Group wants to improve state's economic status

> By Amy Aldridge Lantern staff writer

The Governor's Commission on Higher Education and the Economy has been meeting continuously since it was established on June 5; the subcommittees, however, have yet to make any recommendations.

Gov. Bob Taft charged the commission with looking at three sets of issues: Making Ohio competitive in the knowledge economy, promoting access and creating opportunities for all students and delivering results for public investments.

In order to evaluate these issues, the commission was split into the three subcommittees of Economic Competitiveness, Access and Success, and Measuring and Delivering

In the middle of Ohio State's contract negotiations with the Central Ohio Transit Authority, OSU and COTA celebrated six years of partnership.

"We're working on a new contract with COTA," said Mark Minor, undergraduate student government representative to the OSU/COTA partnership advisory committee.

"Our two main goals are to expand routes to cover the north and south residential areas that were cut by CABS and to keep the student fee constant," Minor said.

Ohio State students pay a $9 COTA fee each quarter, allowing the university to give a total of $1.3 million to COTA every

Some Ohio State students plan on joining a week-long party for Spring Break, others will choose an alternative itinerary.

Applications for the alternative Spring Break trips, which are coordinated by the Ohio Union and Student Affairs, are due Nov. 7 by 5 p.m. in room 211 of the Ohio Union. The trips provide students the opportunity to do community service throughout the United States.

staff is so actively engaging in following up on material, such as finding articles and issues to study, and bringing in people from across the nation to talk about the different issues."

Holbrook said she feels one of the most important things this commission has accomplished is getting people from the business, university and government sectors to talk to each other, because there is often a lack of communication between members of these three groups.

"When you sit down together for four to five hours at a time you really get to talk," Holbrook said. "There are people from much smaller schools, and you really do find very different perspectives depending on where you are from."

One of the main focuses of this subcommittee is looking at the performance of universities in areas which affect the economy, such as research.

"We are looking at things like what are the average starting salaries of graduate students and the percentage of students finishing college in four years," said Rep. Jimmy Stewart, R-Athens, another member of this subcom-

"Roughly a quarter or less of the state ends up in the higher education system," Stewart said. "If we could come up with a way to move the bulk of the population into higher education, the pay off from that increase would be a decrease in people's demand for social services.

Holbrook said another important focus of the committee is finding a way to keep graduate students in Ohio.

'Higher education is essential to the state; I hope that message is very clear," she said. "Higher education can be used to further enhance the economy of the state.'

The Economic Competitiveness subcommittee is focusing on this idea of linking the universities with economic development.

"The general belief among the members of this committee is that in Ohio," said Sen. Eric Fingerhut,

Fingerhut said one of the main ideas behind linking the universities to the economy is Technology

Technology Transfer is taking If more Ohio residents got into technology from within an organization and moving it out into the business sector," Fingerhut said. An example would be if a university increased their focus on helping faculty members who do research, then their research could be sold in the market, helping them take the next step in actually starting a business."

The idea is not only helping researchers start businesses but also getting businesses to locate near a university to use the researchers available there, Fingerhut said.

The Access and Success subcommittee is focusing on how accessible higher education is in Ohio, and the success of those who enter.

'As a result of looking at access into higher education, we are now looking at secondary education as well. This is the start of access into higher education," said Rep. Shawn Webster, R-Hamilton. "With success we are addressing our universities could be bigger those students who drop out of contributors to economic growth college or are ill-prepared. We want to see a seamless move from

The perception is that these communities have better schools, lower crime rates and less noise and traffic, he said.

Unwanted children called witches in Congo

By Sudarsan Raghavan Knight Ridder Newspapers (KRT)

BUKAVU, Democratic Republic of Congo — After her mother married for a second time, Aline Kabila felt her life would be better. But in this war-ravaged nation, where poverty and superstitions are plentiful, her stepfamily saw her as a curse: another mouth to feed, another body to clothe.

So they branded the 11-yearold girl a witch. They starved her. They beat her. And when Aline's half-brother fell deathly ill, they said she had cast a spell on him.

That's when they decided to get rid of the demons they thought were inside her. Her step-uncle poured acid over her head, face and rightarm. He almost killed her.

Across the Democratic Republic of Congo, thousands of girls dren have been branded witches and boys, as young as 4 years old, are accused by their families of practicing witchcraft. They are abused, abandoned and, in most cases, scarred for life. It's the latest addition to a long list of atrocities committed against children in this forgotten 5-year-old civil war.

Study confirms link between cancer, tanning

By Jessica Schuh Daily Illini (U. Illinois)

(U-WIRE) CHAMPAIGN, III. The use of tanning beds and other tanning devices to keep a bronze, summer glow year-round might be more dangerous than people think.

A new study in the Journal of the National Cancer Institute published on Oct. 15 found that the use of tanning beds is associated with an increase in the risk of developing malignant melanoma.

Marit Veierod of the University of Norway and colleagues surveyed 106,379 Norwegian and Swedish women about personal characteristics and exposure to press release. They followed up on the women's cancer status after an average of 8.1 years and found 187 cases of melanoma among the women, according to a press release from the Journal of the National Cancer Institute.

According to the study, several factors were associated with the disease, including use of tanning beds. Women who regularly used artificial tanning lights increased their risk of developing melanoma by about 55 percent.

The study noted that the most significant effects of UV exposure on melanoma occur during adolescence and early adulthood, and women who use artificial tanning lights once or more a month

Melanoma is a skin cancer that usually starts as a mole and can have a dark color or an irregular shape and grows quickly, said Dr. Derek Kenneaster, dermatologist at Carle Clinic in Urbana. The melanoma is that if it is not caught early, it can be deadly, he said.

"I usually tell a patient that there is no such thing as a safe tan," he said.

A tan is the body's response to DNA damage, he said. When the skin is exposed to UV light, it gets darker to protect itself from more exposure. Posters hang in every Alex Groszko, a University of Illinois senior in applied life studies, said she has not used a tanning bed for a long time and only goes if she is going to the beach and does not want to get sunburned. She said she knew tanning had health risks before the study came out, which is why she does not use tanning beds often. The study alone would not be enough to keep her from going back, she said.

"Everybody says everything is essentially bad for you in some relative manner," Groszko said.

Other students seemed more concerned about the findings.

No right to die

Law disrespects patients wishes

The Florida legislature had a busy hour and a half last Tuesday. The Senate passed a piece of legislation allowing the government to intervene in specific right-to-die cases in the state. A few minutes later, the Florida House passed the finalized version of the bill and about an hour after that, Gov. Jeb Bush signed it into law.

The bill allows Bush to intervene in cases in which the patient has left no living will, is in a persistent vegetative state, has had nutrition and hydration tubes removed and where a family member has challenged the removal of the tubes. In an odd coincidence, Bush was able to use the new law in the case of Terri Schiavo, a woman who has been in a persistent vegetative state since 1990 when her heart stopped because of a chemical imbalance.

In an apparent campaign to promote life above all else, Florida conservatives have gone too far in this instance. A court order on Oct. 15 ordered the removal of the tubes because Schiavo's husband insisted his wife did not want to be kept alive by artificial means. The Florida Supreme Court has twice refused to hear the case, the U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear the case and a Florida appeals court refused to block the earlier ruling.

The case has now fallen onto Constitutionality grounds. The Constitution clearly states no legislature can pass a law that overrides a court decision, especially when it comes to one specific case. Because the criteria for intervention are so specific, its obvious the law was passed just for this one case. The law also was passed to overturn the court's decision, despite the fact that the legislature cannot intervene in the court's decisions.

The other big issue in the case is the wishes of Schiavo. Her husband said she always claimed she didn't want to be kept alive, but the woman's family claim they never heard her say that. They were the ones who challenged the court's decisions and fulfilled the final part of Bush's law. Laurence H. Tribe, a law professor at Harvard, said the law violates her civil rights because it ignores that central argument. "Because the state is obviously not trying to determine what she wanted or would have wanted, but rather is deciding what should happen, it fundamentally violates her right to bodily integrity."

In the end, though, the law just doesn't seem right. In a matter of hours, the legislation was passed, the law was signed, and it was used to re-insert tubes into Schiavo's body. Having been the subject of debate for more than a decade now, the Florida legislature seems a little hasty to have rushed this legislation through the system so quickly — it is bound to be missing something, or it could potentially be used in future cases unrelated to Schiavo's. Maybe Bush and the Florida legislature should have taken a bit more time with this law and not interfered where they didn't belong.

Airport needs to stay quiet

Officials of the Ohio State Airport or Don Scott Field proposed a new $8.4 million renovation project that calls for the expansion of the north runway. Don Scott, located off West Case Road is near the Dublin and Worthington communities and ranks fifth in Ohio for its number of take-offs and landings. With more than 150,000 operations a year, Don Scott is expanding the runway from 3,000 to 6,000 feet. The flight path will be placed along Dublin-Granville Road through Worthington, causing many residents concern about an increase in poise.

Last week at a public forum, more than 150 people gathered to voice their opposition. Community members stated the jets already flying over their homes cause noise disturbances, and the expansion would invite more traffic, increasing the ruckus.

Demonstrating their dedication to stopping the expansion, some Worthington residents banned together to form the Worthingtonians Opposed to the Ohio State Airport Expansion, a group determined to preserve peace and quiet in their neighborhood. In response, Ohio State promised to investigate the noise issue before breaking ground, hoping to put residential

In addition to hiring a consulting firm to keep connected to the community, Don Scott officials plan to launch an environmental study that includes placing noise monitors around the area to measure the actual noise and compare it with the anticipated data. A noise complaint system may be

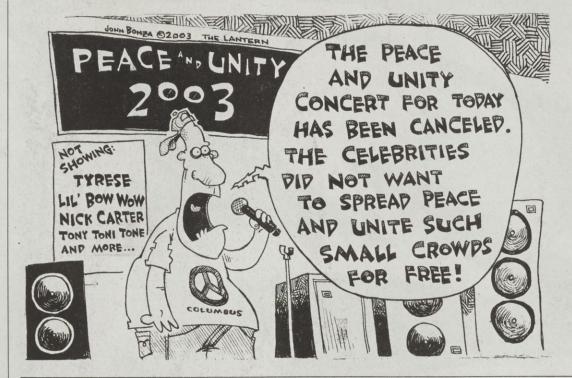

OSU is on the right track to see the runway expansion through. By addressing the needs of the community, and sincerely working to manage the potential noise problems the renovation may incur, the university is doing its best to respect and try to limit the noise over Worthington. Residents should feel assurance that their voice is being heard and visible action is

For people who don't live in Worthington, including some Don Scott officials, it's not easy to understand the noise concern facing the community. If conversations are being interrupted and people can't even hear in their own homes, every day life and comfort is being disrupted. For people who invested in a home in that area, reasonable noise levels should be maintained.

Because it is too early to gauge the noise the runway may cause, residents must try to trust that officials are working toward their cause. If built and the jet noise hits extreme levels, then it is OSU's responsibility to compromise with the community.

Don Scott Field is a self-supporting entity through the Department of Aerospace Engineering and Aviation. It is a valued part of OSU and provides many opportunities for students and surrounding communities. The airport recently/celebrated its 100th anniversary and should do nothing to jeopardize its history of excellence.

California cans spam

receiving volumes of e-mail about weight loss, debt consolidation and penis enlargement, millions of e-mailers around the country can, for a little while anyway, breathe a small sigh of relief.

The state of California declared its first major victory over the evil arm of e-mail spam Friday, with a judge fining PW Marketing and its owners, Paul Willis and Claudia Griffin, $2 million for illegally sending millions of unsolicited email to various accounts.

"Spam is an annoying invasion of privacy for our citizens and a costly burden to our businesses at a time when we're trying get the economy back on track," California Attorney General Bill Lockyer told to the Chicago Sun-Times.

Unfortunately, the grounds for prosecution are still shaky at this point. Forbes.com reports that California's law could most likely be stuck down because companies have a right to First Amendment speech freedoms and because a state cannot regulate interstate commerce, which includes advertising that may come from another state into mail accounts of users in California

So the law is flawed — most are in one way or another. But flawed or not, it is a crucial response to the problem occurring in most technology-crazed countries that people's desire to use technology often precedes their ability to use it properly.

Or in the case of spam, the courtesy to use it ethically.

But whether or not the law and its language can withstand future test cases, this victory will have an important resonance in other states — possibly even at the federal level — as unwanted and unregulated spam becomes more and more ubiquitous in inboxes across the country.

This court case also brings other debates to the forefront, especially as more attempts are made to regulate and order a public space with few rules and regulations and even fewer ways to put them in place.

It could be argued that keeping the Internet completely unregulated is one way to keep it a mass medium actually for the masses. Without the strict gatekeeping and corporate channeling that have destroyed the possibility of other mass media to be used by the public, the Internet can be something able to transmit personal information to a large audience.

But the sort of legal regulation
California has enacted only helps keep the Internet from being washed out by the advertising and commercialism that has allowed other mass media — namely television and radio — to fall into the hands of a select few with the money to fund it. By limiting the unwanted influx of spam — billions of bytes crowding email boxes everywhere — the law will only help to streamline a medium that could be in fear of transforming from a viable public forum to another marketplace.

What the continued attempts by the California legislature (which drafted the laws) and the attorney general (who enforces them) represent a realization that corporate and commercial infringement into the personal lives of Internet users must be curbed. Why this realization — flawed or not — is important is because legislatures on the state level are finally helping to regulate a technology quickly surpassing all other public media in influence.

In the end, it will be these limited regulations — if used properly — that will ensure the level playing field democracy the Internet has been triumphed for providing.

People take football way to seriously. They sit in front of the TV and yell profanities from noon on Saturday all the way to late Monday night. They second guess every decision made, and they talk about how terrible certain players are.

I have a name for these people. They are called wanna-be's.

The wanna-be's are usually people who did not play football. Or if they did, they weren't any good but think they know everything about the sport. In fact, they usually think they could do a better job coaching their favorite team than the team's coach.

The wanna-be's are at their peak during Ohio State football games. They are the people that make going to games miserable. They yell at everything, paint their faces, bring in illegal noise-makers, start cheers that no one understands, stand up the entire game and yell at the referees from three miles away.

Imagine the dad at your pee-wee football game who yelled to the coach from the sidelines to give his kid the ball more, and you'll have an idea of what I'm talking about.

There's a difference in supporting your team and being an idiot.

Cheering when your team makes a big play: Good. Yelling at the other team's manager and telling him to meet you outside after the game: Bad.

Wearing Ohio State clothing to a game: Good. Wearing no shirt and painting "Krenzel is God" on your chest: Bad.

How can football be so significant in a person's life that he is are unhappy for an entire week after the team loses? After Ohio State lost to Wisconsin a few weeks ago, I heard people saying everything from "I was so sick after the game that I couldn't eat anything until Wednesday," to "I'm going to get so drunk tonight to forget about the game."

Sure buddy, I'd be headed to the bottle too if I were you. You had a lot to do with the loss. Next time, try screaming through the TV a little louder so maybe Coach Tressel can actually hear what play you're calling.

Now don't get me wrong. I want the Buckeyes and the Browns (they're still gonna make the playoffs) to win just as much as the next guy. But I'm not going to break my hand punching a wall if Mo Hall fumbles.

What's funny is these people actually thing they're doing something to help out their team. They don't know they're the most annoying people in the world (next to drunk bums), and if you say anything to them, they tell you you're not showing any team spirit.

Yea, team spirit. And this usually comes from a guy who doesn't say two words in class all quarter and sits on his computer all day talking to people on Instant Messenger. But once he gets three beers in him before the game, he thinks he's the second coming of Neutron Man.

And as much as you think the players just love the way you support them, I'm sure they would be just as happy with the way you say they're terrible and tell your friends how you could have made that play after the loss.

They do have walk-on tryouts once a vear, you know?

year, you know? All wanna-be

All wanna-be's really do is tick people off. I've never heard of anyone who just had his TV screen broken by a beer bottle say, "It's alright; he should have made the catch. I've got another TV in my room."

So, to all of the wanna-be's out there, tone it down just a bit. Let other people enjoy the game. And remember, just because you scored the winning touchdown in a junior varsity football game six years ago, you don't know everything.

PSM conferences make OSU aware

As an active member of the Committee for Justice in Palestine, I want to send the Ohio State University our utmost respect and gratitude for allowing us to hold the Third National Student Conference on the Palestine Solidarity Movement here.

To those who oppose the conference, I would like you to remember that we are an academic environment, where students' voices deserve the utmost respect. Having the conference here gives all of the members in the OSU community an educational opportunity to learn about the conflict in the Middle East from a highly under-represented population of activists, scholars, teachers and sympathizers.

The claims that the Palestinian Solidarity Movement advocates violence are not based on reality; rather, these claims are Zionist cries of vengeance against the oppressed Palestinian people. The movement has always advocated the use of nonviolent resistance and opposition to end the brutal and unjust Israeli military occupation.

The cause for Palestinian independence is never-ending, and we will not give up without a fight.

Israeli army operations left 1,500 people homeless in Rafah (on Oct. 12), making the total number of homeless Palestinians in Rafah more than 6,000.

We will not give up, and we will not go away. Palestine must be free.

Gifted artist did get degrees in school

In regards to the Wednesday article ("Artist Blends Genres of Art within Work,") about the talented Tyler Bohm, I would like to clarify what a self-taught or self-schooled artist actually is.

Webster's defines self-taught as, "having knowledge or skills acquired by one's own efforts without formal instruction."

According to the article, Bohm graduated from Kenyon College in 1999 with a bachelor's of art. He can not be referred to anymore as self-

Having a master's degree in philosophy somehow seems to contradict another statement about Bohm being "self-schooled," even if the degree is a non-art degree, he no longer qualifies as being self-schooled either.

I was a self-taught painter for 15 years, prior to my BFA in 2001. I am now in my MFA program. I cannot consider myself a self-taught artist anymore as I have had formal training, even though I began my career as a self-taught artist.

I just thought I would clarify this for the readers so they do not assume after getting their diploma, they will be self-taught or self-schooled.

American-made products save jobs

In response to the Wednesday opinion article ("Foolish to Save Factories"), I would like to see some more support for our factories and industries here in the United States While President Bush may be asking for too much in the area of international economics, I certainly do not agree that we need to sit back and watch as the manufacturing sector of our economy goes down the tubes.

I would like to use the steel industry in America as an example. In the United States we can produce steel at costs comparable to other countries.

We can, however, buy imported steel cheaper because certain overseas governments illegally subsidize their steel industries, allowing them to sell to us for less. Because of this, instead of thriving steel mills, America has the rust belt.

This is no small loss when you think that not only did steel mill workers lose their jobs, but also the coal miners whose daily toil went to operate the steel mills. Suddenly, the loss of a factory affects many more people than just those who work in it. This is one of many reasons that we need to be wary of opting to buy from foreign sources rather than our own.

The answers to the loss of United States industries are not easy, but I do think we can make a difference. If you believe that manufacturing and industry are vital to the future of the U.S. and our economy, go out and buy something made right here in America.

Box cutter stunt invites disaster

Be the change you wish to see in the world."
This is the quite admirable message of Guilford College, a pacifist Quaker college in North Carolina. A bit trite, but a good, hearty collegiate slogan nonetheless.

It was so good in fact, that one of its students, Nathaniel T. Heatwole, a very bright 20-year-old, decided to plant some box cutters, bleach, clay and matches on two commercial airplanes this September. He performed this stunt in an effort to alert the airline industry and the country of the frightening vulnerability of airplane security.

He now faces felony charges of bringing a concealed weapon onto a plane, and he could face up to 10 years in prison. In the midst of all the debate surrounding this young man's actions, let me state loudly and clearly that this is a perfect example of what not to do.

"But wait! That boy's got a point! Give that man a Nobel Peace Prize," some people are saying as they praise Heatwole for bringing the nation's sad state of security into the public eye. There's no question that he got his point across.

He knew what he was doing. He told national newspapers that he was committing "an act of civil disobedience with the aim of improving public safety for the air-traveling public." In doing so, he made the airline industry and the Department of Homeland Security seem ridiculously foolish, especially when he actually e-mailed the Transportation Security Administration telling them what he had done.

The TSA completely disregarded it as an e-mail that "wasn't an imminent threat." Furthermore, the airline industry didn't find his weapons until over a month later during a routine maintenance check. Perhaps this is both an indication of safety negligence but also a sign that maybe we need more "routine" maintenance checks.

While there's no question that Heatwole made it clear that the airline industry was being negligent, it's his method that disturbs me.

"It's good that he did it, rather than someone else like a terrorist," Casey Coughlan, a resident of Heatwole's hometown, told the New York Times. True. So now that he proved how simple it is, terrorists might feel freer to give hijacking our planes another try.

If civil disobedience was Heatwole's objective in performing this stunt, then God help us if this spreads across the country as rapidly as flash mobbing. Heatwole crossed the line that separates healthy and unhealthy civil disobedience.

The civil rights era and antiwar movements of the 1960s—the courage of Martin Luther King, Jr. as well as countless marches, sit-ins, arguments and literature—displayed perfectly what social activism should be about.

When Heatwole hid potential weapons on airplanes on two separate days, he was playing a dangerous game. Not only was he committing a crime, but he was creating a potential disaster. Who knows who could have gotten their hands on his weapons before the authorities found them?

Heatwole put hundreds of lives in danger simply because he wanted to prove a point. I can picture it now: "Hey, that infidel's got a point," Osama bin Laden said, watching CNN in his luxurious fivebedroom cave the other day.

Maybe Heatwole took the uplifting slogan "Be the change you wish to make in the world," a wee bit too seriously. He could have easily made the same change by not planting dangerous weapons on a plane, and just notifying the federal government exactly how easy it was to fool security.

Please. I'm not kidding anybody. If Heatwole sent an e-mail to the TSA saying, "Hi, I put bombs on your plane, you might want to check that out," and it still didn't get the picture, there's no way the TSA would listen to a damn thing this kid had to say. It is for this reason that the TSA certainly has a lot of work ahead. It should really be more open-minded to possible threats, even from pacifist college students who are part of the ham radio club.

The TSA was wrong to disregard this kid's e-mails. But Heatwole was wrong too.

All this self-proclaimed pacifist essentially accomplished was to prove to the world that there are ways around airport security. Quick, somebody alert the press! It's like Deputy TSA Administrator Stephen McHale said to the newspaper: "We know where the vulnerabilities are and we are testing them, and this does not help."

When it comes down to it, the TSA should be a little — no, a lot more— careful in the future. But also, we as potential yellow journalists should not try to expose how stupid the TSA is and create an even more dangerous and regressive situation. "Two wrongs don't make a right," our parents used to say. A bit trite, but a good, hearty slogan nonetheless.

Dillon wasn't even in the stadium yesterday as his downtrodden team pulled off a reputation-changing win. Jon Kitna's 53-yard touchdown pass to Chad Johnson and two tipped interceptions gave Cincinnati a 27-24 victory over the Seattle Seahawks.

With their first win over a top-notch team, the Bengals (3-4) proved they're no longer dreadful and no longer dependent on one moody running back.

"We believed we were going to win this game," offensive tackle Willie Anderson said. This is a new team."

Cincinnati has won back-to-back games for the first time since 2001 without much from Dillon, who was the team's entire focus under previous coaching staffs.

Playoffs miss doesn't lessen Crew victory

By Mike Price Lantern sports writer.

Pride was the only thing on the line for the Columbus Crew yesterday afternoon. After its last playoff hopes were dashed Saturday night, Columbus concluded a disappointing 2003 season on a positive note, extinguishing the Chicago Fire 6-2 in Crew Stadium.

'Emotionally, it was very important to salvage a little pride," Crew coach Greg Andrulis said. "At the end of the day, we asked the guys to enjoy the environment, enjoy the fact we're on national television and try to find some level of enjoyment during the game."

D.C. United (10-11-9, 39 points) earned the point it needed to clinch the fourth and final playoff spot in the Eastern Conference after it tied Kansas City 1-1 Saturday. AD.C. loss and a Columbus win would have sent the Crew into the postseason.

Înstead Columbus (11-12-8, 41 points), a team many thought would contend for the MLS Cup, will miss the playoffs for the second time in four seasons.

"I think we all had much higher expectations for the talent we put together," said Crew president-general manager Jim Smith, who also acknowledged national team call-ups and injuries as factors to the losing season.

"For a whole host of reasons, it didn't materialize into the season we wanted it to be. From a fan's perspective, a lot of late goals that cost us a lot of points is the easiest thing to point to," he said.

The first half mimicked the Crew's season. An inability to finish its three shots — one on goal — in the opening minutes gave good reason as to why Columbus finished fourth in scoring (44). The knack for giving up bad fouls in dangerous parts of the field also reared its ugly head. Crew defender Mark Williams tripped Fire forward Jonathan Bolanos in the goal box to set up a penalty kick for Chicago's second goal. Fire midfielder Jesse Marsch converted the penalty kick in the 25th minute.

The guy cut inside, and I lost my footing," Williams said. "There was nothing I could do about that, people were slipping a lot out

Before the costly foul, a mixed-up Crew defense got beat in just the 3rd minute. Fire forward Dipsy Selolwane snuck his way into the goal box and rocked a 18-yard shot. It bounced off the crossbar and Selolwane was there to head in his own rebound.

The second half of play was what Columbus fans have been waiting for all year. The Crew

Buckeyes put up 603 yards en route to 35-6 win over lowly Hoosiers

By Nick Houser Lantern sports writer

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Searching for its missing offense, No. 8 Ohio State used the Big Ten's most lopsided match-up to finally fire up the scoring machine in a 35-6 romp of Indiana at Memorial Stadium Saturday.

Junior running back Lydell Ross returned to site of his best collegiate performance and rolled right through the Hoosiers defense early and often by carrying the ball for 167 yards and three touchdowns on 23 tries.

Ross was not the only one contribing to the effort. The struggling offense racked up 603 total yards, with 216 on the ground and 387 through the air to win its 11th straight over the Hoosiers. The output was the highest by any Buckeye squad since they hung 715 yards on Utah in 1986.

"I felt like we were doing things right as a whole. I was reading the holes and the offensive line was doing a great job because I had choices," Ross said. "When I cut back one way, I could have cut back the other way so, I had choices out there."

Up against a weaker defense, the Buckeyes went back to their traditional ways and entered the game wanting to establish the run. Ross picked up 13 yards on the first play from scrimmage and rumbled for 25 more on the next

With gaping holes at the line of the scrimmage, Ross was able to burst into the heart of the Indiana defense and nearly broke loose on several occasions until the Hoosiers made touchdown saving tackles.

BLOOMINGTON, IND. The trip to Indiana was a sort of déjà vu for two Ohio State football players.

Drew Carter probably wanted to finish out a game against the Hoosiers at Memorial Stadium. It just wasn't in the plans. For Lydell Ross, though, his experiences with Bloomington have been positive. Both times the tailback has visited there, he has achieved season and career high numbers in rushing.

caught three passes for 75 yards. It was on that third catch that his fate was revealed. After being taken to the ground in the second quarter Carter grabbed the back of his right knee.

It was clear Carter was in pain from the second the injury occurred. He could not get off the field without his teammates carrying him. After being looked at on the sidelines, Carter was loaded into a golf cart and taken to the locker room. He did not return until the third quarter. He was on crutches and out of uniform.

The prognosis is not yet known, but coach Jim Tressel said it does not look good for the senior and team.

Two years ago, while preparing to play Indiana, Carter injured that same knee with a torn ACL. He did not receive for the Buckeyes against the Hoosiers or any of the remaining 2001 games. innocent, though we try to act like it sometimes. As a matter of fact we can be down-right vicious.

In high school, powder puff football was the display of all evils. At my school in the cornfields, the seniors played the juniors. It was common for the seniors to win every year. My senior year was no different. The juniors cut us close but couldn't prevail.

After practicing with the male football players for weeks, we

The game took place one night after school. All the girls gathered together to get ready. We put on our uniforms and smeared black paint under our eyes. Many of us wore bandanas on our heads.

Before that game I had not been much of a violent person. I did not feel the need to push people around or pull hair. Before that game I had only put my hands on

As I lined up on the offensive line across from a girl whom no one else would take on, I felt the need to take the game to a more physical level. Granted, football is supposed to be physical, but in powder puff it is supposed to be flag football.

We weren't supposed to tackle, and we weren't supposed to hit. That defensive lineman and I didn't follow the rules though. Every time the ball was snapped, we pushed each other around and eventually ended up on the ground.

We got into the typical girl fights — hair pulling, kicking and pushing. At one point the play was whistled dead, and she and I were rolling along the ground pulling out each other's locks.

It didn't go beyond that until the third quarter.

On a specific play, I lined up across from the junior as I had done on every other of my team's offensive plays. The ball was snapped, and I expected the same disgruntled pushing, but I got a mouth full of something else.

That something else was the other girl's fist. I was fine with the hair pulling and kicking, but the punch was unnecessary.

Filled with anger, the tears started to roll.

My coaches immediately pulled me from the game and made me sit out the next snap. It was the first offensive play that I wasn't in the game. No one else could take on the cheap shooter. I knew this and so did the rest of my teammates. So I, of course, stood on the sideline yelling and cussing. I threatened to kill the girl when I returned to the game. I was so hysterical that my boyfriend had to come on the field and calm me down. He brought ibuprofen with him.

She told me to calm down and stop throwing words around. And her advice hit me when I returned to the field for the next offensive

My team was only winning by three points, and it was at that point that I knew I had to take things seriously. I calmed down and played smart. It didn't matter how much I wanted to beat that girl down, I wanted to help my team win more.

Every time the ball was snapped I did what I was supposed to do. I executed my blocking at the line for as long as the quarterback needed. Once the ball was past the line of scrimmage, I discarded of the defensive lineman and protected the ball carrier.

It worked. Our team scored on that drive and held them off for the rest of the game.

Of course I still felt embarrassed for not getting the girl back for the punch, In the end, I did get her back though. I got her back on the field and beat her mentally.

Graeme McFarland to replace the battered LeVecchio. McFarland led the Hoosiers to their only score in the game. The drive, which saw the back-up quarterback go six-of-six passing for 58 yards, culminated on a 17-yard touchdown to Chris Taylor. Just as the Buckeyes started to pickup some momentum in the romp, they must continue to search for answers on offense with an injury to one of their biggest play-makers.

Wide receiver Drew Carter, who appeared to finally overcome his rash of injuries since coming to Columbus saw his OSU career likely come to an end. The senior injured his right knee for the second time at the end of a 17-yard reception in the second quarter.

"Drew's been a warrior for us, and I think that Drew has had more total plays this season than Michael (Jenkins) has," Tressel said. "I mean he's had a lot of plays so to replace Drew Carter will be a tremendous challenge."

While the offense took a huge step forward in the game, the Buckeyes took a huge step backwards with the loss of Carter. Tressel then went to Plan B and started spreading the pigskin to its corps of young receivers.

Redshirt freshman Santonio Holmes led OSU with six catches for 153 yards and two touchdowns.

"I've never had an ACL (injury), but they tell me it's an excruciating few months," Tressel said Tuesday when asked about Carter's commitment.

But you grind it out, and you do it, and you hope that good things come," he said. "That's why I'm ecstatic about the way Drew Carter has come along."

In 2001 Ross finished with 124 yards against the Hoosiers. The number was good enough to remain his OSU career best until his next visit to Indiana.

The junior topped that number on Saturday when he ran the ball 23 times for 167 yards. The Buckeyes collectively had 216 yards on the ground.

Ross did not think the two performances were based solely on playing in Bloomington,

"I'm just playing football,"

Three of Ross' 23 carries were for touchdowns and one was fumbled in the red zone.

The ball was untouched (on the fumble). I had it hanging out there loose," Ross said. "Coach Tressel always tells us to tuck in the ball, and my eyes were on the end zone, my eyes were on that touchdown, and I just fell off."

was made by Santonio Holmes. The freshman took over for Carter and became the favorite target for the OSU quarterbacks. He ended the game with two touchdowns but should have had three.

Holmes achieved a career best in receiving against the Hoosiers. He finished with six catches and 153 yards. The performance was Holmes' opportunity to show he you play next time."

could take over for Carter. If Carter's injury is bad enough, it could end his career.

"Santonio Holmes is a good player and it just breaks your heart that a guy like Drew Carter, who has been working so hard and so long to get this opportunity, (would get hurt)," Tressel said. While the Indiana game could end Carter's receiving it might act as a springboard for Ross' rush-Another turnover at the goal line ing. The Buckeyes had been struggling to find a niche offensively. If Ross can use the experience at Memorial Stadium as a confidence and momentum booster, OSU might be able to pull itself out of the offensive rut.

'The pressure was on and today I thought we stepped up and we were progressing," Tresselsaid. "But you don't know until played tight and organized defense, holding Chicago scoreless on five shots. Columbus, which changed to a three-forward formation to spice up the attack, actually took advantage of its scoring chances too.

Second-half substitute and forward Jeff Cunningham helped spark an offensive turnaround that reeled off two goals in a six-minute span for the Crew. First, he laid the ball off to forward Brian McBride, who drove an 8-yard strike into the far sided corner in the 49th minute. Cunningham then took a pass from forward Edson Buddle and nailed a 13-yard shot past Fire goalkeeper Curtis Spiteri in the 54th minute. McBride, Buddle and midfielder Freddy Garcia would all add to the Crew's scoringfest. Buddle had two goals while McBride and Garcia each netted one. It was the first time this season that Columbus scored more than four goals.

"Putting on an extra attacker helped Brian and Edson, and it resulted in good chances," midfielder Kyle Martino said.

On another high note, former Ohio State player and Crew rookie defender Jake Traeger was substituted in the 78th minute for midfielder Brian Maisonneuve. It marked the first time that a former OSU player got time in an MLS match.

"I was just waiting for my chances, working hard all season and I thought I deserved to be out there," said Traeger, who assisted on goals by Buddle and Traeger came in and played a position that he wasn't comfortable with and did an admirable job, Andrulis said.

"For a guy like Jake Traeger, who's done nothing but train since January with us, and he finally gets some minutes and assists," he said. "I feel great for a guy like Jake, who can end his first season in a very memorable way."

As the offseason approaches, changes are expected on the player personnel front for Columbus.

"It's probably going to take all week to reflect on the season and see what we did well and what we didn't do well," Smith said. "After a year like this, we'll focus more on what we didn't do well. That's a top-to-bottom approach that starts at the top of the organization and works all the way down through every player on our roster.'

By Audrey Woods Associated Press

LONDON — Princess Diana's friends call her ex-butler a vulture. He accuses royal courtiers of poisoning the minds of princes William and Harry.

And that's only so far: Paul Burrell's memoirs don't hit British bookstores until today.

Burrell is a "runaway train" with much distance yet to travel, former Buckingham Palace press spokesman Dickie Arbiter said in a weekend exchange of unpleasantries by all sides in the latest Diana dustup.

The Daily Mirror's serialization of Burrell's "A Royal Duty" has treated millions of readers to his intimate view of Princess Diana's life, including private correspondence from her former father-inlaw, Prince Philip, and her brother, Earl Spencer.

Prince William and Prince Harry, who have known Burrell since early childhood, issued a strong statement Friday, accusing him of a "cold and overt betrayal" of their mother that would have mortified Diana were she alive.

"My only intention in writing this book was to defend the princess and stand in her corner," Burrell said.

In an interview with British Broadcasting Corp. television to be broadcast today, Burrell said he was "angry" with the princes, accusing them of following advice from courtiers.

"Why listen to people who always say yes and no one tells you no?" Burrell said.

The Sunday Times quoted an unidentified spokeswoman for Clarence House, the London home of Prince Charles and his sons, as saying their statement was "a heartfelt reaction by two young men who cannot take any more."

In the months after Diana's fatal August 1997 car crash in Paris, Burrell vowed repeatedly never to divulge her secrets. One of the first to appear in the Daily Mirror serialization last week was a letter he said Diana had written to him, saying she feared someone wanted to harm her and was going to tamper with the brakes of her car.

Burrell spent nearly two years fighting accusations that he stole more than 300 items from the princess and other royals, and went on trial last year.

He was exonerated in November when Queen Elizabeth II announced the servant had told her five years earlier that he'd taken some of Diana's papers for

In the BBC interview, Burrell complained that Diana's sons had not been in touch with him.

Referring to his book, Burrell added: "Just one telephone call would have stopped it, one. Is that too much too ask - really?'

or services. The Lantern reserves the right to reject advertising that denigrates individuals, groups or organizations based on race, gender, nationality, ethnicity, religion, mental or physical capacity, veteran's status, age or sexual orientation. The Lantern Business Manager will refer questionable advertising to the Publications Committee of the School of Journalism and Communication. The committee will recommend a decision on whether to publish the advertising to the Director of the school.

1. Complete name, address and telephone number for each advertiser is required.

2. Copy must be furnished by noon three days before publication, except for special publications whose deadlines will be announced.

An advertisement is required to occupy at least as many inches in height as columns in width. Any advertisement exceeding 18 inches in height will be considered a "full column" (21 inches) advertisement and charged accordingly.

4. Make-goods and adjustments will be considered for those advertisements only where errors occur in (a) business or group name, address, or phone number, (b) item price or (c) date, time or place of event. The error must be solely the fault of the Lantern. Adjustments will not exceed the cost of the advertisement and will be based on the portion of the advertisement nullified by the error. Minor spelling errors will not qualify for adjustment. Complaints must be registered with the Business Manager with in 45 days of publication to qualify; otherwise the advertiser accepts full responsibility.

Guaranteed position is sold at the Business Manager's discretion

A composition charge may apply to any changes, revisions or cancellations made after deadline. No proof will be furnished for any advertisement received after deadline or for an ad smaller than seven column inches. If the Lantern finds it necessary to stop contracted advertising because of nonpayment, the advertising agreement will be violated and the advertiser subject to a "re-bill" fee

The Lantern reserves the right to require prepayment for advertising, or to reject advertising, if the advertiser is delinquent in payment, or if the advertiser's credit is impaired. Advertisers must prepay all advertising until a satisfactory credit rating with the Lantern is established. A certified check or money order is required for out-of-town advertisers. 10. Contract advertisers will furnish the Lantern with a "rate-holder" ad meeting contract minimums for use in any contract period for which the advertiser does not provide an ad.

11. A tearsheet will be furnished for all display advertising run in the Lantern. Additional tearsheets are available (limit 15) provided the advertiser requests them from the Lantern office prior to publication 12. The advertiser agrees to indemnify and hold harmless the Ohio State University, its Board of Trustees and its officers, agents and employees from and against any and all loss, cost and expense, including reasonable attorney fees, resulting from the publication by the Lantern of the advertiser's advertise

13. Advertisers in the Lantern agree that they will not represent themselves in any way as being endorsed by the Ohio State University

14. A mail-order advertiser is required to submit a sample "proof-of-product" prior to publication. 15. Advertisers must request the return of their original ad materials; the Lantern will dispose of such materials 60 days after their first publication.

Wildfires surge toward suburbs

By Chelsea J. Carter Associated Press

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. merged into walls of flame stretching across miles in parts of Southern California yesterday, leaving 13 people dead, burning 650 homes and frustrating overmatched firefighters who worked relentlessly against fierce winds.

San Diego County, caused at least nine deaths, including two who ently tried to escape the flames, San Diego Sheriff Bill Kolender said.

A total of ten major fires burned in Southern California, one large cluster in the San Diego area and another about 100 miles north near San Bernardino. By Sunday night, teams and 125 engines, tried to in 10 years.'

the fires had blackened 264,000
