-based physics with a "B" average or better.

If you're thinking about a career in the nuclear field, start at the top. You can apply your sophomore year. Call Lt. Al Colby at Navy Management & Programs for more information 1-800-282-1288.

ARTS

Sullivan breaks ground with independent film

A nationwide publicity campaign for the film, "The Beer Drinker's Guide to Fitness and Filmmaking," gets under way in Columbus today.

The movie is the creation of independent filmmaker Fred G. Sullivan, and in fact, is a comic memoir about the life and mind of Sullivan.

The film, which opens today at Eastland Plaza 6, Dublin Village 10 and the Drexel Grandview, has been receiving rave reviews and is now being distributed by Circle Films, the company behind "Blood Simple" and "Raising Arizona."

It is doing very well at the box office and is being shown in major movie theaters, not just small art theaters where most independent films are shown.

Sullivan said people like his movie because they can relate to the movie's characters trying to balance their dreams with their family and career.

"I really think the film addresses heartland kind of things," Sullivan said. "It's not a drop dead, big city, hip kind of film.

INTERVIEW

RYAN SOMERVILLE

But it addresses the things that everybody has to face once in a while, and that's love, marriage, kids, career, and your favorite beverage."

"I'm interested in the human animal and how they zanily get together, and don't get together," he said.

A goal Sullivan didn't have in mind when he started the project was having the style of his film be compared to a home movie, but it's a comparison he's learning to accept.

"I sometimes get upset when people describe it as a home movie, but then I realize it is a compliment because it looks like it is natural."

Sullivan conceded that ticket sales skyrocketed after one reviewer called it the "Ben-Hur" of home movies.

With a budget of $500,000, which is pocket change by Hollywood standards, Sullivan says his movie is a perfect marriage of budget and style. The rough look of the film, which was filmed in the Adirondack Mountains in New York, adds charm that a glossed over product of Hollywood would not have.

Also, since the film is a comedy, it can be funny with a low budget because people come to just have a good time.

"I have never noticed the correlation between budgets and success," he said.

The frantic pace of the movie is symbolic of family life with four kids, he said.

"When you have so many kids you can't have a grown-up conversation. As soon as you start saying something, you're interrupted. You can't finish a thought, let alone a sentence," he said. "The reason it looks haphazard is that I took it upon myself to try capture that zaniness."

The film may look haphazard, but for comedy to work properly it must be structured, and very little of the movie is improvised, Sullivan said.

"What surprises a lot of people is that it is totally scripted. It isn't like I would end the camera and say 'let it roll,' and hope we get this," he said. "I did capture the truth, but I had to rearrange it for comedy."

To save money, Sullivan cast his wife Polly in the film, along with his seven-year-old son Tate, five-year-old daughter Katie, and two-year-old twin boys Kirk and Ricky.

"I started writing the script thinking I would assemble a cast of professionals and try to capture this kind of turmoil in a comedy. And then I realized that I could spend another two years trying to raise funds to make it. But I had enough dough to make it right then and there if my own family would do it," he said.

Sullivan was gambling with his family's acting skills, and did not test them or have them try out for parts.

He just assembled a crew and started shooting. When he saw his family's performances, he knew his long shot had paid off.

"With Polly, the camera likes her and she comes across very sympathetically. And the biggest surprise of all of course was Tate," Sullivan said.

Tate's performance was so wonderful, that Sullivan put him in the film more than he originally intended.

Since the movie's premiere Tate has been offered roles in New York. But Sullivan understands the great commitment involved in a child's acting career and has decided to have Tate hone his skills in school plays and local theater.

"I don't want to keep him away. In fact if he could support me I would be more than happy to have that happen," Sullivan said laughingly.

"We have made a conscience decision not to rush out and push him in that direction," Sullivan added. "I don't think we're ready to pull him out of the environment that we've fought so hard to structure."

Fred Sullivan

The success of "The Beer Drinker's Guide to Fitness and Filmmaking" has opened the door for Sullivan as a filmmaker, who now has plans for bigger budgeted pictures.

"I would like to do comedies for a while because there is no greater thrill than having a house full of people watching a picture you made, and all of a sudden you hear them all laugh," he said.

New York jazz artist to highlight festival

By Jim Dallas
Lantern staff writer

The 12th Annual Jazz Festival on April 16 will feature big band director Bob Mintzer performing a special piece with the OSU Jazz Ensemble, which is coming off an award-winning performance last week.

"He wrote a piece especially for us, and this will be the world premier of it," ensemble director and OSU alumnus Tom Battenberg said.

The Jazz Festival will also feature a clinic given by Mintzer.

Mintzer, a saxophone soloist, and his New York-based band, have been nominated for a Grammy Award and have recorded three albums. The releases, which are available on compact disc, are entitled "Spectrum," "Camouflage" and "Incredible Journey."

Mintzer, who is also a pop session musician, has played with the likes of Buddy Rich, Mel Lewis and Louie Bellson.

Mintzer will be performing with the OSU ensemble, which captured top honors at the Notre Dame Collegiate Jazz Festival on April 8th.

"It's the oldest and most prestigious jazz festival in the country," Battenberg said. "What we did there is really a tribute to the musicianship of the group."

In addition, four OSU musicians netted outstanding soloist awards.

John Allen, trombone, Derek DiCenzo, guitar, Tim Williams, drums and Steve Wieclaw, lead trumpet, are the musicians who were recognized.

"We weren't really looking at it (the competition), we just went to have some fun and enjoy the other bands," Williams said.

"It was fun, and fortunately, it turned into some awards," DiCenzo said.

DiCenzo, 21, has been playing guitar for 12 years and occasionally sits in with the group Dr. Bombay at Bernie's.

Williams, 24, is a senior from Elyria majoring in music education and has been playing drums since he was in the third grade.

Allen, who is from Hermitage, Pa. and majoring in Jazz Studies, is the veteran of the group.

"I've been there (Notre Dame) a couple of times already with the ensemble," Allen said.

Allen, 29, has been playing trombone for 17 years and has been with the ensemble "... at least since birth," DiCenzo said.

Steve Wieclaw, who is from Ravenna and majoring in Sociology, has been playing trumpet since the fourth grade, and in spite of his outstanding soloist award, says that the ensemble is "... just a hobby."

Battenberg says that the ensemble is at the peak of performance right now.

"The members have been working hard, playing a lot of concerts and practicing," Battenberg said. "It just finally all came together at the right time."

"We really gelled at Notre Dame," DiCenzo said.

The festival at Ohio State will also feature 25 area high school ensembles that will perform from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in Weigel and Hughes Halls. The performances are open to the public.

"We hope to get high school players interested in coming here," Williams said. "Whether they are inspired by us or by Bob, we hope they will pursue it."

The clinic given by Mintzer will start at 3 p.m. in Weigel Hall and will cost $3. The cost includes the performance of five original compositions by Mintzer with the OSU Jazz Ensemble.

Redding, Hendrix groove on screen

Was the "Summer of Love" everything it was cracked up to be? Did people really wear those funny clothes and say, "groovy" a lot? Did Jimi Hendrix and Otis Redding really do great live shows?

Two films showing this weekend answer these questions with an emphatic yes.

"Jimi Plays at Monterey" and "Shake: Otis at Monterey" are two films showcasing two red-hot performances from the Monterey Pop Festival June, 1967. Both are playing Friday through Sunday at the Drexel North, 4250 N. High St.

The first film is the 20-minute "Shake," which features Otis Redding, backed up by Booker T. and the MGs, performing a high voltage, five-song set.

Redding opens up with a frantic version of Sam Cooke's "Shake." With his fast-paced dancing and faster-paced singing, Redding seems to dare his band to keep up with him. But they do more than just keep up.

Rarely has a band pushed themselves harder or seemed to enjoy themselves more than the seven musicians who backed up Redding.

After performing "Shake," Redding does "Respect," a song that he wrote but was made famous by Aretha Franklin.

"She took it from me, but I'm gonna do it anyway," says Redding before launching into his version of the song.

Next up is another Redding original, "I've been Loving You Too Long," and "(I Can't Get No) Satisfaction," written by Mick Jagger and Keith Richards. Redding's "Satisfaction" is more soulful than the Rolling Stones'

MOVIE

version and must have made Jagger, who was in attendance, proud.

Redding then says he is going to relax and slow things down with his final number, "Try a Little Tenderness." He does slow things down, but he sure doesn't relax. He belts out the song with so much feeling that by the end he looks worn out.

During "Shake: Otis at Monterey," the camera stays focused on Redding most of the time. The close-ups of Redding are occasionally mixed with shots of the psychedelic, Pink Floyd-style movie images on the screen behind the stage.

The exception is "Try a Little Tenderness." During this song, footage of the happy hippies who attended the festival is shown.

The crowd's 60s-style clothes, hair and eyewear are interesting and amusing. One woman is shown wearing a T-shirt that says "Free Love, Inquire Within." It's doubtful that she would wear that shirt today.

The movie displays Redding at his peak. Unfortunately, he died six months later in a plane crash. The crash happened at about the same time that his biggest hit, "Sittin' on the Dock of the Bay," was released.

"Jimi Plays at Monterey" opens up with a brief biography of Hendrix from narrator and co-organizer of the festival John Phillips, of the Mamas and the Papas.

Jimi Hendrix

Courtesy Movie Visions

During this introduction, Eric Burdon and the Animals' "Monterey" is played while footage of J. mis Joplin, The Greatful Dead and The Who performing at the festival is shown.

Phillips says that Hendrix and The Who's Pete Townsend got into a big argument backstage about who would follow the other onstage.

After a coin flip determined The Who would perform first, Hendrix said, according to Phillips, that if he had to follow The Who, he was going to "pull out all the stops and blow everyone away."

After being introduced by the late Rolling Stones guitarist, Brian Jones, that is exactly what he did.

During his 10-song set, Hendrix played his guitar between his legs, behind his back, behind his head and with his teeth. These were not just gimmicks; he played some incredible licks in those unorthodox positions.

With Noel Redding on bass and Mitch Mitchell on drums, The Jimi Hendrix Experience played four Hendrix originals, "Can You See Me," "Foxy Lady," "The Wind Cries Mary" and "Purple Haze."

During these songs, Hendrix pretty much stuck to his original versions and didn't add much too them.

His cover songs are a different story. Hendrix is well known for his tendency to cover then-recent songs and put his own trademark on them, and his set at Monterey is no disappointment.

Hendrix's version of the Beatles' "Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band" and Bob Dylan's "Like a Rolling Stone" illustrate Hendrix's tendency perfectly.

Other cover tunes include a raunchy version of "Wild Thing," a faithful rendition of Chester Burnett's blues standard, "Killing Floor," and the William Robertspenned, Jimi Hendrix-popularized, "Hey Joe."

As in "Shake," the camera stays focused on the star in "Jimi." This is exactly where it should be focused. Hendrix's constant smile, constant gum chewing and, especially, constantly impressive guitar playing are something to behold.

As Phillips says in his narration, "You could watch (Hendrix) like a hawk, but you couldn't figure out how he did it."

Whether he was playing behind his back, with his teeth or right out in front of him, Hendrix was amazing.

Sister-city's bells to ring at Mershon

By Cathleen Carter
Lantern staff writer

Ten years ago, Chinese archeologists unearthed an emperor's tomb in the ancient Hubei Province and discovered perfectly-pitched bronze bells.

At about the same time, Columbus initiated a sister-city relationship with the province, opening economic and cultural ties.

This weekend, in what organizers say is a coincidental anniversary event, replicas of the bells will be played at Mershon Auditorium in a theatrical event featuring dance, song and poetry from the province.

The Hubei Dance Ensemble from the People's Republic of China will perform "The Imperial Bells of China" on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

"The Imperial Bells of China" is considered one of the finest performance-type events in China, and is making its North American debut during a ten-week tour," said Jeanne Smith, special events coordinator of CBM Productions, the California-based organizer of the event.

CBM executives invited the dance ensemble to perform in the United States after seeing them perform in China. Smith said the proposed tour was seen as a "fine cultural exchange."

"The ensemble doesn't travel much in China because they have their own theater," said Tom Agostino, associate producer of CBM. "The show is reserved for dignitaries and is considered a national treasure."

The ensemble uses replicas of bian-zhong chime bells that date back more than 2,400 years. The original bells were unearthed by archeologists during the excavation of the tomb of Marquis Yi.

"The bells are considered as one of the wonders of the world because of their uniqueness," Smith said. "The bells are unique because they are in perfect pitch to the tone and notes we know today."

Each bell can play two musical notes, and the whole set of 64 bells employs the modern 12 tone scale. They range in size from two inches to five feet, the largest weighing as much as 500 pounds. They are cast in bronze, and each contains an engraved inscription instructing musicians on how to play it.

"The metallurgy they used to make the bells was not known to us until the 17th century, and the Chinese knew it 2,400 years before us," Smith said. "They had a better concept of music than we thought."

Other instruments were also found in the tomb, and the replicas will be used in the performance.

Rebel band to introduce progressive hits

High school brought Rich Whitherspoon and Troy Payne together and as a result, The Wake was formed. This hauntingly progressive group hopes to launch their Columbus based band.

As a result of a distaste for mainstream music, Whitherspoon (guitar), and Payne (vocals), began formulating their band. The duo soon attracted James Tramel (bass), and Scott Rozanski (drums) to complete the group.

The band will be playing in familiar territory Saturday when they headline at the Newport, 1722 N. High Street, at 8 p.m.

The four have been together about a year. They said their musical style is a revolt against "safe" music.

"There are too many safe bands out there," Tramel said.

The group formed their musical style to protest prefab musical molds.

The band's youth, both musically and in years, adds to their raw sound that is reminiscent of the alternative band, Sisters of Mercy. The Wake is unleashing

MUSIC

ELIZABETH WOODS

this sound in an album they are currently producing.

The Wake, like their name, feel as if they are passing on to something better in life. They said neither their name nor lyrics has anything to do with a morbid ideal, although people initially perceive it that way.

"There is a definite dark feeling to our music ... but it has nothing to do with a morbid type of thing, the same is true with the words," Whitherspoon said.

The band defends their music as an expression of emotion, although critics have described it as merely depressing.

"If you think about it, it's emotion. What's so depressing about emotion?" Tramel said.

Their dark, mysterious presence is described as scary by some of their critics, but that aura is what the audience wants, the band said. They contend this image is not something they try to portray.

Payne said they don't want their music to be analyzed. The music is imagery and does not contain any direct messages, they said.

Although there are various religious overtones, they again contend that it is something that cannot be avoided. Payne said he does have strong feelings about topics such as religion. But, he said he is not trying to influence the audience's beliefs.

The song "Reverent Mother" contains such overtones. Payne said this was about a recurring dream Whitherspoon had, it is not a song about condemning nuns.

Although they realize they cannot avoid such false interpretations, the music should be taken for what it is.

"This isn't any music with a message. It's like why does an artist paint the picture the way he does, because it's the way he was feeling at the time," Payne said.

The music should be appreciated for what it is, and the audience is free to make their own interpretations, he said.

They adapt this theory in their own personal listening.

"When I listen to music, it means what I want it to mean, that's what it's good for," Payne said.

One goal of the band is to make a living at something they enjoy, Payne said. They want to be successful, but they are not concerned with becoming massive.

"It's not realistic to think that we'll be playing stadiums like Springsteen. If it happens, it happens," Payne said.

However, to expand they feel they must leave Columbus and travel to New York. Another goal of The Wake is to sign to a recording label.

A video for the single "Locomotive Age" is in the works. Part of the footage will be filmed Saturday night. When completed, the video will be sent to MTV.

The band sees music television as a tool for large exposure where thousands of viewers will see the video in one night.

Military spending protest questions taxation system

By Tzu-An Lee
Lantern staff writer

Approximately 50 OSU students, professors and alumni held a noisy protest rally against military spending Thursday on the Oval.

"It is a shame, a crime to have such a high percentage of tax going to the military," said rally organizer Bonnie Kretschmer, a freshman from Oxford majoring in arts and sciences. She said the government should be spending more money on the nation's homeless and hungry.

The rally, which ran from 10:30 a.m. to 1 p.m., was organized by Students for Peace and Justice.

OSU alumnus Rick Theis of Columbus said the U.S. needed a strong defense. But he said the military wasted too much money that could be spent on other things.

"We'll try to find some legal alternatives to protest this, such as refusing to pay the tax of phone bills, of which six percent goes to the military, or writing letters to state representatives," Theis said.

"It is a shame, a crime to have such a high percentage of tax going to the military."

— Bonnie Kretschmer

Ron Solomon, professor of mathematics, said taxation for militarization is a crime against humanity.

"(It's) a crime for two reasons," he said. "Because of the evil that is done with money and because of all the good that could be done with it."

But not everyone at the rally agreed with Solomon.

A young man, who refused to give his name and declined to be interviewed, tried to interrupt Solomon's speech and got into a shouting match with Students for Peace and Justice supporters after accusing them of being communist sympathizers.

"Thank God for the Navy," he yelled. "Thank God for guns and bullets."

The argument ended without incident. OSU Police did not make any arrests, said Officer Michael Moscato.

Women explore agriculture

By Crystal Jones
Lantern staff writer

High school women interested in agriculture were encouraged to explore the field's career possibilities at an agricultural conference Wednesday.

The conference, entitled "Promising Young Women in Agriculture" and held in the Agricultural Administration Building, was to encourage and recognize young women in agriculture while promoting agriculture and Ohio State, said Mary Poling, admissions counselor for the College of Agriculture and coordinating adviser for the event.

More than 90 high school women, with the parents, 4-H agents and agricultural education instructors who recommended them, attended the conference.

The students listened to seven speakers and a panel of professional women in agriculture.

Jamie Cano, assistant professor of agriculture education, has worked on the issue of sex equality with female agricultural education teachers in public high schools. Cano said he realized the problem was getting women to study agriculture.

Cano and members of Sigma Alpha, a professional agriculture sorority, both went to Poling with the idea for a conference for women high school students. Poling is a chapter adviser of the sorority.

The program was organized by Sigma Alpha, the College of Agriculture and the Department of Agricultural Education.

Cano said, "The program was to acquaint (students) with agriculture careers and make them aware that there are jobs available in the field of agriculture for females as well as males."

Holly Stacy, county extension associate of 4-H in Sandusky County, said, "Women are more accepted in agriculture today than they had been in the past."

Stacy said scientists, engineers, managers, marketers, sales representatives or social service professionals have the best job opportunities.

Students in education, communication or agriculture production have fewer opportunities because of the higher number of graduates, Stacy said.

Lisby Beem, employment coordinator for Countrymark, said communications skills and the ability to listen and to make decisions are important skills students should have for interviews.

"The person with the best personality is the person most likely to get the job," Beem said. Attitude can be the most important quality that an interviewer looks for, she said.

Upperclass agricultural students introduced the high school students to agriculture and other OSU student clubs.

Rebecca Kilpatrick, a senior attending Westerville South High School, said, "I really enjoyed the program, especially the session on interviewing and the speech by Holly Stacy."

THE LANTERN FIRST ANNUAL ESSAY WRITING CONTEST

In his State of the University Address last October, The Ohio State University President Edward H. Jennings described the university as "eminently prepared for this globally competitive society." He concluded that speech by saying, "We are a university essential to the success of a knowledge-based economy...We are a university of vision and opportunity...We are the model for the American university of the 21st century."

The topic of your essay is how a large university like The Ohio State University responds to the challenges President Jennings has provided.

As a starting point, your essay might address questions like: How does the university prepare students for a "globally competitive society"? Is a university "essential to the success of a knowledge based economy"? How is The Ohio State University "a model for the American university of the 21st century"?

The essay is limited to 500 words, double-spaced, typewritten or submitted from a word processor. Handwritten essays will not be considered.

All essays must be received in the Lantern Business Office, Room 281-E Journalism, 242 W. 18th Avenue, Columbus, OH 43210 by 5 pm Friday, April 28th.

The judges will select a first place winner and three honorable mentions. The first place winner's essay will appear on the editorial page of the Lantern one day in May, together with a photograph of the author.

All winners must be OSU students who will be required to submit proof of student status before receiving their awards. The first place winner will receive $150 and each honorable mention will receive $50. Branch campus students are encouraged to submit essays.

Essays will be judged on originality of ideas, expression and development of thought, and proper grammatical usage. Employees of the Lantern or students currently enrolled in Journalism 421.01, 421.02, or 421.03 are ineligible.

Individuals from the following entities will serve as judges:
Lantern Editorial Staff, English Department, College of Medicine, College of Engineering, College of Business and Long's Bookstore.
