A free concert and new community service project have been added to this year's Greek Week. College pop-rocker Guster will perform May 7 at PromoWest Pavilion for all students who lend their time to "Rock the Block," a day-long charity event.

Rock the Block will group Ohio State students, faculty and staff together to perform community service in and around the OSU campus. Projects will include planting flowers in the University District, a canned-food drive and helping with the "Keep Columbus Beautiful" initiative, said Tanya Rutner, president of the Panhellenic Association and greek committee director for the Undergraduate Student Government.

The service project will take place Sunday, and each participant will receive a free ticket to the concert afterwards. Rutner has set a goal of 2,000 volunteers for the event.

Students who do not participate in Rock the Block can purchase tickets for the Guster concert at the Ohio Union Monday for $10, but ticket prices will increase to $15 Wednesday.

Rutner said the idea for Rock the Block came from an old Greek Week tradition known as the block party, which was popular at OSU in the 1980s.

"We wanted to recreate the block party by blocking off a street and bringing a band in to perform," she said.

Recreational Sports programs put disabled students back in the game

By Renee LaReau For The Lantern

Most Ohio State students know their campus houses a vaunted football program, but few people know that OSU also offers a small but nationally rare program that said. offers athletic opportunities to students with disabilities.

The Office of Adapted Recreational Sports, housed in Larkins Hall's Department of Recreational Sports, is an excellent but grossly underutilized resource at OSU. ARS, founded 20 years ago, is one of only a handful of university programs nationwide that offers recreational sports for students with mobility or visual impairments.

ARS is the competitive or recreational adaptation of sports, so the activity represents its traditional counterpart as closely as

Heidi Keller, OSU's full-time coordinator of adapted recreational sports for the past three years, said her position was created to serve the needs of the 1,100 students with disabilities at OSU.

We have such a diverse community," Keller said. "We have a lot of students who have disabilities — many of them hidden disabilities. It is important for us to address everyone's needs. It's just the right thing to do."

OSU students with disabilities have the opportunity to participate in adapted weight training, aerobics, swimming, aquatic exercise and tennis — all of which are housed in Larkins Hall and Jesse bics classes things happen too fast Owens Recreation Center. "Students don't have to go to a separate program just because they have a disability," Keller

Though students who participate in ARS use regular athletic facilities, they can acquire assistance from a staff member or a trained OSU student, Keller said, because students with disabilities may not feel comfortable working out by themselves. Special equipment - including poolside wheelchair lifts and weight lifting gloves for students with weakened hand muscles — is available through the Office of Adapted Recreational Sports.

Girl violence a growing trend

By Wiley Hall Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Twelve-yearold Nicole Townes is out of a coma but still struggling to recover after being pummeled and stomped at a birthday party in a beating that was shocking not just because of its savagery, but because it was meted out by Authorities say it is symptomatic of a disturbing trend around the country: Girls are turning to violence more often and with terrifying intensity.

"We're seeing girls doing things now that we used to put off on boys," former Baltimore school Police Chief Jansen Robinson said. "This is vicious, 'I-want-to-hurt-you' fighting. It's a nationwide phenomenon and it's catching us all off guard."

Police and prosecutors said Nicole's beating Feb. 28 began when a boy at the party, acting on a dare, kissed the girl on the cheek. The other children exploded with "eeeewws" and laughter, according to the police report.

The 36-year-old mother of the birthday girl apparently was offended, because the boy was supposed to be her daughter's boyfriend. So the mother allegedly urged her daughter to "handle your business," an order police said meant the girl was supposed to defend the that have long been blamed for family's honor.

Charged in the assault were the birthday girl, 13; her mother; trates how some parents are her 19-year-old sister; and three almost as immature as their chilother girls, ages 13, 14 and 15. Police also charged a 24-year-old woman who lived with Nicole with child abuse and neglect for leaving the girl at the party.

"We're just stunned and disgusted and we still can't understand how such a thing could have happened," said the famiy's pastor, the Rev. Durrell Williams of the Full Gospel Deliverance Church. Williams described Nicole as a timid girl, "not one of your fighters."

School police and teachers are seeing a growing tendency for girls to settle disputes with their among girl gangs in cities such fists. They are finding them-selves breaking up playground as Los Angeles and Chicago has educators and community workfights in which girls are going at each other toe-to-toe, like boys.

Violence among teenage boys outstrips violence among teenage girls 4 to 1, according to the Justice Department. A generation ago, however, it was 10 to 1. Schools report a similar pattern in the humber of girls suspended or expelled for fighting.

Experts say the trend simply reflects society. Some say that the same breakdowns in family, church, community and school violence among boys are finally catching up to girls.

"You keep hearing that phrase, 'Handle your business,' 'Handle your business,'" Stith said. "Now I ask you - what business could a 13-year-old possibly have? But for a lot of girls, it's all about respect, defending your turf, fighting for your man."

Last May, girls were videotaped beating and kicking other girls during a hazing at well-todo Glenbrook High School in suburban Chicago. And fighting ers scrambling for solutions.

What kind of a country do you want to live in for the remaining 60 years of your life? It is up to you. If you believe that under George W. Bush, America is careening down the wrong track, John Kerry's fight is your fight, too. Get involved. Give to the Kerry campaign. You won't be alone: since the first of March almost 350,000 Americans gave an amazing $55 million—much of it in donations of $35, $50 and $100. This is the biggest grassroots uprising against a sitting President in U.S. history. And it has only begun.

We must level the playing field against Bush's millionaire friends.

Your gift will make sure that John Kerry's program to turn America in a new direction—restoring our economy, guaranteeing affordable health care for all and rebuilding America's alliances around the world—gets the full, fair hearing it deserves.

A record that cannot be defended.

On George W. Bush's watch, record surpluses have been turned into record deficits, more than two million Americans have lost their jobs, two million more are without health care and—because our allies have been so alienated—the American people alone are bearing the overwhelming share of the cost of the war in Iraq.

Help us silence Bush's attack squad.

How does the White House defend that record? It can't. What does it do instead? Unleash its attack dogs on John Kerry—the same hounds the White House loosed on its own former cabinet officials who had the audacity to tell the truth! These attacks must be answered now or else their distortions may stick.

Three things you can do right now.

1. Presidents matter. Never has there been such a stark contrast between the major political parties' candidates! Go to our website at

BalletMet Columbus opens "Evolution: Mozart to Moby" tonight at the Riffe Center's Capitol Theatre. "Evolution" brings together three distinct periods of life and style with music. The show is divided into three segments -"Wildlife," "Night Music" and "Play" - which differentiate in sound, style and choreography.

"You can really see the change through dance up to today and the way the music evolves," Gerard Charles, Artistic Director for BalletMet said. "The costumes really reflect that as well. People usually think of ballet with one thought - we want to break out of that and go beyond."

Stanton Welch, BalletMet's artistic associate choreographed the entire performance.

'Stanton came to all of us with very detailed and specific ideas of what he wanted and pictured for 'Evolution," Aimee Greer, costume studio supervisor said. "We've tried to best fit those ideas, but also incorporate some of our own.

"Evolution" is performed by 28 dancers from all over the world who auditioned for BalletMet and were chosen for their specific talent and experience.

"It was very hard last year when we met each other because you have to be open to corrections and differences," Hisham Omarbien, a dancer from the Republic of South Africa said. "You have to be able to work with everyone for yourself and for the choreographer. You get to try different styles, and it's just another challenge being put out there.

The program begins with "Wildlife," in which dancers covered in body paint move about as animals, bringing the intensity of nature to the stage

"It (represents) the beginning of time, where primal masculinity and femininity in characters and lines of the body come together," Omarbien said. "It's literally the progression over time and within the music."

BOOK REVIEW

Coming-of-age novel with a twist

Lantern staff writer

Youth can be harsh and yet exciting, filled with thuggish bullies, sneering sisters and far-fetched dreams for the future. John McNally vividly portrays all of these in his wildly affecting second novel "The Book of Ralph."

Ralph, the twice held-back best friend of narrator, and Chicago eighth-grader, Hank. Rather than pick another "B" student to befriend, Hank instead chooses the older - and bolder -Ralph. His attraction to Ralph is subtle and confusing at first, but eventually solidifies as an infatuation with the boy's delinquency.

BRIAN DUFF

Celebrate, don't segregate Saturday

Sir Elton John, international pop-star and "American Idol" guest judge, claimed Tuesday that the show is "incredibly racist."

He came to this inflammatory thesis following a particularly perplexing axing of budding singer - and black woman -Jennifer Hudson from the show a week ago. Hudson — along with the other singers in the "bottom three" - was widely supposed to be among the show's top talents.

Essentially, John's claim is: The show's popular voting system favors white contestants as the audience is overwhelmingly. white and unlikely to vote for black contestants because of overt or subconscious racism.

While this theory has reasonable validity, there are contradictory points that detractors have already jumped all over: Last year's winner, Ruben Stoddard, is a black man, and "American Idol" viewers are disproportionately black (20 percent of black households as opposed to 15 percent of white, according to Nielsen Media Research).

These rationalizations, however, do not really address the problem. Because the show works as a popularity contest and is an open vote across culture — based on its pervasiveness and popularity among all groups — it acts as a barometer for public opinion in the world of entertainment.

The world of entertainment is very much the last bastion of acceptable racism in America today. There is an open and understood association between hip-hop culture and black Americans. Despite this, white people can freely claim to dislike hip-hop in the specific forms of film, music and television — and many do — without reproach because it is a matter of "personal preference."

This is not to say that white Americans dislike black culture unilaterally - far from it, in fact. However, as taste is a subjective measure, there is no way to quantify exactly why a certain type of media may be unpalatable; the suggestion is that a culture of racism - and white suppression — is at the heart of any such distaste.

Movies, television shows and music popular among black audiences can go virtually unnoticed among white America. For example, there is no viewership correlation among top-10 rated television shows between black and non-black Americans, according to Nielsen.

The "Original Kings of Comedy" arena tour in 1997 was among the highest — attended tours of all time, but went virtually unnoticed by white audiences. It wasn't until a film version of the second tour — in 2000 — was released that it garnered any attention in "white" press.

This type of cultural segregation may not be a matter of taste at all; rather the concept of taste may itself be the inevitable byproduct of a white culture that rejects other cultures.

Here at Ohio State, we are approaching the African-American Heritage Festival weekend, which is generally known as either "white flight" or "black-out."

This is the weekend when many white students go home, move their cars and lock their doors. This is the weekend when people talk about being scared of being beat up and mugged.

I am tired of this type of language.

Yes, traffic will be awful, and yes, the police presence will be more than noticeable, but while the Heritage Festival certainly represents an influx of people onto campus, it in no way constitutes a threat to anyone's safety.

Heritage Festival brings culture to campus with dozens of events ranging from a poetry slam to guest lecturers to innercity reading programs. Scholars, writers, entertainers and other cultural nobility will be here to celebrate black culture.

tant still recovering from a break up and aching from a puffy head wound suffered in a cab accident. While walking out of a Chicago law office, Hank runs into a curiously hobbling Ralph, supported by crutches (another scheme of the clever and ingenious Ralph). Ralph invites the old friend home, and together the two rejoin forces.

Through his fraudulent acts, Ralph is unintentionally making readers aware of their own inconsistencies and failings it's an effective commentary on commercialism in America.

Now an employee of multimillionaire crime scene cleaners Norm and Kenny, Ralph pulls Hank into a world he finds absurd: "Kenny and Norm were kicked out of high school; they took the first jobs they found, in the Tootsie Roll factory on Cicero Avenue; and now by some fluke, some glitch in the laws of things in the world that were supposed to work, they had stumbled upon an idea and turned it into a business. It wasn't. It wasn't fair."

McNally evokes the most glowing and enthralling images and sentiments of childhood in the novel, from bullies to the weird neighbor, to the smallest detail that made the love interest unique; all played amidst the backdrop of a city whose rare individuality only adds to a worthwhile and entertaining read.

Men's Tennis gets a bye

By Melanie Watkins Lantern editor

Heading into the Big Ten Conference tournament, the No. 20 Ohio State men's tennis team boasts a 9-1 conference record, an undefeated court No. 1 doubles team and the No. 3 singles player in the nation. All of these accomplishments have landed the Buckeves the No. 2 seed in the tournament and a first-round bye.

Senior Jeremy Wurtzman has been one of the key players in those accomplishments. The tandem of Wurtzman and freshman Joey Atas is ranked No. 31 nationally and is on the bubble of making the NCAA doubles tournament. The doubles team went 10-0 during Big Ten play in the No. 1 court.

"It was the first time I've gone undefeated in doubles in the Big Ten," Wurtzman said. "I think we've gotten better as the year went on as a team, so it is exciting."

Ohio State freshman southpaw Jeffrey Carroll hurls a pitch in last night's 8-1 victory over the visiting Bowling Green Falcons. Carroll pitched five innings of one-hit shutout baseball en route to his second victory of the season.

The Ohio State baseball team (20-17, 9-7 Big Ten) blasted its way to an 8-1 victory last night against in-state rival Bowling Green State University (22-12, 8-7 Mid-American Conference).

Junior left fielder Steve Caravati hit his team-leading eighth home run of the season and collected four two-out RBIs for OSU.

'Coach (Bob) Todd always emphasizes getting those two-out hits right when we need them," Caravati said. "I was lucky enough to come through and have some great at bats, and we were able to get some runs on the board."

Todd said he is proud of how Caravati has come back from recent injuries

"He really is now starting to come back into his own and play to his potential," Todd said. "It's good to see with him in the middle of our lineup."

Carroll earned his second win of the season as he worked five scoreless innings and allowed just one hit. Freshman right-hander Trey Fausnaugh pitched three scoreless innings and gave up one hit.

"When you get ahead in the count with the fastball, it's a lot easier getting guys out," Carroll said. "You can pitch to them with your pitches rather than always behind and having to throw the pitch right down the zone."

Todd said that we was pleased with his freshman pitchers.

"We got good pitching out of Jeff Carroll, and we also got good pitching out of Trey Fausnaugh," Todd said. "Those two really set the stage for us."

Falcon right-hander Tyler Johnson allowed three earned runs on eight hits in his five and two-thirds innings of work and took his second loss of the season.

Junior second baseman Drew Anderson went 3-for-5, drove in two runs and stole two bases in Freshman southpaw Jeffrey the game, giving him a team-high figure that out."

14 steals in as many attempts. His 51 career steals moved him into third place on the OSU's all-time stolen base list.

"All pitchers, whether they know it or not, fall into tendencies, Anderson said. "They start to get lazy later in the inning and they start to fall into a rhythm. Once you pick up on that rhythm, then you can really get a good jump, and it makes base stealing easy once you

Two Ohio high school football players arrested.

Alleged murder may have followed attempted robbery

CLEVELAND (AP) — Two high school seniors, including one recognized as the best high school football player in Ohio, were charged yesterday in the shooting death of a teammate, police said.

Running back Raymond Williams, who has signed to play college football for West Virginia University, was arrested along with Benedictine High School teammate, Jon Huddleston. Both are 18. They had both been held for questioning about the shooting death of Lorenzo Hunter, 16.

Hunter, a sophomore wide receiver and safety for Benedictine, died of gunshot wounds to the chest, arm and hip on April 16.

On April 21, police charged Rodney Roberts, 20, with aggravated murder in Hunter's death. Police said then that a witness told them that Hunter was trying to rob Roberts with a plastic gun, and Roberts then pulled out a real gun and fired it.

Police Lt. Linda Kaspar said the decision to charge Williams and Huddleston with murder rushing for 2,099 yards and 27 touchdowns in the and aggravated robbery charges was made 2003 regular season. Huddleston also earned firstbecause they were "at the scene and had some team honors.

Williams was named the 17th annual winner of The Ohio Associated Press Mr. Football award in

Shelly Poe, sports information director at West Virginia, said there would be no immediate comment on the charges against Williams

Kaspar did not disclose what police learned from questioning the two since their arrest Monday at the boys parochial school. She said the charges against them have no effect on the charge against Roberts.

Williams and Huddleston remained in city jail with an arraignment likely today, Kaspar said.

The Benedictine principal, the Rev. Gerald Gonda, said Tuesday that Williams and Huddleston are suspended indefinitely.
Williams received the Mr. Football award days before he rushed for 237 yards and two touchdowns in a 12-0 victory over Kenton in a state Division III title game in Canton. Huddleston was a defensive back in the team.

Williams was named first-team All-Ohio and the Division III offensive player of the year after
