Bill to add student trustees to board

By Judy Wiseman
Lantern staff writer

Two students will be permitted to serve on the OSU Board of Trustees if the State General Assembly passes House Bill 34.

Today the House of Representatives will vote on Rep. Mike Stinziano's bill, which would add two students to each board of trustees at Ohio's 14 state universities.

The bill would also permit the board to grant full voting rights to the elected students.

Stinziano, D-Columbus, explained that five students from each university would be nominated by an election process adopted by the student government and approved by the board of trustees.

Gov. Richard F. Celeste, with the advice and consent of the Senate, would select two of the five students to serve two-year terms.

"Thirty-eight states, including the ones surrounding Ohio, have already passed a student-trustee law.

"The experience in other states has been positive," Stinziano said.

He said trustees, who serve nine-year terms, need the fresh ideas students would contribute.

"This bill will add student perspectives to aid in decision making," Stinziano said.

He said it is important for boards to hear student opinions. "It is necessary because trustee boards consist of successful business people who are not on campus everyday," Stinziano said.

He said that information would be flowing both in and out of the board room, keeping students informed of board actions.

This is the 15th year the General Assembly has considered student-trustee legislation.

On Nov. 20, 1985, the last time the bill was introduced, it passed in the House by a 79-13 vote. But the bill died in the Senate.

Sen. Eugene Watts, R-Columbus, said it did not reach a Senate floor vote because a former Senate committee chairman had strong ties with administration members at Ohio University, who strongly opposed the bill.

"He asked that the student-trustee bill be put in his committee, then killed it," Watts said.

Watts, the Senate sponsor for the bill, said he is "100 percent in favor of the bill."

Watts said he thinks the reason university officials oppose the bill is because they remember radical student opposition to administration policies during the 1960s.

"The wide-eyed radical students of the 1960s are gone. Students are not threatening anymore," he said.

Watts said he believes university officials should consider the bill as a positive opportunity for students and the university to work together — not as opposition.

Herb Asher, special assistant to Pres. Edward H. Jennings, said university officials are opposed to the bill because they are satisfied with the way the current board works with the administration.

He said that if universities have good senate and student government officers, having students on trustee boards is unnecessary.

"It (student-trustee bill) would weaken the normal channels students have now," Asher said, explaining that the university senate and faculty council currently address student concerns.

"There are decisions being made (by the board) affecting students, and a student voice needs to be there," said Jim Schaefer, vice president for student government.

Schaefer said he hopes the Senate will see the importance of the bill and pass it this year.

OSU student arrested for eating on COTA bus

By Gail Bushman
Lantern staff writer

A student's plans for the weekend came to a screeching halt Friday afternoon when he ate a piece of chicken on a COTA bus.

Hugh Carrington, a sophomore from Cleveland, was arrested by two special-duty Columbus police officers when he allegedly refused to stop eating his dinner and leave the bus, said Don Sunny, chief of security for COTA.

Officers Bill Tittle and Gene Turner, who were hired by Sunny, charged Carrington with misconduct on a public transportation vehicle, Sunny said.

"I believe the officers acted appropriately. They work for COTA on a regular basis and I have no reason to doubt their work," he said.

Carrington, however, has a different version of the incident.

He said he was on his way home from work Friday afternoon, with plans to attend his brother's college graduation in Alabama that evening. Carrington said he decided to buy his dinner and eat it on the bus to save time.

As he was sitting on the bus, two men boarded the bus. One sat in the last seat in the back, and the other sat across from him. The man across from him noticed Carrington's food and pointed out the "no eating" sign posted at the rear of the bus.

Carrington said he immediately put his food away. A few minutes later, he said one of the men was standing over him saying, "Boy, don't you hear me talking to you?"

Carrington said he did not hear the man say anything else to him. He was then asked for his I.D.

Carrington said he did not know who the men were, so he refused to show it. He was also asked by the two men to leave the bus.

At first he did not follow their order, but decided he should, to avoid any further trouble. As he got off the bus, the two men followed him and called the Columbus Police station for a police cruiser. The officers did not identify themselves until Carrington asked to see their I.D.'s.

Carrington said he then gave the officers his I.D., which they looked at and said, "Cleveland, huh? Boy, you're in Columbus now and you're under arrest."

Carrington said when the police cruiser pulled up, he was frisked, but was not read his rights.

He was taken to Franklin County Jail at approximately 7:30 p.m. and not released until 4 a.m., after his roommates came to bail him out.

Carrington said his roommates came immediately to the jail at midnight, after he made his one phone call to them. Carrington also said jail officials made him hang up the phone before he had finished his conversation.

"I'm very upset over the whole incident," Carrington said. "I missed my brother's graduation and I will permanently have on my record the fact I was arrested."

"According to the Ohio Revised Policy Code 2917.41, no person is allowed to eat, drink, smoke, or partake in prohibitable activities on a public transportation vehicle," said Mari-jean Porterfield, public relations official for COTA.

"COTA did not initiate the policy," she said, "it's part of the city code."

Hugh Carrington

Carrington said he was not given a verbal warning from the bus driver.

According to Sunny, the arresting police officers said Carrington refused to stop eating his chicken, after he was warned. Sunny said Carrington also refused to show the officers his I.D., when they had identified themselves to him on the bus.

"The police officers took the necessary steps and (Carrington) didn't respond," Porterfield said. "They weren't going to arrest him in the first place."

Police officers are empowered by law to make any arrest they feel necessary, said Bill Taylor, Columbus police officer for the public information unit.

They were on the bus to enforce COTA's regulations and made the right decision, he said.

Carrington's court hearing for the charge was Monday at 9 a.m. He pleaded not guilty to the charge of misconduct on a public transportation vehicle.

"I'm afraid this incident will hurt my chances for a good job when I graduate," Carrington said. "A potential employer will see that I've been arrested and push my application aside."

Wexner director's status questioned

By Lisa Cayton-Stockdale
Lantern staff writer

Although Jonathan W. Green has been acting as director of the Wexner Center for the Visual Arts, it is not clear if he was ever officially appointed director, university officials say.

Robert L. Arnold, acting dean of the College of Arts, said he is not sure Green should have been acting as director of the center.

Arnold is filling in for Andrew J. Broekema, dean of the College of Arts, who had a heart attack April 17. He said he has assumed all of the responsibilities of the dean except those related to the Wexner Center.

Arnold said he is in the process of attempting to clarify Green's responsibilities. "There is some confusion, but it will be cleared up very soon," he said.

Green, director of the University Gallery of Fine Art, declined to comment. His secretary said he did not have time to talk about this particular subject because he is preparing for a trip.

Green has been acting as the director of the Wexner Center since at least April 7, when he accepted the resignation of Jean-Edith Weiffenbach, curator of the center.

Weiffenbach said she resigned from the center because of differences with Green, whom she called director of the center.

Green has referred to himself as the director of the center several times in the past months during interviews with the Lantern.

He told the Lantern the Wexner Center for the Visual Arts was part of the University Gallery of Fine Art, and because of this connection, he could be called the director of the gallery or of the Wexner Center.

William J. Studer, director of University Libraries, was appointed coordinator of the center late last week by Provost Myles Brand.

Studer said he will act as coordinator until a national search, which is expected to start soon, is successful in finding a director for the center.

He, like Arnold, said he was not sure if Green should have assumed the role of director of the center.

Studer said he was concerned about the amount of time his new appointment might demand. "My first priority is as a research librarian and that is my only aspiration."

"I haven't been following the development of the Wexner Center as closely as I now wish I would have, but I consider the appointment quite a compliment," Studer said.

Green released a statement which said Studer "has been deeply involved with the Center for the Visual Arts project since its inception."

The statement also said, "I look forward to working closely with Bill (Studer) in maintaining the significant contribution the University Gallery of Fine Art and the Wexner Center makes in the presentation of contemporary art on campus and across the nation."

President Edward H. Jennings said Green will be reporting directly to Studer from now on, but that it was not meant to be a demotion to Green.

Report says Celeste has had mistresses

Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Several sources close to Gov. Richard F. Celeste, who is considering running for the Democratic presidential nomination, have confirmed that he has been romantically linked to at least three women other than his wife in the past decade, The Plain Dealer reported in today's editions.

The Cleveland newspaper did not identify the women. But it said Celeste's close advisers fear incidents of womanizing, which derailed the presidential ambitions of Gary Hart, could become an issue if Celeste decides to run for president in 1988.

The disclosure came less than a month after a story in The Miami Herald linking Hart with model Donna Rice resulted in Hart abandoning his campaign for the presidential nomination. Celeste, a former director of the Peace Corps who was elected last year to his second four-year term as Ohio governor, has said repeatedly in recent weeks that he is considering a candidacy for president.

Celeste was asked by a reporter Monday whether there was anything in his personal life "that might preclude you from being president, much in the same way that it has Gary Hart?" The governor replied, "No."

Reached Tuesday night in Sandusky, where he appeared in a town forum, Celeste said he had not seen The Plain Dealer's story.

But he told reporters, "Twenty five years ago, Dagmar and I chose to get married, for better, for worse. We've in the past 25 years had an opportunity to grow stronger together, not simply on the basis of our strengths, but also on the basis of our weaknesses.

"I think that what is our personal life is just that. Our personal life — it should be our personal life. And I think the people of Ohio respect that," Celeste said.

He declined other comment, except to say, "I think frankly this kind of discussion is inappropriate."

Dagmar Celeste, who also was in Sandusky, could not be reached immediately for comment.

The newspaper said in the year before the 1986 campaign, the governor's inner circle was disrupted by reports that he was romantically linked to a member of his office staff. The woman resigned, and

Geology building rocks on shifting foundation

By Dawn M. Plante
Lantern staff writer

While geology and mineralogy professors are explaining the movements of the earth to students in the classroom, they are experiencing it firsthand in their departmental offices.

Orton Hall, where the Department of Geology and Mineralogy is located, was built upon weak shale which is causing structural problems in the basement of the building.

"The building is still settling after 100 or so years," Associate Professor William I. Ausich said.

The building was built on Devonian shale, which is more pliable under pressure than other foundations, Ausich said.

"Certain rocks are more susceptible to movement, especially shale," said Jeff Bauer, a geology and mineralogy graduate assistant.

"Apparently what is happening is that water gets trapped under there, and the shale expands and pushes the floor up," he said.

This activity is preventing chairs and bookshelves from sitting flat.

"Three years ago my chair sat flat by my microscope. About a year and a half ago it would wobble around," Bauer said.

"I've had problems getting a bookshelf to sit flat," Ausich said.

One and a half years ago, it got so bad that the floor had to be ripped out and replaced, he said.

"They pulled out the whole concrete laying and put in supports before they filled it with concrete," Bauer said.

Today the shale is continuing to push through the basement floor. Part of the floor had to be chipped away which was preventing a door from swinging open.

Built in 1893, Orton Hall is one of the oldest buildings on campus. The building was designed and named after Edward Orton Sr., Ohio State's first president and noted geologist.

Another old building, University Hall, was also built on this shale. It is not having the same problems because it is not as heavy as Orton Hall, which has stone walls two feet thick, Ausich said.

Orton Hall is built of 40 different kinds of stone, all native to Ohio.

The oldest rocks are on the bottom, and the youngest rocks are on the top, in keeping with a basic geologic law.

"It's just a perpetual problem," Ausich said.

There is no way to estimate when the building will finally settle, he said.

"It doesn't bother geologists to have the earth moving under our feet," Ausich said.

CELESTE: Affairs disclosed

Celeste hosted a going-away party for her at the governor's residence in Columbus, the newspaper said.

Both of the women reportedly linked romantically to Celeste during the 1970s were married at the time and their husbands were friends of Celeste, The Plain Dealer reported.

The newspaper said two of the women could not be reached for comment and the third declined comment, but did not deny reports of involvement with Celeste.

The Plain Dealer copyright story, written by Brent Larkin and Mary Anne Sharkey, noted that at the time of Hart's withdrawal from the race, Celeste said facts about a candidate's personal life were not proper criteria for judging a candidate's ability to serve in public office.

However, in a May 8 interview with Ohio Public Radio, he acknowledged that "personal conduct is as likely to be a subject of scrutiny as your professional conduct."

The Plain Dealer said it also learned that Dagmar Celeste has been aware of some of the governor's romantic involvements. She has even joked with reporters on at least two occasions about her husband's extramarital activities.

Two close friends of the Celeste family said the governor and his wife had reached "an accommodation" regarding their marriage, the newspaper said. But the friends confirmed that in the early 1970s, in 1977, and again in 1984, the governor's wife became distraught upon learning of Celeste's involvement with other women, the newspaper said.

The Plain Dealer said that in the late 1970s, reports of Celeste's activities also created a deep rift among some supporters, with many political observers feeling that rift contributed to Celeste's 1978 defeat in the gubernatorial election to then-Gov. James A. Rhodes.

During last year's election rematch with Rhodes, some Celeste advisers expected the former governor to raise the issue of Celeste's personal life. The newspaper said Rhodes is known to have gathered information on the private lives of Celeste and other politicians, in part from his sources in the State Highway Patrol. The patrol provides bodyguards for the governor.

Although at various times during the 1986 campaign Rhodes made comments such as, "I go home at night," he refrained from directly accusing Celeste.

Reached Tuesday night at home, Rhodes' key campaign manager in 1986, James Duerk, said he and Rhodes never considered looking into Celeste's personal life. "No, it just never came up," Duerk said.

Gerald Austin, manager of Celeste's two successful campaigns for governor and his top political strategist, was quoted in the story as confirming there is a minor concern within the Celeste camp about how publicity regarding his private life might affect a presidential candidacy.

"I don't think there's a concern in a sense that there's a preoccupation," Austin was quoted as saying. "... There are always rumors about elected officials at that level. It's a rumor-mongering business."

VOLCKER TO LEAVE POST: Paul A. Volcker will step down as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board in August, President Reagan announced Tuesday, and economist Alan Greenspan will be nominated to fill the post.

The announcement momentarily stunned financial markets, but they recovered quickly.

Some analysts were amazed that the surprise announcement was not causing more turmoil in the markets. The dollar stabilized soon after the news was announced as did bond prices, indicating to some observers at least cautious approval of the decision.

NORTH CONCERNED SHULTZ: Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams testified Tuesday that, at the urging of Secretary of State George Shultz, he made a note to "monitor Ollie" to determine whether White House aide Oliver L. North was soliciting military aid for Nicaraguan rebels.

But Abrams told the joint House-Senate hearings on the Iran-Contra affair that he was convinced at the time — based partly on North's personal assurances — that North was not soliciting arms for the Contras.

10 MILLION HAVE AIDS: As many as 10 million people worldwide already are infected with the AIDS virus, and AIDS deaths could cause political and economic upheaval in severely affected countries, an international health official said Tuesday.

"This epidemic has just started," cautioned Dr. Jonathan Mann of the World Health Organization.

As of Monday, 51,535 AIDS cases had been reported in 113 countries, and Mann estimated the number of people infected with the virus could be hundreds of times higher, possibly as high as 10 million.

REAGAN TO PUSH FOR GULF HELP: President Reagan will underscore the need for an "adequate force" to protect Persian Gulf oil shipments at next week's allied economic summit in Venice, Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Tuesday.

But, Shultz added, the president may not ask the allies to increase their military participation in a U.S.-led defense operation beyond the British and French naval forces already in the tense gulf region.

He told reporters a military buildup was not "necessarily, particularly" required.

Drivers slowed by road work

By Jim McCann
Lantern staff writer

Motorists traveling on Route 315 in the northwest part of the city will have to get accustomed to slow-moving traffic until the end of October when major road repairs will be completed.

Thousands of OSU faculty, staff and students use the highway daily going to and from work and school.

Ohio Department of Transportation officials estimated more than 74,000 vehicles travel Route 315 each day, with only 2,400 of those being commercial trucks.

The stretch of Route 315 between Third Street and Ackerman

Road has been slated for $1.7 million in repairs, the first major road repair work since the route was completed in 1969.

The majority of the cost of the project will be paid with federal funds, with state and city funds picking up the remainder.

Wayne Kauble, the department's chief engineer, said traffic will get especially bad when repair crews start working on the bridges along the way.

"The bridges are in need of a lot of repairs and that will force traffic down to two lanes," Kauble said.

Transportation officials suggested using either Route 33 or other alternative routes when repair work is especially heavy.

Crews have already scraped the old asphalt off the top surface of the road in the northbound and southbound lanes, making driving rough.

Kauble said new asphalt should be laid down soon on areas that have been scraped.

The major problem with Route 315 is with joints, Kauble said. Most freeways are made of concrete and topped with asphalt. Every 40 to 60 feet, steel bars called dowels are placed to allow for expansion and hold everything together.

Over time, water and road salt laid down during the winter get into the joints and deteriorate the dowels, causing them to fall apart, he said.

Transportation officials said a lot of freeways, including Route 315, are reaching their predicted life-spans. This is why so much work is being scheduled through 1988.

Route 315 will not be the only stretch of road to undergo major repairs. A section of Route 33 and I-270 on the east side are slated for repair work in 1987. Next year, major repair work will begin on all the interstate freeways and the southwest stretch of I-270.

After all the freeway repair work is finished in 1988, over $35 million will have been spent on Columbus-area freeways.

Temporary replacement for dean sought

By Sheila Lillegren
Lantern staff writer

The temporary position of acting dean of the OSU College of the Arts will soon be filled, Provost Myles Brand said Tuesday.

Robert L. Arnold, professor of art education and acting associate dean of the College of the Arts, will be recommended by Brand to fill the position of dean at the Board of Trustees' meeting Friday.

Arnold has been part of the OSU faculty since 1970, and has served as acting associate dean in the College of the Arts since July.

If the board approves Brand's recommendation, Arnold will begin his temporary position as dean July 1.

If his position is approved, Arnold will take over the duties of Andrew J. Broekema, 56, who suffered a heart attack April 17.

Broekema remains in stable condition at University Hospitals.

"When Andy (Broekema) had his heart attack, I received a telephone call from the provost's office to take over his duties.

"It was not part of my plan to become acting dean," Arnold said, "but I felt an obligation to continue on."

Last Friday, Arnold said he had a brief telephone conversation with Broekema. He said Broekema is "coherent" and able to communicate with people.

"We are all hoping that he (Broekema) will return to his job in full strength," Brand said.

If Broekema does not return as acting dean of the College of the Arts, a national search will be conducted to find a replacement, Brand said.

In addition to Arnold's appointment as acting dean, Brand has asked William J. Studer, director of the University Libraries since 1977, to manage the development of the Wexner Center.

Brand said two positions were created to fill Broekema's duties because of the "great deal of attention" that must be given to the current development of the Wexner Center.

"In all cases, their assignments are only temporary," Brand said.

Studer said he is concerned about how much time his new position will take away from his current responsibilities.

"But," Studer said, "I will serve as long as the provost deems it necessary."

The temporary positions will probably last for at least one year, Studer said.

RESTAURANT GUIDE

PRESUTTI'S AMICI

For fifty years, Presutti's Restaurant has stood at the edge of campus. This Italian restaurant has served lunch and dinner for every graduating class of Ohio State University since 1933. It is a tradition which makes the Presutti family proud and, this year, eager to resume that tradition.

Founded by Italian immigrants Salvatore and Rosina Presutti, Presutti's Villa became one of Columbus' premier restaurants. The family's personal touch was evident everywhere, from the handshake or visit to the table, to the decor of the restaurant. And, today, that's still true. The restaurant that now operates in the same building where the Presutti family once lived is a new concept developed by the third and fourth generation Presuttis.

Amici (pronounced a-mee-chee) is the Italian word for friends. The name was chosen to reflect a more casual, lighter, and friendly approach to serving Italian food. Regional Italian cuisine is now the Presutti's specialty, with dishes chosen from the many provinces of the old country to reflect the wide variety of Italian cooking. Prices are moderate with appetizers under $3.00 and huge plates of pastas from $4.00 to $6.10. Pizzas, subs, salads, and sandwiches are now a mainstay of the all-day menu with everything made from scratch, including the never-ending supply of fresh-baked garlic bread called focaccia.

Presutti's Amici continues to attract its customers from Grandview, Arlington, and campus areas. Lunch time is fast-paced and geared to those who have but an hour in which to eat, talk, and relax. The dining room offers much flexibility and can accommodate parties of up to 40 people. Separate checks at lunch? No problem, say the owners. A daily special is offered in the $4.00 range and fast service is the order of the day.

At night, the lights are dimmed and the pace is relaxed. A wine list suggests many of Italy's fine selections: Soave, Chardonnay and Chianti, all reasonably priced. Tuesdays and Wednesdays are "salad daze" -- free salads accompany your entree selection topped with any or everything you like. Weekends are the busiest, of course, and the Presutti's are quick to mention that they are open all day on Sundays.

Of the 40 to 50 people employed by Amici, half are O.S.U. students. "They bring an enthusiasm to their work like I've never seen before," says owner Joan Presutti. "I think it's these young, energetic people who have really made our concept work."

Every day is a new "first" at Amici, having been reopened since just last fall. "We're really looking forward to graduation, to continue the tradition," says Joan. "And we'll be gearing up for our first full football season before too long." The spirit is genuine. Welcome back, Amici.

STUDENTS: Get to know the old

"It is a lot of company to me, to see people run up and down the street. I'm just a shut-in...that is all you can call me."

Those are the words of Oliver, 74, a black-lung disease patient who gets his meals home delivered thanks to LifeCare Alliance, a local charity.

Oliver is one of many Columbus senior citizens in need of company.

Senior citizens can do many things by themselves. They can cook, they can clean and they can take out the garbage.

But they are alone. They spend many hours thinking or trying not to think. They watch television or simply, like Oliver, look through the window.

They need company. And OSU students can provide it.

The benefits will be divided both ways.

Many OSU students live in an artificial community inflated by young people who share the same worries and experiences. It is a very limited community, one that can be expanded by participating in programs that help the old and the handicapped.

The anecdotes, mistakes, triumphs of the elderly — they can't be re-lived; but they can be told and learned. Experience cannot be bought, one must earn it. And helping those in need is a worthwhile way of doing so.

Many of us will be confronted with personal problems concerning our parents and relatives when they grow old. They will look to us for solutions. But we may be unprepared if we are not familiar with the environment particular of their age.

Now is the time to do something about it.

There are many ways to help:

- Talking and providing company
- Volunteering to deliver meals
- Buying groceries or prescriptions
- Providing transportation
- Doing household chores

Many charities in the central Ohio area help care for the elderly and handicapped. Contact them through the United Way of Franklin County. They need your help.

AIDS: Respect private lives

President Reagan's plan for mandatory AIDS testing of prison inmates and for those applying for marriage licenses completely misses the mark.

Instead of invading the privacy of these individuals, the government should focus its efforts and spend more money to educate those who are at high risk of contracting the disease. The government should focus on educating the general public, not randomly testing it.

The president's new plan doesn't target those groups deemed to be at a high risk of contracting the disease. People applying for marriage licenses are not part of the that population group.

Contrary to Reagan's plan, high-risk individuals should be advised, not ordered, to seek testing at their own discretion.

Also, the plan gives no clue about what the consequences of a positive test will be. Will a couple be denied a marriage license if either one tests positive for AIDS?

Since there is no cure for the disease, this testing may be an easy way for the government to blacklist those who test positive.

Reagan has promised confidentiality, but will he be able to enforce it?

If the government really cares about stopping the spread of the disease, it should focus on educating Americans on how to avoid contracting it, and on what steps to take if they do.

More explicit education about AIDS, not an invasion of privacy, is what is needed to control the spread of the disease.

Rooms don't always make grade

At the beginning of every quarter, I am always anxious to receive my schedule and find out which out-of-the-way classroom my classes have been scheduled in.

Normally, there is at least one building on the schedule I have never heard of.

This is an amazing fact in itself since I have been at Ohio State five years and it seems like I have been in every possible building.

Nope. They always seem to find yet another basement to hold a class.

Next I encounter the problem of locating a campus map.

Another major hassle. The only map I received was with the master schedule which by this time, two months later, is lining the cat's box.

After I get my hands on a map, the next major feat is to figure out the two-letter building symbol on the schedule.

Does DE mean Denney or Derby Hall? What is the problem of spelling out the whole word? There is a lot of space left on the schedule.

Next comes the problem of locating the building on campus. The actual buildings look a lot different than the drawings on the map.

Brent Snow
Lantern Reporter

Once I finally find the building, usually 10 minutes after the class has started, I prepare myself for the worst.

When I hear that my math class is in room 005 of the Electrical Engineering building, I know that means trouble.

I go through twisted halls all the way to the basement.

The rooms down there all look like they've been used in "Night of the Living Dead," or maybe "The Creature That Stopped Breathing and Became a Mixed-Up Zombie."

After I finally find a seat, near a radiator pipe hissing steam in my direction, I ask myself a question...how am I ever going to concentrate? Worse yet, how in the hell will I pass this course?

Everything seems to be going against me. I'm in a room that looks like a dungeon, the instructor has a hard time making himself understood and worst of all I hate math.

So there I sit all quarter in a room with tiles off the floor, rain coming through the windows, water on the floor and pipes banging louder than my instructor can speak.

The Communications Laboratory building is another fine example of a horrible place to attend a class. First of all, you have to go through an alley just to get there. Once you do, you wish you hadn't.

It looks like it should be torn down. Actually, come to think of it, it almost is. The lighting is poor, wires hang from the ceilings, the floor in this winner doesn't even have tile. It's made of cement.

I might as well save some money and take my classes in my garage at home.

I decided to check this matter out and find out why students are placed in rooms such as these.

Rooms are assigned by a computer according to specific needs of the instructor, such as size of class, number of blackboards, outlets for overhead projectors and use of maps or screens.

The computer assigns the rooms after evaluating the information.

Now, would someone please tell me how the computer is to know what shape the room is in?

Computers don't feel the cold, don't hear the pipes, don't have to trip over loose tiles on the floor, and don't smell the stale sandwich that got left in a desk drawer.

It seems to me it would be a good idea if the rooms were inspected by a human being at the end of every quarter to see just what kind of shape they are in.

This is definitely one case where a human can not be realistically replaced with a computer.

U.S. misinterprets Japanese market

Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone came to see President Reagan to ease the trade friction between the United States and Japan at the end of April.

The dollar was still getting weaker and the Japanese yen was getting stronger.

The issue of trade conflict between the United States and Japan is often discussed at a political and economical level, but an important aspect of international trade we tend to ignore is the consumers in the other countries.

In any culture, people who buy imported products live in different environments and have different value systems. So when you do business with other countries you need to know whether the people there need your products.

For example, in Tokyo, I have seen many foreign cars. However, in Japan we drive on the left side of the road so that the driver's seats are on the right side.

Etsuko Motoki

Most of the foreign cars are too big to get around the narrower streets in Japan, and in some regions, flashy gangsters drive large foreign cars. If your left arm is tanned, people might suspect you might be a gangster. We call this "Yakuza-yake" (gangster-suntanning).

Japanese car manufacturers make cars with steering wheels on the left side in order to export them. American manufacturers, on the other hand, don't make cars with the wheel on the right to be exported to Japan and other countries. Then they complain that Japanese don't buy their cars.

Also in Japan, you cannot sell huge refrigerators. They just don't fit in the smaller Japanese kitchens. Japanese housewives go grocery shopping almost everyday so that they don't have to store much food in the refrigerators.

The problem boils down to American businessmen not doing as much market research as Japanese businessmen do. American businessmen do not seem to study the cultures and people's needs in the countries with which they want to do business.

Kent Gilbert, a corporate attorney from California, and a popular television character in Japan, said an American businessman came to see him with very nice leather wallets hoping to sell them in Japan.

Gilbert told him that he could not sell his wallets because Japanese bills are too large to fit into them.

This story sounds like a joke. But this kind of thing happens too often, making ignorance of cultures a serious problem in the international market.

Japanese manufacturers are a little more conscious of their consumers' needs than American manufacturers. This is one of the reasons why Japan has succeeded in the international trade.

Of course, some American-based companies like Coca-Cola and McDonald's have been very successful in the Japanese market. They study and know about consumer behaviors. For example, Coca-Cola manufactures a smaller, skinnier can marketed especially for Japanese.

It is high time for the Americans to go beyond their communities and see what is going on around the world with their eyes opened a little wider.

It's time to sell your books back again

"Four and eight, twelve. OK?" said the man behind the refund counter before I had even set my two books down.

What was I going to do — argue? After all, it was $12 more than I had before, and I certainly didn't want to wait in line at another store to see if I could get a better price.

In fact, chances are that I would have received the same price at any of the three major bookstores — OSU Bookstores, Long's or SBX.

Each of the three stores has the same general policy concerning buying back used books.

If a book is going to be used again the following quarter and is in decent condition, each of the three stores will buy it back at 50 percent of the current price of the book.

Dawn Plante
Lantern Reporter

"Even if you bought it for $15 and the new price is $20, you'd get half of the higher price," said Robert Carlson, director of the Derby branch of the OSU Bookstores.

Professors are expected to place their book orders for the following quarter in advance so that the bookstores know which books are going to be used again.

"If the professors haven't turned in their book orders, then we can only give back the wholesale price, which is lower," Carlson said.

"Condition has a little bit to do with it, but not much unless it's in really bad condition," said SBX Manager Paul Watkins.

However, the bookstores will not buy back old editions of books, workbooks or lab manuals.

In most cases, each store carries a third of all the books that are going to be needed by all the students of a certain class.

But there are exceptions. For example, the Math department deals exclusively with Long's, and the Social Work department deals only with SBX.

"If you had every book in one store, you'd have a store as big as the Northland Mall," said Michael Lane, assistant manager of Long's.

About the only way to avoid waiting in line to sell back books is to study in advance and return them before finals week, Lane said.

"Wednesday and Thursday of finals week are the really busy days, since most people are done then," Watkins said.

The busiest times that week depend on the final exam schedule, since most people return their books right after their finals, he said.

Former guard recovering from disc surgery

By Tim Koehler
Lantern staff writer

She had everything going for her.

Liana Coutts came to Ohio State with many high school credentials. As an OSU freshman, she started as a guard on the women's basketball team, which was defending three consecutive Big Ten championships and would eventually make it four that year.

From then on, her career began taking an elevator ride.

A coaching change and a change of philosophy had Coutts watching more games from the bench her sophomore season. She was not accustomed to the role of a benchwarmer. This was not her style; she was determined more than ever to regain her starting position.

In the autumn of her junior year, that dream seemed to be a reality. Graduation had hit the guard position hard and Coutts had been a projected starter for the new season. She was once again feeling good about herself.

During a preseason, intrasquad scrimmage, Coutts extended herself high to pull down a rebound. One of her teammates undercut her and she tumbled to the hardwood floor. She pulled herself up and went about her business.

"I couldn't show anybody I was hurt," Coutts said.

As time passed, she began to develop back spasms at the end of practices. She said she mentioned her discomfort to the trainer, but didn't feel it was anything to worry about at first. The spasms soon hampered her during practices.

University doctors diagnosed the condition as a herniated or bulging spinal disc.

A few days before last Thanksgiving, Coutts quit playing basketball. She began receiving all forms of treatment to ease the pain. Trips to the hospital were becoming frequent. She was confined to long periods of bedrest.

"I was in a lot of pain," Coutts said. "It was difficult to walk. I couldn't even touch my toes. I literally took my exams on the ground."

Finally, after visiting numerous doctors, she had disc surgery on Jan. 9.

Questioning the ethics of her operation, Coutts said, "I think it was a real indecisive thing that could have been handled much quicker."

Because of the nature of her injury, her progress is going to be slow.

"You can't rush it," Coutts said. "That's a gamble I don't want to take. I don't want to wreck everything I've worked for up until now."

The first part of her rehabilitation began with walking stairs.

Liana Coutts

J. Murphy/the Lantern

Soon she began using a therapeutic pool and a stationary cycle. Just recently she began using weight machines, with limited pressure added.

Currently, she has two years of college eligibility remaining and plans to use them.

"I could graduate on time and start on a master's (degree) or drag it out (for a bachelor's degree)," said Coutts, a junior photography major.

Being laid-off from sports has been difficult for Coutts to accept. As a youth, she gained her tough-playing spirit by competing against the boys of Delaware, Ohio.

"I played little league baseball," she said. "At the time, girls weren't allowed to play, so Mom signed me up as Lee. That's how I got my nickname."

She went through similar situations in junior high basketball and high school varsity soccer. A year after she played on the boys junior high basketball squad, the school organized a girls team.

As for being the only female on all male teams, Coutts said, "I never had too much problem with that. Not even at the varsity level."

Frank Dalton, the girls' basketball coach at Delaware Hayes High School, got Coutts thinking about playing basketball. Both Coutts and Dalton joined a program which had not won a conference game in two years. Their first year together, the team finished with a record of 6-16, but by Coutts' senior year they finished 23-2 and made it as far as the regionals in the state tournament.

"I was there when we were getting beat by 30 points and everybody's doormat," said Coutts.

"She's not the most gifted player I've had here," Dalton said. "The difference was her commitment to make things happen."

Dalton said Coutts is a small player, but has good quickness and strength for her size.

Those qualities were echoed by former OSU women's basketball coach and current Stanford women's basketball coach Tara Van Derveer, who recruited Coutts.

Other major colleges that sought Coutts services were Colorado, Missouri and Indiana State.

Coutts said that upon her visit to Ohio State, she knew there was no other place she wanted to go and it was close to home. However, she didn't want to commit herself right away.

Van Derveer said Coutts was the last player to sign that year, behind Tracey Hall, Rhonda Winters and Joni Mazzola.

"She wanted to run and she fit into that system," said Van Derveer. "She is very competitive and she's a gym rat, always the last one off the floor following practice."

"She helped me out," said Yvette Angel, a former Buckeye teammate and graduate assistant for Michigan State women's basketball team. "I challenged her and she always rose to meet that challenge."

Despite those on-court battles, Angel and Coutts have remained good friends.

A new challenge arose her sophomore season. Van Derveer resigned to take over a rebuilding program at Stanford and the Buckeyes hired Nancy Darsch. Caught in the middle of a strategy change was Coutts.

"I couldn't identify with what the coaches wanted," she said. "I really can't tell you if anything I would have done would have mattered."

She said it is difficult to talk about her sophomore season, because she worked hard in practice and saw mostly late game situations. Her attention to basketball was diverted elsewhere.

In comparison to her sophomore and junior seasons, neither is easier to deal with. However, this year she knew she was physically unable to perform.

"I will never take anything for granted again," Coutts said.

SUMMER QUARTER INTRAMURAL OFFICIALS NEEDED "NO EXPERIENCE REQUIRED"

Fellowship. Fun. Meet friends. Year round employment. A job you will enjoy!
The Intramural Sports Department is looking for students who are interested in officiating summer quarter intramural sports. Sport opportunities available include basketball, flag football, innertube water polo, softball and volleyball.

Prior experience is not necessary. We will train. Thorough training sessions are conducted for each sport. All officials will have the opportunity to officiate practice games and to work with an experienced person.

Can you play and officiate? Yes! We encourage our officials to participate!

Come join us for the summer. It is a great job! Call 292-7671 and ask for "Mugs", Beau, or Bruce, or stop by the Intramural Sports Office, 106 Larkins Hall, 337 West 17th Avenue.

FITNESS SCHEDULE

Just because it will soon be time for finals and break week doesn't mean you have to eliminate fitness activities from your schedule.

Fitness activities will be offered according to the following schedule beginning June 8th and ending June 19th.

Aerobics

CO-REC VOLLEYBALL FINALS

Starting in April, a total of 120 teams participated in either recreation or power co-rec volleyball. We have seen many old and new teams bump, set and spike their way to the Finals. Unfortunately, only a few teams could survive throughout the heated playoffs. At this time, we'd like to congratulate those teams who sprung to the top of their division and all other teams who participated this spring.

SOMETHING SPECIAL FOR SUMMER!

In the mood for something "special" this summer? The Department of University Recreation and Intramural Sports will be coordinating a series of non-traditional special events this summer for students (spring or summer enrollment), faculty and staff. Some of the possible activities include: outdoor volleyball, breakfast bike ride to Plain City, frisbee golf, a biathlon (swim and run), canoe races and stick ball. To express interest or acquire more information, please contact either Diane Jensen or Danell Haines at 292-7671.

SOFTBALL SLUGGERS

Jim Salcius hit 14 homeruns to outslug the competition and win the Softball Homerun Derby. the Derby was held May 9 at the Coffey Road softball field.

Rudy Ridenbaugh and Alan Harness tied for runner-up honors with 13 homeruns each.

Congratulations to these heavy hitters! If you think you can do better, be sure and sign up for next year's Derby!

SUMMER FUN

Don't fret! Spring Intramurals are drawing to a close, but summer intramurals are just around the corner! The Department of University Recreation and Intramural Sports will be offering the following activities this summer:

T-SHIRTS AND TROPHIES

If you were an intramural champion or runner-up this quarter, you deserve an award and the Department of University Recreation and Intramural Sports is going to give you one!

Individuals and winning team captains can pick up their champion and runner-up awards until June 5 in the North Hall of the 2nd Floor of Larkins Hall (near the women's towel room). Awards can be picked up between 3-7 p.m.

Individuals, independent teams, and sorority divisions, will receive t-shirts for their efforts, while fraternity divisions will receive trophies. Any team winning t-shirts will be allotted one shirt for each player. Additional players (substitutes, fans, coaches, etc) can purchase extra shirts for $5 apiece through their team captain.

You must bring an I.D to receive the awards and captains must take responsibility for distributing the t-shirts to team players. For more information about awards you can call Gene Harper at 292-7671.

Don't forget to pick up your award. You deserve it!

Fun, luck fuse 'Fuzzbox'

By Rob Mosbacher
Lantern staff writer

In June of 1985, four young women from Birmingham, England, instantly formed their band moments before its first gig.

They played three songs — an original, Norman Greenbaum's "Spirit in the Sky" and Peggy Lee's "Fever."

It was the first time the three 16-year-olds and one 20-year-old played music together. It was also essentially the first time Fuzzbox played music at all.

"We were terrible," said Jo, Fuzzbox's bassist. "I'd forgotten the bass line to our song. But we got along cool."

After its second performance, Fuzzbox was offered a recording contract with Vindaloo Records. Fuzzbox took the chance.

"We weren't going to turn it down," Jo said (just first names in this band).

The public must not have thought Fuzzbox was too terrible. Jo said the debut extended-play album, "XXX Rules and Regulations," sold 50,000 copies, reaching number 41 on the British music charts.

At this point, I found all of this a little hard to believe: four borderline musicians play two gigs and put out an extended-play album that sells 50,000 copies? Sounds pretty shakey. Sounds like every other group like Frankie Goes to Hollywood or Boy George. A lot of English hype, but not much musical substance.

"People think we concocted (the story) for publicity purposes," said Jo from a Toronto hotel before Monday's midnight show at El Mocambo Club. "But it's 100 percent true."

OK, I believe her. Mainly because the idea of absolute beginners selling 50,000 records is too cool not to believe. Besides, pop music can always use a good poke in the eye.

"We're not really brilliant musicians," Jo said. "But no one's perfect are they? Even the film stars. You know they've got spots under the makeup."

On its new album "We've Got a Fuzzbox and We're Gonna Use It," Fuzzbox, lead vocalist Maggie, Jo's older sister; Tina, drums, and Vicky, vocals, looks and sounds like a primitive fusion of the Go-Gos and the Sex Pistols. But Jo said Fuzzbox is too often compared to America's rock'n'roll sweethearts, the Bangles, simply because both are all-female bands.

"Bob Marley and the Smiths must be the same because they're all blokes," Jo said.

Jo said the current tour, Fuzzbox's first trip across the Atlantic, including stops in New York, Washington D.C., Philadelphia and Boston, has received good response and has been getting better as it goes along. Jo said the acappella versions of "Do Run Run" and "Leader of the Pack" go over well with audiences.

"If you want to enjoy yourself, you will," Jo said. "If you come looking for Dire Straits proficiency, you might be disappointed."

Fuzzbox will perform 9 p.m.

Wednesday at Staches, 2404 N. High St. Tickets, available at Schoolkids, Singing Dog, Magnolia and Staches, are $5, advance, $6 at the door.

Those interested can meet Fuzzbox at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday at Schoolkids Records, 1990 N. High St.

Student deals with deadly job

A Lantern reporter witnessed a drug transaction outside Hagerty Hall between a dealer and a student.

The dealer, who the reporter later found out was also a student, used a school book and two manila envelopes to make the transaction. Although the deal was conducted in the open and in the middle of the afternoon, no one seemed to notice.

When the dealer saw our reporter, he paused, sat down and told his story on the condition that the reporter didn't go to the police. This is his story.

"It's fast money, but I wouldn't recommend the job to anyone," a campus drug dealer says. "When you sell drugs, there are some job hazards — death for one."

Rick is an "on-again, off-again" sophomore from Columbus. He's 23 years old and sells drugs for a living in a campus territory that includes the Ohio Union, campus bars and an occasional party.

Rick said he makes between $1,000 and $5,000 a week, depending on what he sells. "I only deal with marijuana, cocaine, LSD and, occasionally, speed," he said. "I don't deal in angel dust (PCP), heroin or valium, he said, because there's no market on campus for those drugs."

He said he sells drugs in Columbus because it's easy. "In the bigger cities there is too much competition," Columbus, he said, is a good market for a dealer.

"There are kids with money, kids who want to have fun, kids who don't give a damn."

Rick said he began doing drugs when he was in the eighth grade at a Columbus public school.

"I started smoking weed, but I never did more than that...OK, I experimented a couple of times, but I didn't want to screw my brain up," he said.

Rick said he stopped doing drugs soon after he began selling them three years ago. "I need a level head for business," he said.

Rick's success in the business is evident. From his expensive clothes to his sports car, he's reaping the monetary benefits of a risky business.

When Rick talks about his drugs sales, it's in a matter-of-fact tone. "I'm hardened now," he said. "You get used to it. I don't care if there's an addiction or a bad reaction. Business is business."

Rick said he plans on graduating some day with a business degree. "I could use the extra business knowledge," he said. "I don't want my clients to think that I'm not a good businessman." Plus, he added, "School can be very helpful. It provides me with a lot of clients."

He said he doesn't mind, though, if he never finishes school because he's living a good life now.

"I drive a nice car, wear nice clothes and live real nice," he said. "The only thing I don't have is job security and retirement funds, but you don't see many drug dealers that live long enough to collect social security."

Selling drugs, he said, is as "risky as it gets."

"Yeah, it's rough. Police scare me. Sooner or later they might get me — that's life. It's the risk I chose to take. I can't cry about it when it happens."

The police, as Rick said, are only one risk. Death is another. "Last September my best friend Tim got in the way of a bullet," Rick paused for a moment. "It was sad, but not unexpected."

Although Tim died, Rick seems almost unaffected by the tragedy. "A lot of times drug dealers get beat or killed when someone's trying to hold us up for easy money. I got robbed once myself. They didn't stop with lifting my wallet though, they raped my girlfriend and I was forced to watch."

He said that because he is a drug dealer, he couldn't go to the police about the robbery and rape. "I couldn't do anything about it. She understood."

After the rape, Rick said, he broke things off with his girlfriend. "I realized that I didn't need a relationship. It's too dangerous. You never know when someone will get hurt or disappear," Rick took off his Ray-Ban sunglasses, bent his head and rubbed his eyes.

His voice dropped. "It was the right thing to do, I guess."

Rick's hand bears testimony to the violence of the robbery. A scar runs from the back of his middle finger down to his thumb and around onto his palm. He couldn't go to the hospital, he said, for the same reason he couldn't go to the police.

Rick had his hand sewn together by friends. The puckered skin and staggered stitches mark stick out like a badly mended rag doll.

He said he doesn't worry anymore about getting hurt. "I've come to realize that I'm an important part of the cycle. I'm the middleman."

"I'm sure the guys in Miami don't want to come up here and sell the shit themselves. They're too busy living it up."

Rick said Miami is the headquarters for his drug supply. "I'm not going to give you exact details, but I fly down there a couple times a month. I try not to hang out down there too much because the guys could be under surveillance."

He said he normally uses the United Parcel Service to transfer his drugs from Florida to Cleveland. Then he drives up to Cleveland, where he splits his supply with a partner, and drives back down to make his deliveries.

I have regular customers and occasionally some one-timers. I deliver my drugs in the bars, in the bathroom. My clients know where and when to meet me. It's a nice arrangement, but I almost got caught twice," he chuckled.

Rick said the residence halls are off limits for him. "The dorms are not risky. Roommates talk, it's bad news."

He said he does sell drugs in the Ohio Union, though, during finals week. "I can unload a few pills to those late night students."

Rick said pills are difficult to sell because they are easily accessible. "Kids get pills from their parents or from the medicine cabinets at home and they sell them to their friends for a buck. I don't need this type of petty competition."

He said he will continue to sell drugs until he is arrested or killed.

"I'll continue to deal until the time comes. I know that I can't just stop. They wouldn't look too kindly on that. They would send someone up who would say 'Rick, you're history.' Bang."

Suppliers deal with reduced demand

By Andrew Coffey
Lantern staff writer

According to some users and dealers on campus, marijuana use has decreased, and cocaine use has dramatically fallen off because of fear of addiction.

Dealing to fraternity brothers

Billy, an education major and graduating senior, started selling marijuana in the beginning of his junior year from his fraternity house.

Billy said that since he started dealing there have been fewer and fewer fraternity members dealing drugs. "When I first started I knew of five or six other people that sold. Now maybe there are two or three major dealers."

"As far as coke goes, that's gone down a lot. In the beginning of my junior year just about everyone I knew used cocaine every weekend," Billy said. "I don't hear anybody talking about it now. Maybe it's harder to get."

Billy estimated that in two years he may have sold as much as 70 pounds of marijuana. "I sold it with no hassle and no problems. I probably could continue to do it now, but I want to get out while I still can. I made a profit, and I went through college."

Billy said he receives his marijuana from an Arizona dealer via the mail. It would come in a box, wrapped in plastic, and wrapped again in paper. Sometimes the delivery would be to a friend or relative's home, and sometimes he would have it sent to his fraternity house under an assumed name.

Billy dealt for the most part in one-quarter, one-half and 1 ounce bags, receiving shipments of two or three pounds at a time, which he could sell in two to three weeks.

"If you have 70 guys living with you, and everybody knows you're selling it, it takes no time at all to get rid of it. It was just a pain in the ass...putting everything into bags. That and weighing it was the biggest hassle."

Billy said the mail service doesn't have search dogs for mail traveling within the United States, but he was still afraid the first time he sent marijuana to someone else.

"The first time I sent it Greyhound (by bus) to a friend. I was really nervous carrying it up there. I wrapped it in birthday paper and wrote to my little brother, 'or something. I went all out, and made up names. Then it was late, like four hours late. I was sweating' bullets that whole time."

Billy said he used to sell bags weighing between an ounce and a quarter pound to dealers in other fraternities who would then sell it in smaller quantities in their own house.

"In some fraternities, they just smoke where they want when they want. Their dog is probably stoned 24 hours a day," Billy said. "Most kids just keep their window open and put a towel under the door."

Billy said that although there were few dealers in the fraternities who had as much marijuana as he had, there is at least one second-hand dealer in almost every fraternity on campus.

Just saying no

Dennis and Joan, both 22-year-old OSU students, seem like a somewhat unlikely couple. He's a sports fan, round-faced, likes to drink and share his opinions. She's slim, demure, smooth and well-spoken, but not overly polished.

Dennis and Joan have both used drugs for several years, but because of various reasons, they're both cutting back.

Dennis' apartment south of campus showed the wear of generations of students before him. The screen door leans broken against the wall where posters of David Byrne and Joy Division hang, overlooking alumni stacked on end in front of the TV. Dennis sits in an armchair while Joan sits cross-legged on one of two thrift-store couches.

"When I was 11 I smoked it (marijuana) with my friend who had older brothers who smoked pot and listened to Led Zeppelin," Joan said. "It was a fun thing and it made me giggle. I think that was more just my nerves when I was 11."

"When I was in high school," said Dennis, "(and) the alarm went off in the morning. I'd just hit the stereo, smoke a bowl (of marijuana) and go take a shower, smoke another bowl and go to school. That's a pretty bad way to live."

If you have 70 guys living with you, and everybody knows you're selling it, it takes no time at all to get rid of it. It was just a pain in the ass...putting everything into bags. That and weighing it was the biggest hassle.

—fraternity member, drug dealer

"I didn't get high so much for the buzz, but to sit back and relax. But now I just get paranoid. I find that if I smoke pot for a few days in a row it takes a week to get back on track."

Dennis and Joan occasionally take psychedelic drugs, such as mushrooms and LSD. "I think acid's dangerous. The first time it gets rebounding you start to think now this is going to look like this," and you start weirding out. But mushrooms don't do that to you," Dennis said.

"I see nothing wrong with mushrooms," Dennis said. "They don't make you feel bad. It's like a vacation almost; you see things in a different light. I walk through campus and I think what an amazing place this is, and all the minds that have walked through here. The first time it gets boring, I won't do it anymore."

Dennis said he thinks people are using drugs for different reasons today than they were in the past. "I don't think drug use is political at all anymore. I like when they tried in the '60s, but I think drugs hurt them in a way. It turned a lot of people off who could have helped them out."

Drug use is "not something everybody has to go through," Dennis said, "but if you do, I don't think there's anything wrong with it. I think most people pull out of it."

Joan said she used to smoke marijuana three or four times a week, but now with school and work, she doesn't have as much time for it. "It's not only the time you spend smoking it, and the hour it lasts, it's the three or four hour range that you just feel tired and kind of stupid," she laughs. "Just say no."

Dennis has some reservations about Nancy Reagan's anti-drug campaign. "I think the just-say-no thing is good in a way, but they've taken it way too far. I wish Nancy Reagan would show a little more compassion, because she's brainwashing these little kids. I think the trend is dangerous because it's very judgmental."

But Billy disagreed. He said he feels the just-say-no campaign is good.

"Maybe Nancy Reagan is starting to affect society," Billy said. "As far as I'm concerned, that's great, because I'm going to be a teacher. It makes it a lot easier if the kids aren't coming to school high."

Dennis and Billy both said they think the just-say-no campaign has caused marijuana and cocaine use at Ohio State to decline in recent years.

"Maybe I'm just out of touch," Dennis said, "but you just don't see it as much anymore. I don't think there's a coke epidemic on our campus. I think the people who got hooked on coke are the younger inner city kids and the people who are in their 30s who grew up when drugs were a more acceptable thing to do."

Dennis and Billy disagree on the issue of drug testing. "As far as athletes go, I think they're in the public's eye, kids are looking up to them and they should be tested," Billy said. "But they would have to do it on a nationally basis. It would have to be law that everybody be drug tested."

"I don't think they should be testing the

Reasons for use differ from '60s

By Lisa Cayton-Stockdale
Lantern staff writer

Not only are college students using drugs less often than they did in the '60s, they are using them for different reasons, according to an OSU professor of sociology.

Simon Dinitz said in the '60s students used drugs as a way to make a social statement against society, but now students use drugs for recreational reasons. "What was once a lower class phenomenon was transformed during the riotous '60s into a middle class state of protest," Dinitz said. "Today drug use is a noble part of society."

"When I say students use drugs as a recreation, that doesn't mean drugs are no longer a problem, but the bulk of the problem is not at the college level," he said.

"Everyone from the president's wife on down is excited about drug use right now," he said. "Unfortunately, the crusade is targeted at the wrong group of people."

Dinitz said the government should be putting money into finding ways to help homemakers, who are hooked on prescription drugs, and ways to prevent prison inmates from addiction, instead of concerning themselves with students who are using drugs for recreational purposes only. Jeffrey Coffman, assistant professor of psychiatry and the head of consultation services at University Hospital, said hallucinogenic drugs, such as LSD, are not as commonplace today as they were 10 years ago, but cocaine addiction is becoming a more serious problem.

"Marijuana and alcohol are still commonplace but not used quite as much as they used to be, Coffman said.

"There is still a problem with drug and alcohol abuse to the extent that people are damaging themselves," he said. "Coffman said most of the patients who seek help are either users or abusers of prescription drugs."

"Sometimes a patient can become addicted to a prescription drug that was prescribed to help ease severe pain caused from a disease such as cancer," he said. "It is not like they wanted to use the drug in the first place and they are the ones who usually seek professional help."

Coffman said there are no in-house rehabilitation programs on campus for drug or alcohol abusers.

People who need help with physical addiction are usually referred to Shephard Hill Hospital, in Newark, or some other program around the state.

Fewer students bounced by bar owners

By Lisa Cayton-Stockdale
Lantern staff writer

"Let's face it, if all the bars on campus were abolished, everyone's grade point would go up," said Bradley Miller, owner and manager of Mean Mr. Mustard's, 1580 N. High St.

"I know drinking affects students' lives because people blow off school work to go out and drink," he said.

Miller has been the owner of Mean Mr. Mustard's since autumn quarter but he has worked at the bar for more than four years. He started as a bouncer.

"The only thing I see used in this bar is alcohol... but I believe the drug problem is just as prevalent or more prevalent than it used to be," he said.

Miller said Mustard's does not have as big a problem with people getting out of hand as some other campus bars might because an older crowd comes into the bar.

"The music is different and artsy and that...draws an older crowd. This is the main reason we don't have a need to cut people off very often," he said.

Ohio law states that bartenders must refuse to serve patrons who appear to be intoxicated. A bar owner that does not follow this policy can be fined or lose his or her liquor license.

The first time Miller was asked how often bartenders at Mustard's have to refuse to serve patrons who have had too much to drink, he said about once a week. Later in the interview, he changed his answer to about once a month.

"People who come in here are usually with friends, so they have someone to take care of them, and most of them don't have to drive home," Miller said.

Greg Revak, manager of Time Out, 16 W. Lane Ave., said it is not uncommon to quit serving a customer at least once a night.

"When I worked at Springbreak we would have to throw people out about 10 times a night," Revak said.

He said he finds it hard to believe that other campus bars throw people out only once in a while.

Revak said although he doesn't see much drug use in Time Out, he has caught men smoking marijuana in the restroom more than once. "That's only happened twice since I've been here and we just threw them out," he said. Revak has been the manager of Time Out since March.

Glenn Hunkele, manager of Papa Joe's, 1573 N. High St., said he does not believe there are alcohol or drug problems on campus.

"People come into bars to meet people, not to drink or get high," Hunkele said.

Hunkele has been the manager of Papa Joe's since October but he has worked at the bar for about two and a half years. He started out as a bartender.

"Most of the people who come in here do not leave drunk and I have never seen any drug use in here," he said.

"I can honestly say, students are not caught smoking marijuana here. They did four or five years ago," he said. "Drunk driving is a big issue and students don't have the money they used to."

Hunkele said Papa Joe's has to cut off someone's drinking about twice a week, usually on the weekends.

Students share drug, alcohol experiences

By Lisa Cayton-Stockdale

A freshman from Xenia said while he was in high school he smoked marijuana and did a lot of drinking. Since he has been at Ohio State he has continued to smoke and drink and now also does LSD and cocaine. He said he seldom has a problem getting the drugs he wants because he lives in Morrill Tower where drugs are easily available. He estimated that he spends about $15 a week on drugs and alcohol but said he does not believe his use of drugs affects his school work.

school but he now drinks once in a while. "I think I drink a little more now than I did as a freshman," he said. "I came from a small high school and until I got involved with dorm life I wasn't around alcohol." He said he has never seen anyone doing drugs in his dormitory, but he sees people drinking there all the time.

A senior from St. Marys said she did not take drugs or drink in high school but during her freshman and sophomore years at Ohio State she did a lot of drinking and experienced some marijuana a couple of times. She does not believe that her drinking affected her school work but now she drinks a lot less than she used to. "I just got tired of the bar scene and all that stuff," she said.

A junior from Columbus said he used alcohol in high school but no longer uses alcohol or any other type of drug. "I'm a Christian now and I don't need that stuff," he said. He said he used alcohol as a freshman and sophomore but got involved with a Christian fellowship on campus and no longer believes in the use of drugs. He said he thinks it is natural for students to use drugs more as a freshman or sophomore because underclassmen do not give much thought to reality.

Users told 'don't get caught'

By Sarah L. Christian

Between theory and practice, rules and regulations on drugs in the residence halls usually get muddled, said two OSU resident advisers.

Director of Residence Halls, Becky Parker, said university rules on drug use are strict, and residence officials will follow up on every piece of information they receive.

"Regardless of the amount (of drugs) or the resident's past behavior, we act on all information we get on offenses."

But many times officials are not made aware of offenses.

"At the beginning of the year I tell my residents what the law is and what the university rules are on drugs," said Mary, one of the resident advisers. "But I also tell them if they don't give me any reason to come into their rooms then I won't."

Mary and Michelle, another resident adviser, agreed that their advice to residents who want to smoke marijuana is basically, "don't get caught."

The University Student Handbook states the "Use, production, distribution, sale or possession of drugs or alcohol in a manner prohibited by Ohio law" violates the university's code of student conduct.

The Community Standards of Conduct also states that "residents are responsible for reporting use, cultivation, manufacture, sale and/or possession of illegal substances in their room to a hall staff person."

Parker said all drug violations go through the university judicial system. She said officials will not hesitate to involve the police when there is a violation of Ohio law.

There are many potential outcomes of drug violations, Parker said. "It really depends on the circumstances," she said. "There is no usual outcome."

Parker said in some cases housing contracts of the violators were canceled. There is also a probationary period or a change of residence halls for some, said another resident adviser.

Mary said she has had only one complaint from a resident about drug use on her floor this year. "I do look into a situation when I get a complaint," she said, "if it is bothering another resident then I try to stop it."

"If (the complaint) is about marijuana use, as it is with the one complaint, I confront the users and tell them to put it away," Mary said. "If they do, then I drop it. If I follow up and they haven't quit, then I would report them."

"If they keep themselves under control and I don't get any complaints from roommates I won't go looking for trouble," she said.

Both Mary and Michelle stressed that when they say they let people get away with drug offenses they mean the use of marijuana.

"In my opinion there is nothing wrong with a few guys sitting around on a Friday night smoking a bowl," Mary said.

She said if there were any indications of heavier drugs being used she would act immediately.

Michelle agreed. "I don't turn in anyone for using marijuana," she said, "but if it came to crack or cocaine or something like that, I wouldn't hesitate."

"I had a girl on the floor who almost killed herself dropping acid. The girl would have asphyxiated herself if someone hadn't pulled her head up from her own vomit."

"By the time I got there there was no evidence but those involved were confronted and know they are watched closely," Michelle said.

"But as far as busting someone for marijuana I think it would do more harm than good. It creates bad feelings between the RA and the residents," she said. "I try to be more of a friend, or a big sister looking out for my residents than an authority figure."

Both RAs said they believe there is a lot of drug use in the dorms. "The problem is we have to catch them," Mary said. "They are pretty good at hiding it, though."

Parker said the advisers are trained to know Ohio State does not look lightly on drug use. She said if she found a resident adviser was holding back information, the university would take action through the judicial process.

She said Ohio State does have its drug problems but that it is no more or no less of a problem than any other major university has. "I think the problem with drugs and alcohol is a reflection of society," Parker said.

Police say drug problem hard to pinpoint

By Lisa Cayton-Stockdale
Lantern staff writer

OSU police have arrested only three people on drug-related charges this year, but police agree the drug problem is widespread on campus.

Debbie Jones, an OSU police officer, said a lot of the crimes committed on campus are drug-related.

"A lot of the other arrests made, such as disorderly conduct, are drug-related," Jones said.

Of the three arrests, only one involved someone associated with the university, Jones said.

Dennis Hollern, an OSU police officer who specializes in narcotics investigations, said he knows there is a drug problem on campus, but it is difficult for the OSU police to do anything about it.

"It is hard for us to determine just how big of a problem we have on this campus, but the police are because it is kept very much under wraps," Hollern said.

"We work in a very confined area and we are legally bound to hire police officers over (age) 21," he said. "It is hard for us to make a buy based on these calls," Hollern said. "Even when the drugs are being used in our jurisdiction, it is hard to pass one of our officers off as a student," he said.

Hollern said students go to High Street, which is out of the jurisdiction of the OSU police, to get drunk or high and then come back onto the campus area and cause problems.

He said the average age of an OSU police officer is about 30 and it is difficult to recruit young people. "We kind of cut our own throats," he said. "I don't think three arrests to do in college but now the image of a college student has changed," Tilley said. "Students go to school to get an education, not to get high."

"I think the educational process has shown students drugs are bad for them," Tilley said.

"We don't have that many OSU students arrested on high drug charges and there is no overt place on that campus where you can go and see drugs being used or sold," he said.

Tilley said the college students who do use or sell drugs keep it very much underground because of a fear of getting caught.

He said the drugs most often used by college students are alcohol, marijuana and cocaine.

Day Classes

Exam Hour:	June 8 Monday	June 9 Tuesday	June 10 Wednesday	June 11 Thursday
8-9:48 a.m.	M/W/F 9	M/W/F 10	M/W/F 11	M/W/F 8
10-11:48 a.m.	T/R 9	T/R 10	T/R 11	T/R 8
1-2:48 p.m.	M/W/F 1	M/W/F 2	M/W/F 3	M/W/F 12
3-4:48 p.m.	T/R 1	T/R 2	T/R 3	T/R 12
5-6:48 p.m.				M/T/W/R 4

Students should confirm examination periods for individual classes with each instructor prior to making other commitments during finals week. Instructors shall announce any approved deviation to the published final examination schedule during the first week of classes and make appropriate arrangements for students with examination conflicts created by such deviation.

Classes meeting on Monday or on Tuesday or on a combination of days including Monday or Tuesday should use the first hour of the class period in determining the examination hour. For example, those classes meeting from 1 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. should use 1 p.m. instead of 2 p.m. when determining the time for the final examination.

Classes meeting on Wednesday only or on Thursday only should use the second hour of the class period in determining the examination hour. This will prevent conflicts with courses meeting only on Monday or Tuesday during those hours. Instructors of classes meeting only on Friday or Saturday should call the Scheduling Office at 292-1616 to arrange time and a room for final examinations.

Classes which meet for two hours on a daily basis, a Monday/Wednesday/ Friday or Tuesday/Thursday schedule must use the first hour of the class meeting to determine their final examination time.

Classes starting later than the beginning of the hour are assumed to have started at the beginning of the hour.

containing the first portion of the class. For example, a 10:30 a.m. class is treated like a 10 a.m. class in determining the examination hour. Classes meeting in Bevis Hall, Mount Hall, Rightmire Hall, and Scott Hall will have examination hours of 8:30 - 10:18 a.m.; 10:30 a.m. - 12:18 p.m.; 1:30 - 3:18 p.m.; 3:30 - 5:18 p.m.; 5:30 - 7:18 p.m.

Common Evening

Final Examinations

Common final examinations will be given as an exception to the listed schedule when approved by department chairpersons, deans and the Scheduling Office, and an announcement is made to the class during the first week of classes that a common final examination will be given. Common final examinations will be restricted to evening hours of 6:00-7:48 p.m. and 8:00-9:48 p.m. during the first three days of the examination period. Conflicts generated by common final examinations must be resolved by the departments concerned.

Evening Classes

Classes that start at 5 p.m. or after are scheduled for a two-hour final examination beginning at the same hour as the regular class time. Classes that meet more than once a week are scheduled for their final examinations on the first meeting day that falls within the final examination period.

Instructors Please Note: If the regular class meeting time of evening classes is less than two hours, and starts at 5 p.m. or after, but before 7 p.m., survey your students for a possible conflict with another class. Should a problem exist, reach an acceptable alternate time with the entire class and contact your department chairperson to initiate a request to the Scheduling Office (292-1616) for a change of final examination time.

Weekend University

Weekend University should have their final examination on the last class meeting in the regularly scheduled classroom.

OSU Lima, Mansfield, Marion, Newark, and ATI
The final examination scheduled for OSU Lima, Mansfield, Marion, Newark, and ATI will be published separately by each campus office.

'Isolated' deaf student to transfer

By Michele Ohl
Lantern staff writer

John Freeman, Ohio State's first and only full-time residential deaf student, said Monday that he is transferring from Ohio State to the National Technical Institute for the Deaf, a branch of the Rochester Institute of Technology in Rochester, N.Y.

Freeman, a freshman from Westerville majoring in mechanical engineering, said he is leaving because he has had trouble studying and felt isolated from the more than 53,000 hearing students attending the university.

Richard Maxwell, assistant director of disability services, said there are four other totally deaf OSU students, but they attend part-time.

"These part-time students have not encountered the isolation from the hearing population that John, who lived in the residence halls, experienced," he said.

"We knew John was going to run into problems. The first individual in any program is going to have problems. We compounded those by having delays in getting equipment for John's dorm room, and a few other odds and ends," Maxwell said.

There are about 25 students at Ohio State who identify themselves as being hearing impaired. Some students with hearing impairments choose not to identify themselves. They use lip reading and volunteers to take notes for them in class, instead of using the assistance offered by the Office of Disability Services.

Freeman said he was sad to leave Ohio State because he made a lot of new friends and was starting to build good relationships with them.

"I never felt discriminated against by other students because I was deaf. Some conflicts arose but they were just normal conflicts with everyday people," Freeman said.

Freeman said studying alone was the hardest thing to cope with and he believes that the lack of deaf students at Ohio State added to his problems.

"I have tried to study with classmates who are not deaf, but it is hard to communicate one on one with an interpreter. It is not a very good way to study," Freeman said.

There are very few students on campus who know sign language.

Through Nancy Rife, an interpreter-coordinator for the Ohio Bureau of Vocal Rehabilitation, Freeman said he was transferring to the National Technical Institute for the Deaf because they have a better program with resources deaf students need to live normal lives.

Maxwell believes Freeman did the best he could with the facilities at Ohio State.

Maxwell said Ohio State offers interpreters for part-time deaf students, who are not supplied interpreters by the Ohio Bureau of Vocal Rehabilitation. Interpreters and audio systems called phonic ears, are used to magnify sounds for the hearing impaired for partially deaf students, he added.

"In an overall sense, I think with what we had at that point in time, we did everything we could possibly do to make life easier for John."

"Accommodations by the residence halls to make John's life easier, such as the installation of flashing lights on the smoke detector/fire alarm system, a door bell and a telephone with flashing lights when rung, were slow to be done," Maxwell said.

Maxwell said they attempted to get the equipment sooner but "the wiring, the availability of the equipment and a variety of other problems were encountered. Once we had the equipment, we could not always get it installed right away."

Freeman said he did not fully realize all the problems he would encounter at Ohio State.

"Well, it was the first time that I had been in college and I didn't know what to expect and I didn't know what I would get out of it. It was very new for me," he said.

Freeman has been deaf since he was 4-years-old. His deafness was caused by meningitis, an inflammation of membranes surrounding the brain and spinal cord caused by a bacterial infection.

He attended a public elementary school, but said it was so long ago that he doesn't remember having any problems then. He said he knew if he needed something, he had to ask for it and he had to work with whatever was provided.

Freeman said he did not have any problems in high school and graduated with honors from an all-deaf high school in Washington D.C. The school had specific programs for deaf students and a large deaf population who studied together, socialized together and did a variety of other things together, Maxwell said.

Freeman said he expects to find this same atmosphere at the institute he will be attending this fall.
