Senate funds pet programs

(AP) — The Republican Senate has packed its version of Gov. Richard Celeste's $26.3 billion budget proposal with funding for pet projects and clauses designed to block spending for other programs.

The Senate is scheduled to vote on the bill Tuesday. Republicans, who hold a 19-14 majority in the upper chamber, are expected to ensure passage of the measure. The bill, which covers the biennium beginning July 1, would then head for a joint conference committee with the Democratic-controlled House, which has passed its version of the proposal.

The Senate version contains an amendment that would allow $2.5 million loans to school districts which have been hit by a tornado, have high debts and have not passed a bond issue since 1985.

Only one district seems to fit those criteria — Newton Falls in Trumbull County, which is in the area represented by Sen. Charles Henry, R-Burton, the provision's sponsor.

The budget also authorizes the Ohio Department of Development to give $20,000 of the state's travel and tourism budget to the International Soap Box Derby in the hometown of the provision's sponsor, Sen. Roy Ray, R-Akron.

The Senate version cut funds for business development to $5 million in the next budget year. But it requires that $1.31 million of that total to be spent on certain projects, including $700,000 for work on Ohio National Guard projects in McConnelsville in southeast Ohio.

McConnelsville is in the district of Sen. Robert Ney, R-Barnesville, who also earmarked $150,000 under the Transportation Department for the Hocking Valley Scenic Railroad in his district.

Sen. Eugene Watts, R-Columbus, played a key role in prohibiting Kent State University from using any state instructional money to pay for a memorial to four students killed by National Guardsmen during a protest in 1970.

"I'm upset about it," said Watts, a Vietnam veteran.

Watts said the university has been using public money for construction of the memorial with the understanding it would be repaid later with donations. He said alumni and students have not responded financially to the project.

The Senate bill also would dismantle the Commission on Spanish Speaking Affairs. Under the Senate version, the Ohio Civil Rights Commission would hire one person to deal with Hispanic issues.

Sen. Richard Finan, R-Cincinnati, said he has received complaints from Hispanics who said the agency "is totally ineffective, a waste of money and ought to be abolished."

Lantern cartoonist takes third place

By Zinie Chen
Lantern staff writer

Lantern cartoonist Nick Anderson took third place in the third annual John Locher Memorial Award sponsored by the Association of American Editorial Cartoonists.

Winners of the award were selected from student editorial cartoonists throughout the United States and Canada by a panel of editorial cartoonists.

Anderson, a junior from Toledo majoring in political science, said, "I want to make a career out of editorial cartooning and this tells me that at least I'd be taken seriously..."

Anderson submitted three entries to the contest, which were commentaries on the status of blacks, increasing student insurance rates coupled with a tuition increase at Ohio State, and the issue of human rights.

"I READ as much as I can to find out as much as I can. I try to find some kind of irony in a situation and play upon that," Anderson said about his ideas for editorial cartoons.

Cartoonist Scot Zellman said: "I think (Anderson's) another good example of the talent that comes out of OSU. He will, I'm sure find a job and become a successful political cartoonist."

Other cartoonists who started their careers at the Lantern include the late Milton Caniff, creator of "Steve Canyon," and editorial cartoonists Brian Basset, Scott Willis and Jim Kammerud.

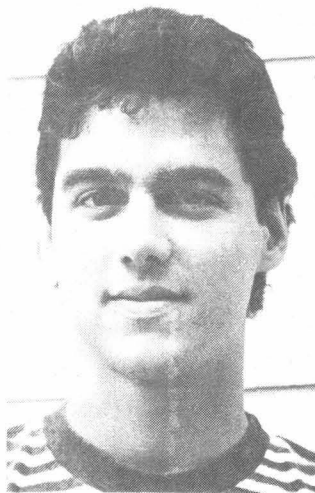

HIS ROLE models include Jeff MacNelly, a Chicago Tribune cartoonist — creator of the cartoon "Shoe," and syndicated cartoonist Pat Oliphant.

He also placed in the top 10 in the Charles M. Schulz Award in April sponsored by the Scripps-Howard Foundation.

Anderson also draws a comic strip, "Day Care," in addition to editorial cartoons. He said he was "drawn to editorial cartoons" since childhood. He drew cartoons for his high school newspaper at St. John's in Toledo and was recognized for his achievements.

Anderson said he is "excited" that he was able to distinguish himself on a national level.

"I'D LIKE to go into editorial cartooning professionally because it's a challenging medium. Unfortunately it's very difficult to break into, but this gives me the confidence to pursue it."

Michael Thompson of Milwaukee, Wis., won first place and will receive an all-expense paid, three-day trip to join the cartoonists at the 1989 Association of American Editorial Cartoonists Convention in Newport, R.I., the Associated Press reported.

Second place went to Bill Costell of College Park, Md., and

GOP won't push Lukens to quit after conviction

By Melissa Eisen
Lantern staff writer

The Republican Party will not force U.S. Rep. Donald E. "Buz" Lukens to resign even though he was found guilty Friday of contributing to the delinquency of a minor, a party spokesman said.

The jury deliberated for about 90 minutes before convicting Lukens, R-Middletown, of corrupting a 16-year-old girl by having sex with her on Nov. 6, 1988.

The congressman, 58, could spend 180 days in jail and pay a $1,000 fine. Judge Ronald Solove delayed sentencing until a presentence investigation is completed.

Christopher Price, deputy communications director for the Ohio Republican Party, said resignation is one option for Lukens, but Lukens is at liberty to make the decision.

Price said the party thinks Lukens should have a few days to decide. Lukens has some decisions to make about what is in the best interests of the people in his district, Price said.

The Ohio Republican Party will have a meeting in Lukens' district in four to six weeks to discuss the congressman's situation, Price said.

Price said if Lukens resigns, the governor would call for a special election within 90 days of the resignation. He said he does not know who the candidates for Lukens' office would be.

The Associated Press reported Friday that several Democrats have expressed interest in running for Lukens' seat if the congressman resigns. But William Jarrell, Lukens' chief of staff, said Lukens plans to seek re-election.

AP reported that Chalmers Wylie, the senior Republican among the Ohio congressional delegation, said he thought Lukens should resign, but he would not elaborate on this comment.

The woman testified Wednesday that when she was 16, Lukens gave her $40 and gifts after having sex with her.

J.D. Caudill, a private investigator from Dayton, testified that Lukens admitted during an interview in January that he had sex with the minor.

In closing arguments, Assistant Prosecutor Rita Mangini said Lukens contributed to the delinquency of the teen-ager by engaging her in prostitution. Mangini said the money and gifts Lukens gave to the teen-ager were in exchange for sex.

Mangini said the congressman endangered the teen-ager's health by possibly exposing her to sexually-transmitted diseases.

Lukens' further corrupted the teen-ager when he gave her alcohol, Mangini said.

Mangini anticipated the defense would argue that the teen-ager's mother, Anna Coffman, was trying to blackmail Lukens with exposing the story. But Mangini said Coffman had contacted a television station, and had allowed the FBI to investigate the case.

"Would you get the news media and the FBI involved if you were going to extort money?" Mangini asked the jurors.

Thomas Tyack, Lukens' attorney, said in his closing statements the teen-ager testified that Lukens did not endanger her morals by having sex with her.

Tyack said the teen-ager lied and told Lukens she was older than 18. The cab driver who drove the teen-ager and her friend to Lukens' apartment testified that they looked about 18 or 19,

Black enrollment rises at Akron; Ohio State's falls

By Nadine Collins
Lantern staff writer

When William B. Muse became president of the University of Akron in 1984, he said increases in minority enrollment and hiring were top priorities for his administration.

According to statistics Muse is succeeding. By fall 1987, the total enrollment of black students at the University of Akron increased 18 percent from 1,710 to 2,024. A year later, the black student enrollment increased another 4 percent to 2,109.

Akron's total university enrollment in the fall of 1988 was 27,818.

Meanwhile, OSU black student enrollment is falling.

At Ohio State, the total enrollment of black students in fall 1987 decreased 2 percent from 2,357 to 2,313. A year later, black student enrollment increased 6 percent to 2,413.

Ohio State's total enrollment as of fall 1988 was about 53,000.

Akron's successful recruitment program is composed of several plans, Muse said.

He established an Office of Minority Affairs in 1985 to handle recruitment and retention of black faculty, staff and students.

"The black faculty around the country are pretty well clued in by word of mouth as to where there are significant opportunities to teach," Muse said.

"We compile a list of persons who might be interested in coming to the university and we ask them to apply," Muse said. "We also go to national meetings and talk to prospective black faculty."

"I don't take answers such as 'black faculty can't be found,'" Muse said. "The University of Akron has had to be aggressive, not passive in recruitment of black faculty."

Three out of the last five deans hired at Akron University were black. The enrollment of black faculty increased at the university from eight to 25 in the last four years.

Barbara Newman, OSU associate provost for faculty recruitment and development, said a planning process to help individual colleges recruit minority faculty was outlined in 1987 in Ohio State's "Handbook for Faculty Searches with References to Affirmative Action."

This process called for expanding the pool of minority candidates by a search committee. The search committee is comprised of individuals within a college who understand the position to be filled and who can outline the goals of their department at the university.

The committee also specifies that national searches must be conducted for instructors and assistant, associate and full professors.

"In the search for black faculty, there has to be a network of black professionals that can be engaged in when there is an opportunity to do a search," Newman said. "Faculty members in various disciplines need to build a more effective network with their own group of black professionals."

Sailor demands apology

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Kendall L. Truitt, the sailor linked by reports to the investigation of the USS Iowa disaster, said Monday he wants the Navy to apologize for leaking information implicating him in the fatal blast.

"I'd like to see a formal apology — from an identified Navy spokesman," Truitt said shortly after a visit to the battleship at Norfolk Naval Base to collect his belongings for a transfer to Mayport, Fla.

"I'm sure this will hurt me in the future and certainly now. Life will never be the same, I guess, but I'll try to get it back as close as possible," said Truitt, who was accompanied by his wife, Carole, and his attorney, Ellis Rubin of Miami.

Rubin said he has asked Rep. Glenn Poshard, D-Ill., to investigate the Navy's handling of its probe as it relates to Truitt, a 21-year-old gunner's mate 3rd class who is a native of Illinois.

"There has been tremendous publicity impugning this young man," Poshard said in a telephone interview. "Somebody had to give the news media this information. ... If this boy is not guilty, how is he ever going to recover from this thing? It doesn't seem appropriate to try someone before the facts are in or in the press."

Accidental causes have not been ruled out, but investigators have reported finding no evidence of a mechanical or electrical problem in the April 19 explosion that ripped the ship's No. 2 gun turret, killing 47 men.

In recent weeks, news reports based on unnamed sources have said investigators were exploring the relationship between Truitt and Gunner's Mate Clayton M. Hartwig, 25, who died in the explosion.

The Navy has never officially named either man as being under investigation, and Truitt has repeatedly denied being involved with the blast.

The New York Times reported Monday that investigators now feel it is unlikely Truitt set off the explosion to kill Hartwig, who had named Truitt as beneficiary on a $100,000 insurance policy. But they say it is possible that Hartwig caused the blast to commit suicide.

Rubin said he was angry with the Navy for hustling his client on and off the ship Monday with no opportunity to visit with friends or pay his respects to fallen comrades.

"On this Memorial Day, Kendall Truitt and his wife Carole came to pay homage to his shipmates who were lost," Rubin said. "He was not able to do that."

Mrs. Truitt also said she also wants an apology from the Navy.

"It would be nice to see them apologize for what they have done to my husband," she said. Even if it might not fix the damage, she said, "it would be a start."

A Navy spokesman, noting the holiday, said the Navy would not comment.

Tyack said.

Tyack said the teen-ager's testimony conflicted with earlier statements she made to the police.

The teen-ager testified Wednesday that her mother was present during the police interview, and she was too ashamed to say everything she did with the congressman.

But Tyack said the changes in her testimony showed the teen-ager was trying to fill in gaps, making the story grow each time it was told.

Tyack claimed this case started out as a media event when Coffman called a television station to tell them what happened between her daughter and Lukens.

He reminded jurors that Coffman and her daughter stayed in a hotel at the expense of the station, and they received $1,500 from another station for the story.

Fred Mann, assistant prosecutor, said in rebuttal to Tyack that receiving payment from a television station did not affect the truth or validity of the charges made.

According to an AP story, Tyack plans to appeal because the judge did not allow the teen-agers' juvenile record to be admitted as evidence. Tyack said this information was critical to the case.

In 1987, 28 new black faculty and staff were hired at Ohio State.

Newman said colleges must identify those schools where substantial numbers of black students are being trained, and recruit those students to doctoral and professional programs.

The OSU College of Pharmacy recently established this kind relationship with Xavier University in Louisiana.

We hope this will encourage black students in pharmacy at Xavier to come to Ohio State for doctoral studies after their undergraduate work, Newman said.

"I think this kind of building of networks and linking is what will help turn around this sense of 'We don't know any professionals and we don't know where to look,'" she said.

As part of his recruitment plan, Muse has established STEP or Strive Toward Excellence Program. The program brings 40 students from Akron elementary schools that are from disadvantaged backgrounds to the university for a six week summer program and on Saturdays throughout the year.

This program is geared toward blacks entering the sixth grade.

"Since blacks are the most significant minority group in the Akron area, these are the students we gear the program toward," Muse said.

The students admitted to this program must come from low income families, a single parent home or a home from which neither parent has gone to college.

The university asks principals at each of the elementary schools in Akron to nominate their best sixth grade student for the program, Muse said.

He said students chosen for the program have shown good academic performance and ability to learn, but would not otherwise be able to go to college because of their economic situation.

After the STEP program, the students enter Upward Bound, a four-year federally funded program that is also designed for students coming from an economically disadvantaged background.

"Students who are chosen for Upward Bound have a tremendous success rate in terms of going to college," Muse said.

After successfully completing both programs, students are offered guaranteed admission into the university and a scholarship to pay their tuition.

Ohio State has a similar program called the Young Scholars Program now in its second year. It was announced in 1987 by President Edward H. Jennings as part of the action plan for the recruitment and retention of black students.

This plan was based on the premise that there are not enough black and Hispanic college students in Ohio.

The University of Akron's STEP program reaches only Akron residents. Ohio State's Young Scholars Program is the only state-wide program involving students from nine cities in the state of Ohio.

The Young Scholars program brings students to Ohio State in the summer and to Saturday seminars in their own cities throughout the school year.

The students spend two weeks of their first three summers and three weeks of their second three summers at Ohio State. They live in university residence halls and participate in workshops such as academic enrichment and career exploration.

Like the STEP program, Young Scholars are chosen by a principal or teacher.

In each of the nine cities where Young Scholars recruits there is an administrator that serves as a liaison to the program.

Upon successful completion of the program, the Young Scholars are guaranteed admission to Ohio State with a financial aid package appropriate to their financial circumstances. Financial aid consists primarily of scholarships, but includes some work study.

James J. Bishop, special assistant to the provost, said the Young Scholars program at Ohio State should lay a foundation for future minority recruitment.

"We hope the Young Scholars Program will be a model program that all the public and private four year institutions in Ohio will adopt," Bishop said.

One of the best ways to prepare students for college is to reach them early in the middle school grades, Bishop said. He said this is a period just before parents and students decide on college or vocational preparation.

"But it's important at this time that students take the most advanced courses — the courses that will prepare them for college," Bishop said.

In 1988, the Young Scholars Program attracted 200 new students from eight cities in Ohio. This year the program will bring 400 students to Ohio State.

Bishop said 400 students will be recruited each year. He expects 2,300 Young Scholars after six years, assuming some drop out and some are replaced.

"Ohio State expects to see at least 71 percent of these students graduate from high school and enter college," Bishop said.

In addition to the recruitment of black faculty, the University of Akron has a Parent Advisory Committee.

"We selected from black students certain parents to serve on this committee," Muse said. "We meet with the parents about two or three times a year and basically we listen," he said.

"It's been obvious to me that the university has got to listen to black parents to fully understand what they expect from their youngsters in terms of the quality of education that their son or daughter ought to be receiving and what they can do to reinforce the value of education," Muse said.

The University of Akron also works with about 30 black community leaders, such as elected officials and church ministers.

"We try to report to these community leaders what's happening at the university, and we listen to them on what they think is important and what they think the university is doing or is not doing, and we try to deal with those kinds of concerns," Muse said.

Muse said recruitment is not simple. It is not solved by one person, but takes the work of a dedicated university staff.

Group promises $750,000 for law building additions

By Ruth Inglis-Hirsch
Lantern staff writer

A conditional $750,000 grant from an independent foundation in Michigan came at a critical time in the law school fundraising campaign, said the dean of the OSU College of Law.

Before the school can receive the grant from the Kresge Foundation it must raise more than $2 million in its own fundraising campaign.

"We are about $2.6 million from the $7.7 million we need to raise for the building project," said Francis X. Beytagh, dean of the College of Law. "When we raise $2.6 million more Kresge will top off our campaign with their $750,000 gift."

The terms of Kresge grant specify the money must be raised by Sept. 1, 1990, he said.

The Kresge Foundation was created as a private, independent foundation with the personal gifts of Sebastian S. Kresge. Challenge grants are awarded by the organization for projects involving construction or renovation of buildings and the purchase of real estate or major equipment.

The money will help fund the expansion and renovation of the law building. The estimated cost of the building project is $16 million.

Although the university and the state of Ohio will contribute a total of $8.3 million, the remaining $7.7 million must be raised through private donations.

Groundbreaking for the building project is set to begin in the spring of 1990. The new addition will add about 90,000 square feet to the law building.

Approximately two-thirds of the space will be used for the law library, while the remaining 30,000 square feet will provide new classrooms, offices, research centers and areas for student services, according to the development office of the law school.

"It's a strong incentive from the Kresge Foundation to reach our goal," Beytagh said. "We're delighted by their contribution. It's a vote of confidence in the law school and in Ohio State that we hope will spark gifts from others."

This is the first time the university has received an award from the Kresge Foundation, he said.

The College of Law has occupied the existing building since 1958, when there were about 350 law students and 15 faculty members.

Today there are more than 600 students and 37 full-time faculty associated with the college. The number of student organizations and activities also has increased and the law library has grown from 200,000 volumes to almost 520,000.

Bohm-NBBJ, a Columbus-based firm, will serve as the architect for the building project. Gunnar Birkerts and Associates of Birmingham, Mich., will assist as consulting design architects.

President Edward H. Jennings said, "The prestige added to our campaign by the Kresge challenge grant will greatly broaden the base of support for the project, which is very important to Ohio State. This undertaking lies at the heart of our law school campaign."

Program wants OSU tutors

By Ed Beyer
Lantern staff writer

A community service organization is hoping to get OSU students college credit in exchange for tutoring illiterates in Franklin County.

Ready to Read Literacy Program is hoping to use college students as tutors to help combat illiteracy.

Janet Fenholt, founder of the organization, said she plans to contact the university soon about the program. The program would be available to all students, not just those majoring in education.

Fenholt said Ohio State once gave students credit for tutoring. She would like to see this happen again.

Although student interests have moved away from social service, through such a program students can become aware of what is going on in society, Fenholt said.

Franklin County has about 88,000 illiterate people, she said.

Fenholt teaches a three-credit newspaper and education course autumn quarters through the OSU Department of Education and a summer series of workshops that deal with the same topic.

She also works part-time as the coordinator for Newspapers in Education at the Columbus Dispatch.

Fenholt said she would also instruct the student volunteer program.

Melinda F. Nichols, executive director of Ready to Read, said the program has thousands of tutors nationwide.

Nichols said the success rate for the program is 98 percent.

She said teaching people how to read is not difficult.

"Our difficulties lie in finding necessary funding for the program and finding the non-reader," she said.

Fenholt said many people are ashamed to admit they can't read or are intimidated by traveling downtown to an office building to receive tutoring.

Volunteers must go into the community and help on an individual basis, she said.

"Illiterate people are taught to read using the newspaper and a workbook which is provided free by the program," Fenholt said.

Fenholt said most people become functionally literate after 26 lessons.

"A functionally literate person can read and write between the fourth and fifth grade level," Fenholt said.

She said this enables most people to read a grocery list, a weather map or sign a job application.

The program was started for prisoners in Chillicothe in 1982. The system worked because prisoners who could read acted as tutors for those who could not.

In 1984 Fenholt expanded the program out of the prison system and made it available to the public at no cost.

Fenholt said funding for the organization comes from donations and grants.

Ready to Read is located at 1066 N.High St.

Chinese erect statue to revitalize protests

BEIJING (AP) — Student protesters, hoping to energize their waning movement with a stirring symbol of democracy, wheeled a sculpture inspired by the Statue of Liberty into Tiananmen Square Monday to the cheers of 100,000 people.

Firecrackers burst overhead as students from the Central Academy of Fine Arts brought three sections of what they called the "Goddess of Democracy" — a woman in flowing robes clutching a torch with both hands — into the square.

China's leaders, meanwhile, continued efforts to end the movement that has spawned a power struggle and left hardliners in control. A Communist Party elder Monday blasted the "vicious intentions of the very few people to create turmoil."

The 33-foot-high statue made its appearance after student protesters disagreed on whether to continue or call off their occupation of the square. Many students promised to stay.

"This statue represents democcracy that is in the hearts of all Chinese," said Zhao Shaoru, a senior who helped build the sculpture. "It will stand here on Tiananmen Square as an expression of democracy."

Zhao said the plaster of Paris and styrofoam statue was inspired by the Statue of Liberty.

Students plan to unveil it Tuesday after they finish setting it up in the square along Changan Avenue, the capital's main thoroughfare where protesters say they hope it will become a rallying point for their movement.

The students have been holding regular protests since April 15 to demand democratic reforms and an end to corruption by officials. They have been occupying Tiananmen Square, the symbolic heart of China, since May 13.

Peng Zhen, former chairman of China's legislature, told a political forum that while students' intentions were to help the government correct mistakes, they were being manipulated by "conspirators and bad elements," the official Xinhua News Agency reported.

Recharged racer takes Indy 500

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — In 1982, Emerson Fittipaldi, twice the world champion and one of the best Formula One drivers ever, looked around his sport and didn't like what he saw.

"The politics, the intrigue," he said, shuddering a little. "All the time, I had aggravation. There was a lack of attention to safety. It was a total mess, a real disaster."

So he walked away.

He needed no better reason than his experience one year at the Spanish Grand Prix.

"I was the defending world champion and I refused to race because the track was not safe. I told the others, 'We should not drive here.' I was jogging on the track and saw no washers, no bolts on the guard rails. I complained and they said, 'Manana. It will be good, manana.'"

Manana was not good enough for him. "They suspended my license for three months. I flew home. When I got off the plane, they told me there had been an accident and four people were killed."

It was episodes like that one that soured Fittipaldi on Formula One.

"There are risks in racing that you must accept, but not those kinds of risks. I thought to myself, 'What a sport I am in.' In those days, the odds of surviving were 7-to-1. That's scary. I lost so many good friends in accidents. It was tough on me emotionally."

"It was a good time to stop. It was like recharging my batteries. The last years of Formula One racing, I was drained. I had no enthusiasm to drive, no motivation to win. To be on the edge of winning, you must have 100 percent motivation."

Fittipaldi went back to his native Brazil to look after business interests, businesses that he discovered did better when he was racing.

So he gradually he returned to the track, but not to the Formula

One circuits that had soured him so. Instead, he took a liking to Indy cars, consistently faster, safer, but less mobile machines.

And that's how the winner of Sunday's Indianapolis 500 discovered America.

He came to race at Indy for the first time in 1984, showing up in an outrageous looking pink car that clashed a bit with his purple driving suit. His reputation preceded him, though, and the crowd welcomed him warmly. He finished 32nd that day, next to last, but he had found a new racing home.

"There was no pressure for me," he said. "It was an easy introduction. My only regret was that I didn't come here before."

There were nine Indy car races for him that season and better than $175,000 in purses. He was second in the rookie standings, a rookie at age 38. A year later, he had his first Indy car victory at Michigan, and a year after that, his earnings went over $1 million.

He won two races in 1987 and two more last year when he finished second at Indy, a hint that he was mastering these cars.

On Sunday, he ran a nearly perfect race from start to finish in a car he crashed a month ago at Phoenix, a car that was rebuilt for Indy and one that took every treacherous turn at the oval with no trouble at all.

The race came down to a pulsating wheel-to-wheel duel with Al Unser, Jr., a virtual replay of a showdown they staged at the Meadowlands a year ago. Young Unser had won their first battle.

Fittipaldi took this one and with it, "my biggest race event."

"It can happen any way," he said. "Today it happened my way."

Emerson Fittipaldi of Brazil kisses the Borg-Warner trophy Monday, while it rests atop his winning Indianapolis 500 car. Fittipaldi won the event in his sixth try; in 1988 he finished second.

Detroit Pistons' center Bill Laimbeer, bottom, and Chicago Bulls' guard John Paxson battle for the ball in the 2nd quarter of their playoff game Monday.

Pistons beat Bulls to tie series at two

CHICAGO (AP) — Isiah Thomas continued his boom-or-bust performance with 27 points Monday, leading the Detroit Pistons to an 86-80 victory over Chicago that tied the Eastern Conference finals at two games apiece.

With the victory, the Pistons regained the homecourt advantage they lost last week when the Bulls won the series opener at Auburn Hills, Mich., where the Pistons are 42-5 this season.

Two of the three remaining games are scheduled for the Pistons' homecourt at the Palace, with the winner of the series facing the two-time defending champion Los Angeles Lakers in the NBA Finals. The Lakers are undefeated in 11 playoff games this season.

Thomas, who now has 60 points in Detroit's two victories and 14 in the two defeats, hit last-second baskets at the end of the second and third periods to give the Pistons narrow leads.

Joe Dumars added 15 points and helped limit Michael Jordan, averaging 37 points in the play-offs, to 23, only 11 of them after the first quarter.

Backup forward Dennis Rodman helped the Pistons control the boards with 18 rebounds, while reserve center James Edwards added 13 points.

Scottie Pippen had 18 points for the Bulls.

The Pistons led 44-39 in the first minute of the second half before Pippen scored nine points in a span of 2:14, keying a 16-6 run that put Chicago ahead 55-50.

Edwards then scored six points in 2:16, leading a 14-5 spurt that gave the lead back to Detroit. Thomas' buzzer-beating jumper made it 64-60 after three quarters.

The closest the Bulls got in the fourth quarter was 64-62 before Thomas started a 15-7 run with a jumper. Another jumper by Thomas made it 79-69 with 4:38 left, and the Bulls got no closer than five after that.

Schmidt retires from baseball

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Philadelphia third baseman Mike Schmidt, one of the greatest home run hitters of all-time, retired Monday in an emotional farewell to baseball.

Schmidt, 39, made the announcement at Jack Murphy Stadium hours before his teammates played the Padres.

"This is a joyous time for me," Schmidt said. "I've had a great career."

Speaking in hushed tones and his eyes moist with tears, Schmidt said it was a new beginning for his teammates.

"I left Dayton, Ohio, with a dream to become a major league player and the dream came true," said Schmidt, who then broke down in tears.

Phillies manager Nick Leyva said Chris James would be at third base Monday night. Asked if he would keep James there, Leyva said, "I'll try to."

Schmidt, who has 548 lifetime home runs and 10 Gold Gloves as the National League's top third baseman, has struggled with a .203 average and six home runs in his 17th major-league season.

His home run total ranks seventh on the all-time list and his 10 Gold Gloves at third ranks second to Brooks Robinson's 16 for the Baltimore Orioles.

Leyva said Schmidt's retirement was unrelated to the major shoulder surgery he underwent last September.

"He told me last night that it wasn't his shoulder or his elbow or his back. It is not a physical thing," Leyva said. "He just thinks that he can't do it anymore."

Schmidt had only two hits in last 41 at-bats and led the Phillies in errors with eight, making costly errors in the club's last two games at San Francisco.

Schmidt, a sure Hall of Famer, missed the last two months of the 1988 season with a shoulder injury and signed a contract that guaranteed him only $500,000 for this season. He doubled that by being on the roster on May 15 and was to receive another $500,000 if he was on the roster Aug. 15. There were also incentive clauses for games started.

Schmidt, arguably the best third baseman in baseball history, was the National League Most Valuable Player three times and won the World Series MVP in 1980.

He was a member of the NL All-Star team 11 times and named to the AP All-Star team eight times.

Golfers finish 14th

Lantern staff reports

The eighth-seeded OSU men's golf team finished a disappointing 14th out of 18 teams in the NCAA Central Regional in Dallas over the weekend.

The top 10 teams from the tournament advance to the NCAA tournament. Ohio State's Ted Tryba won one of three at-large berths given to individuals not on one of the qualifying teams.

Ohio State shot a 918, 38 strokes behind co-winners Oklahoma and Oklahoma State.

OSU Coach Jim Brown is upset over the present format for qualifying for the nationals.

"It's just too bad that we win five tournaments and the Big Ten championship and still don't get in the nationals, which in the past years has always got us in," Brown said. "I think it's too much emphasis on just one tournament. We weren't the only seeded team that didn't get in it, so I think it has to be looked at."

OSU tennis player ready for business

By Leslie Mendelsohn
Lantern sports writer

The end of the men's tennis season marked the end of a tennis career for OSU senior Ulf Hartwig.

Hartwig, 22, says he will no longer play competitive tennis.

"I will play just for fun every once in a while," he said. "I am not good enough of a player to play professional tennis."

Hartwig said it has been clear to him throughout college he would not go on with a career in tennis.

"I have prepared all along to go to work after college," he said.

Hartwig, a native of West Germany, has received many awards at Ohio State including scholar-athlete. He is also a four-time letter winner.

"I have done well (academically) for other reasons, not for the awards," he said.

After graduation in June, Hartwig will start work for Status Homes as an assistant supervisor of building homes in Columbus.

He plans on staying in Columbus at least four or five years, maybe indefinitely.

"I haven't made up my mind about where I am going to live," he said. "If everything goes well, I will stay here."

Hartwig was given the chance to come to Ohio State while he was at Nick Bolletieri's Tennis Academy in Bradenton, Florida.

Bolletieri's Academy was a good alternative for Hartwig. It gave him the chance to play tennis while attending school.

"If I would have stayed in Germany, then high school would have gotten too tough to play tennis also," he said.

Hartwig applied to schools in Louisiana and Florida as well as Ohio State.

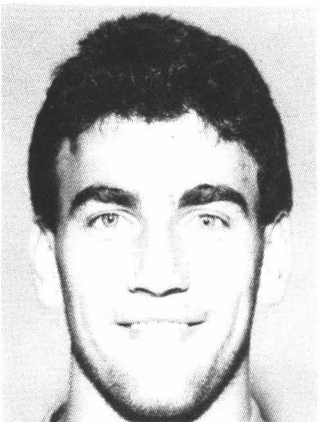

"Ohio State gave me the best in both athletics and academics," Hartwig said.

Hartwig lives with teammates Chris Gatt and Ted Glavas in a place where seven other team members live as well.

"I have enjoyed it a lot because most of my teammates have been good friends," he said. "I think that is why we do so well."

Glavas says Hartwig was a good asset to the team.

"He is a hard worker," Glavas said. "He is also part of the diverse personality of the team that made our group interesting."

Ulf Hartwig

Although Hartwig will not continue to play, he does not regret his many years of dedication to the sport.

"Tennis was the greatest thing for me," Hartwig said. "I experienced things that a lot of other people my age wouldn't be able to."

Hartwig wishes he would have worked harder on his tennis during college.

This year he was able to play both singles and doubles. Gatt thinks he has worked a lot harder.

"He put in more effort this year," Gatt said. "He took tennis and weight training seriously and it really showed."

Steffi Graf wins easily in opener

PARIS (AP) — Defending women's champion Steffi Graf lost the first three points of the match, then quickly moved into her destructive stride and beat Camille Benjamin of the United States 6-1, 6-1 to open the French Open tennis championships.

The 19-year-old West German, on the second leg of her bid to become the first woman ever to capture two Grand Slams, took just 54 minutes to get the clay-court tournament rolling as she overpowered Benjamin on a baking Center Court at Roland Garros.

Benjamin, a semifinalist here in 1984, did her best to mix up her game and keep the top-seeded Graf guessing, but simply didn't possess enough power or variety to worry the champion.

Five of the first six games went to deuce but Graf, aiming to become the first woman for 62 years to win three straight French Open titles, won almost all of the decisive points and ran out an easy winner.

The trademark Graf forehand once again was the West German's most dangerous weapon. Time and again, she ran around her backhand to slam rockets back at the bespectacled Benjamin.

Benjamin's best periods were at the start and finish of the match. She won the first three points on Graf's serve with a forehand winner, a volley and a double-fault from the champion.

At the end, the American, the world's 88th-ranked player, saved three match points before Graf finished her off with a cross-court backhand and extended her record this season to 40-1.

Another women's seed to gain an early victory was No. 10 Helena Kelesi of Canada. She beat Mary Joe Fernandez of the United States 6-1, 6-2.

Graf's only defeat in a season in which she has won the Australian Open and six other titles came at the hands of Gabriela Sabatini.

The Argentine, still trying for her first Grand Slam tournament title after several near-misses, will be Graf's main rival for the women's crown.

Agent signs Soviet hockey stars

NEW YORK (AP) — After making a career representing musicians, impresario Mark Malkovich has branched out into hockey players.

On Saturday, it was discovered that Malkovich had signed five of the Soviet Union's best players to representation contracts while he was in Moscow last week.

Malkovich, director of the Newport Music Festival, said it was the players' decisions to sign with him, and it had nothing to do with money but rather was evidence of "their passionately believing in civil liberties."

Four of the five have been drafted by NHL clubs — two by Vancouver, one by Calgary and another by New Jersey. Some of the clubs aren't sure Malkovich's intervention was such a good idea because it could prevent the Soviet Hockey Federation from allowing the players to leave.

"Whether the federation will control their fate or whether the players will have the freedom to negotiate on their own isn't known at this time," Canucks general manager Pat Quinn said.

Malkovich said switching from representing musicians to hockey players isn't a major change.

"When I was in the Soviet Union, I was interviewed by Pravda," said Malkovich, who has represented several Soviet musicians in the past, including violinist Dimitry Sitkovetsky.

"The first question they asked was why, as an impresario, did I get involved in hockey," Malkovich said. "I said, 'Very simple, they're great artists.' And I don't see any big difference between artists whether they're musicians or ballet dancers or hockey players."

He said four of the five players boycotted a meeting to which they had been summoned by the Soviet Federation. One player, Igor Larionov, "said he would rather never play hockey again than to work under that system."

Malkovich said two of the players, Larionov and defenseman Vyacheslav Fetisov, actually signed agreements secretly with him last February. The other three — forwards Vladimir Krutov and Sergei Makarov, and goaltender Aleksandr Tyshnich — signed last Tuesday in Moscow.

Malkovich returned to the United States on Wednesday.

No grades, no games

By Jim Hill
Lantern staff writer

This story is the first in a four-part series on athletes and academics.

Ohio State's eligibility standards are the most strict in the Big Ten Conference.

Ohio State athletes must maintain 12 credit hours each quarter and at least a 1.8 grade point average during their first two years of college, said Kate Riffe, athletic academic counselor.

After the second year, athletes must maintain 12 credit hours per quarter and a 2.0 grade point average, Riffe said.

Ohio State's grade point requirements are the same as the rest of the Big Ten schools for the first, second and fourth years of college, yet Ohio State's requirement is slightly higher for the third year with 2.0 grade point average compared to a 1.9 in the Big Ten.

Some universities outside the Big Ten have no grade point standards for their athletes, Riffe said.

The major difference between the Big Ten's and Ohio State's requirements are the minimum number of credit hours athletes must earn each quarter.

The Big Ten requires student-athletes to maintain an academic program that will allow graduation in five years, and individual colleges must evaluate a student's progress on a quarterly basis to verify eligibility.

The only academic requirement of the NCAA is that student-athletes maintain an average of 12 credit hours per quarter and declare a major by the third year, Riffe said.

The NCAA and the Big Ten perform audits of the athletics department's finances, recruitment practices and athletes' eligibility, Riffe said.

The Big Ten would like the NCAA to establish a grade point standard throughout the nation, she said.

Eligibility programs help to motivate the students to perform academically, Riffe said.

"If students know they have to get a two point, they will," Riffe said.

Nikita Lowry, a senior economics major and all-Big Ten women's basketball player, said her academic work comes first and basketball second.

An athlete must be dedicated to school work because athletics and academics go hand in hand, she said.

"Ohio State has prepared me well for a career in the real world," Lowry said.

The three academic counselors and a graduate assistant in the athletics department work with about 800 student-athletes helping them to keep a balance between sports and studies, Riffe said.

The counselors assist students with time management, getting adjusted to college teams and personal problems, Riffe said.

Athletes are also encouraged to take advantage of the other services the campus offers to all students, she said.

"Our primary focus is to get students to help themselves," Riffe said.

Student-athletes get priority scheduling provided they do not miss their BRUTUS window, Riffe said.

Mandatory study tables with tutoring staff are held Sunday through Thursday evenings for OSU athletes, she said.

Students are required to attend the study tables unless they meet certain grade point standards that are set by individual coaches, Riffe said.

"Study tables started because athletes are practicing when other college tutors are available," Riffe said.

Jeff Davidson, a junior mechanical engineering major and offensive lineman for the football team, said 6 to 6 1/2 hours of his day are devoted to football during spring quarter.

A typical spring quarter week-day consists of six hours for football, six hours in classes and six hours studying, Davidson said.

The schedule gets tougher autumn quarter when football activities are sometimes going on seven days a week, Davidson said.

According to NCAA reports published by the Des Moines Register, 62 percent of the student-athletes that entered Ohio State in 1981-82 graduated in five years, making Ohio State the second most successful school in the Big Ten.

The report said Northwestern graduated 82 percent of their student-athletes making it the most successful in the Big Ten.

A 1988 university study found that 71.7 percent of the athletes that appeared on an Ohio State athletic field graduated in five years, Riffe said.

Of all the freshmen that started at Ohio State, 62.7 percent graduated in five years, she said.

The same study showed that 59.3 percent of black athletes graduated compared to 19.5 percent university-wide, Riffe said.

Cleveland handles Toronto for second straight victory

CLEVELAND (AP) — Jerry Browne had three hits and two RBIs, and Joe Carter also drove in two runs Monday as the Cleveland Indians beat the Toronto Blue Jays 5-3.

Tom Candiotti, 6-2, allowed three runs, two of them earned, on six hits in seven innings to give Cleveland its second straight victory since ending a five-game losing streak. Doug Jones pitched two scoreless innings for his 10th save in 12 opportunities.

Toronto starter Mike Flanagan, 3-5, allowed three runs on five hits in two innings before leaving with a sore shoulder.

The Indians scored in the first when Oddibe McDowell walked, stole second and scored on Carter's single to right.

They added two in the second, aided by a routine pop fly that Toronto shortstop Tony Fernandez lost in the sun. Brook Jacoby singled to center and moved to second on Fernandez' misplay of Luis Medina's single.

After Andy Allanson bunted into a forceout, Felix Fermin singled to load the bases and Browne followed with a two-run single to center, giving the Indians a 3-1 lead.

Browne doubled in the fifth against reliever Frank Wills and scored on Carter's double.

Kelly Gruber scored for the Blue Jays in the first, coming in from third when a Candiotti knuckler got away from catcher Andy Allanson for a passed ball.

In the third, Junior Felix bunted for a single, took second on a balk, went to third on a fly to right, and scored on Gruber's groundout.

Reds trounced by Pirates for third consecutive loss

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Barry Bonds' two-run homer capped a four-run second inning after center fielder Eric Davis dropped an apparent inning-ending fly ball as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Cincinnati Reds 12-3 Monday.

Bob Walk, 5-3, shut out the Reds on three hits over six innings until being lifted in Cincinnati's three-run seventh. Bob Kipper finished for his first save as the Pirates snapped a three-game losing streak.

The Reds lost their third in a row after four straight victories.

Tom Browning, 4-5, retired the first two Pirates in the second before Rey Quinones lofted a fly to deep center that Davis had in his glove before dropping for a two-base error, his fourth of the season.

Junior Ortiz singled home Quinones and Walk, who is batting .296 with six RBIs, doubled to left field, making it 2-0. Bonds then hit a 3-1 pitch into the right-field seats for his sixth homer.

Bobby Bonilla, in a 1-for-15 slump, made it 5-0 in the third with his sixth homer. Browning was chased in the fifth by Gary Redus' run-scoring single.

Walk, who has won four of his last five decisions, didn't allow a hit after Todd Benzinger's leadoff single in the second until Davis' one-out double in the seventh. Benzinger had a RBI double and Jody Reed added an RBI single ahead of Dave Collins' run-scoring grounder until Kipper retired the side.

Kipper, hitless since 1987, Bonds and Lind had run-scoring singles in the five-run seventh off Norm Charlton, who hadn't allowed a run in 16 consecutive relief appearances. Bonds finished 2-for-3 with four RBIs.

Quinones drove in the Pirates' final with a sacrifice fly in the eighth.

Walk is 7-2 lifetime against Cincinnati, including a 4-1 record with Pittsburgh.

Third baseman Chris Sabo was ejected in the third after throwing a box of sunflower seeds onto the field from the Reds' dugout. Sabo had walked with one out, but was picked off first by Walk three pitches later in a disputed play.

Fine art show explores social issues

By Lynnette Klessig
Lantern staff writer

Male-female relationships, women's issues and getting beyond barriers are the themes being focused on in the upcoming master of fine arts show.

Prudence Gill, curatorial assistant for the Hopkins Hall Gallery, 128 No. Oval Mall, said this show is the fourth of five exhibits being held this quarter.

Works by Jean Salzmann and Jacqueline M. Cohen, two master's of fine arts students, will be displayed at the gallery beginning today through June 2, Gill said.

Salzmann said several of her pieces work together as single units. For example, one work incorporates the use of two elevated paintings with a floor sculpture.

Salzmann said this piece uses symbols that address the conflicts and difficulties that arise in male-female relationships. The work involves a dichotomy of water, a calming and soothing aspect, with fire, a passionate, energetic image.

She said the two accompanying paintings depict man as a fallen angel and woman as the "femme fatale."

"I'm trying to put these together as the extremes of what men and women expect or are fearful of from each other," Salzmann said.

Salzmann said the other theme she will be focusing on concerns women's issues. Specifically, she deals with woman's strength and power, and their ability to give life.

"I think that women are often depicted as weak creatures, but women do so much in the world...supporting their family...making a commitment to their jobs...they really demonstrate the opposite, and I'm trying to illustrate this," Salzmann said.

In light of this goal, Salzmann has created a large sculpture of a woman, symbolizing mother earth, with her arms outstretched to incorporate a "giver-receiver" theme.

"She is receiving strength or power from above, and giving it out to others. This is the image of women I want to depict," Salzmann said.

Salzmann, who studied for her undergraduate degree at the Herron School of Art in Indianapolis, said she makes use of colors and symbolism to express important experiences from her own life, to which she hopes others will be able to relate.

Salzmann will be displaying a total of eleven works.

Cohen, who received her undergraduate degree from the University of Michigan, and also studied at the Ecole des Beaux Arts and Universite d'Aix-Marseille in France and at Birmingham Polytechnic in England, said she will be displaying about 25 collage pieces.

She said after returning from seven years in England where she worked on landscape pictures, she found herself wanting to get closer and inside of these beautiful, paradise-like situations.

For example, Cohen said she would see a beautiful house which looks warm and inviting through the windows and she would want to get inside of it. For this reason, she said her collages symbolize getting in and around barriers.

"A lot of the pieces have windows, houses, gardens and other enclosed spaces, pictured as though flying over them," Cohen said. "It's like the houses are being unfolded."

Cohen said she cuts many of the shapes used to build the collages out of colorful papers she collects, such as the insides of envelopes and candy wrappers and sometimes uses gloss paint or colored pencils to supplement the pieces.

An opening reception for the show will be held at the gallery tonight from 7:00 to 9:00 p.m.

Cinema students present original videos

By Sonia Kelly
Lantern staff writer

Videos about war, culture and emotions will be featured at the screen debut of students' works in video drama production and animation classes tonight at the Ohio Union.

Collis Davis, assistant professor in the department of Photography and Cinema said the program will feature three original half-hour video dramatic productions, animation works from two classes, and a special presentation on "Experiments in Pinhole Cinematography."

Terrance Concannon, a graduate student from Los Angeles majoring in photography and cinema and writer of "Red Rover, Red Rover" said the movie is about a little boy (Willie) who is afraid that his brother is going to drafted to Vietnam and he will never see him again.

Concannon said what makes the story more real and horrific for Willie is the fact that the images of the war are brought into his home by television every evening.

The media glorified war up to the point of Vietnam, he said. Rather than glossing over things for children, their exposure to reality can aid in their growth, he added.

"Children in those days were the first in their generation to be able to experience war, instead of having it glorified for them in the media," Concannon said.

He said the movie presents a different approach to war and particularly Vietnam, from the point of view of a child.

"Granted that the Vietnam war is a very trendy thing to make a movie about but the legitimacy of this film lies in it's approach," Concannon said.

Lora Yan Chen, a graduate student, from Beijing, majoring in photography and cinema production, and writer of "The Stoney Touch" said the movie is about a Chinese student who attends college in America and has flashbacks about her life in China.

The heroine is someone who has a confused past that stems not only from the political turmoil of her native country but also from the fact that she is an actress whose stage shows overlap her real life, Chen said.

Liberties and complexities of American and Chinese cultures are examined through the heroine's flashbacks, she said.

"Cultural differences are not hammered out or as clear cut as self vs. others," Chen said. "The video attempts to blur the line to reveal the complexity of reality in exploring the dilemmas that are shared by people of different cultures."

The way people deal with or confront problems manifests the different forms that may or may not be determined by culture, Chen said.

Jorge Agurrie, a senior, from Columbus majoring in cinema and photography and writer of "The Inside Out", said the movie is about a college student (Marty) who competes with another student (Frank) for Liz's attention and although he is helped by his ex-girlfriend, he does not get Liz.

Marty, who believes he is over his ex-girlfriend, eventually realizes that he has feelings for her, Agurrie said.

The statement made by the movie is that you can't deny your feelings, Agurrie said.

Bruce Thomson, a senior from Cleveland, majoring in photography and cinema, will also be featured in the program with his works "Experiments in Pinhole Cinematography."

"It's a very primitive means of forming images on film," he said.

The technique involves punching a small hole in a piece of silver to produce a soft diffused image of an object when light is shown on the object on the film, he said.

"The principle is the same as a kid trying to look at a solar eclipse, where you punch a hole in one piece of paper and you see the image of the sun on another," Thomson said.

He said the process has been around for a long time and there has been a recent resurgence of it use by artists today.

The program will be begin at 7:30 p.m. in the Conference Theater, in the Ohio Union.

Bowie shows new style on 'Tin Machine'

tin machine

David Bowie sure likes to test the loyalty of his fans.

He changes his band, musical style and/or look with almost every album. With each change, comes hope that the album will be a masterpiece.

Bowie has delivered albums that could be considered masterpieces in the past, but his latest release, "Tin Machine," comes up short.

"Tin Machine" is not a bad album. It is better than Bowie's last couple of releases, "Tonight" and "Never Let Me Down."

Instead of pop songs like "Day in, Day out," "Blue Jean" and "Modern Love" that filled Bowie's recent releases, "Tin Machine" often opts for the slow burn.

"I Can't Read" features a guitar lead consisting mostly of feedback and some subdued singing by Bowie. Like most of "Tin Machine," it takes several listenings to grasp the song and begin to appreciate it.

Most of the music on "Tin Machine" is full of guitar and is aggressive yet melodic. There are little or no synthesizers or keyboards in the songs, making them sound more like the old Bowie of "Ziggy Stardust and The Spiders From Mars" and "Station to Station" than the "Let's Dance" Bowie.

The lyrics on "Tin Machine" are often words full of anger. Bowie is fed up with life on earth and in the title track, asks for a way out.

"Make some new computer thing/that puts me on the moon/not this psycho-time-bomb planet/poised to meet its maker," Bowie sings.

On "Crack City," which features an "Iron Man" intro and a "Wild Thing" (the rock, not rap, song) guitar feature, Bowie attacks not only drug addicts but rock stars as well, singing, "piss on the icon monsters/whose guitars bequeath you pain/they'll face you down to their level/with their addictions and fast lanes."

Bowie attacks racism on "Under the God" by calling the white-supremacist skin heads "White trash picking up Nazi flags."

Bowie shows an agnostic streak on "Bus Stop," an uptempo tune that sounds (no doubt unintentionally) a lot like a Willie Phoenix song. When one of Bowie's companions claims to have seen Jesus, Bowie does not call him a liar, but says the vision may have been caused by "the meal we ate down the road."

Fortunately, there are some lighter songs on "Tin Machine" also. "Amazing" and "Baby Can Dance" are happy, in-love songs about girls who make life worth living.

"Tin Machine" is not only the name of the album, it is also the name of the band. In fact, Bowie's name does not even appear on the album cover.

The other members of Tin

Machine are Reeves Gabrels on lead guitar, Hunt Sales on drums, and Tony Sales on bass guitar. Of the 13 original songs on the disc (there is a cover version of John Lennon's "Working Class Hero"), Bowie wrote five himself and the other eight with members of Tin Machine.

Whether this is just Bowie's latest persona or the start of a new band remains to be seen, but somehow it seems unlikely that this release will be known as Tin Machine's first album. It instead will probably be remembered as David Bowie's "Tin Machine"

10,000 Maniacs look at society

REVIEW

ELIZABETH WOODS

dresses the United State's involvement in Nicaragua.

Merchant states in the song that the plans for money to be sent to Central America were made in secret by military professionals and the bullets were bought with our tax dollars. Merchant pleads in the song, "Please forgive us, we don't know what was done in our name."

The album was arranged in a book format in which Merchant seems to be telling her interpretation of the troubles that effect our modern society.

"The Big Parade," the third song, is a documentary about a young man traveling to the Vietnam Veterans Memorial wall in Washington D.C.

Merchant's documentary ends and leads into a lighter song, "Trouble Me," which was written when her father was ill and in the hospital. It is the only song on the album that does not have a specific political message.

The song, "Poison in the Well," may be the most timely song on the album. Merchant sings of a town where the water has been poisoned by a chemical spill.

The last song, "Jubilee," is a story within this storybook album format. Merchant tells the story of a religious extremist who sets fire to a dance hall where there are inter-racial couples dancing together.

The song creates a very visual image of this scene. Merchant is more of a narrator who tells of the picture she is watching.

Although there are many dark songs on the album, it evokes a lot of thought about such issues even though they may be depressing.

This album seems to be slightly out of place, its lyrical quality is similar to the great poets of the late 60's. Maybe this is a foreboding of the direction of modern pop music. Are we progressing or regressing?

By Terence Concannon Duck lays plans to hatch at mall

TROY, Mich. (AP) — Employees at an elegant mall have not been able to figure out why a duck chose a planter outside the complex to prepare for motherhood, but they're making her comfortable as she sits on her nine eggs.

"We have a layette all planned out, and a shower in the works," said Mary Ellen Brigman, who works at Saks Fifth Avenue at the Somerset Mall. "And a makeover. After nine kids at once, she's going to need it."

The duck has spent about a month at the mall sitting on her eggs.

When the eggs hatch in about two or three weeks, the Humane Society may move the duck and her brood to a nearby lake.

No one is sure why the duck moved to the mall.

"Maybe she's a country duck who wants to be citified," said Magda Marudas, a personnel supervisor for Saks. "Or just a classy duck."

Half Of This Year's Medical School Class Got There With Our Help.

Attempting to study for the MCAT alone would be nearly impossible. Attempting to study without Stanley H. Kaplan would simply be a bad career move.

Maybe it's our 50 years of experience. Our small classes. Or the advanced teaching methods we use in all our classes all across the country.

Whatever it is, if medical school is your future, Stanley Kaplan can help you start practicing right now.

Experts discuss benefits of using livestock manure

By Amy Snow
Lantern staff writer

Agricultural experts at Ohio State want to educate the Ohio farmers on how to handle, use and apply animal manure so it becomes a resource instead of a waste.

"We like to think of animal waste as a natural resource that can be used instead of chemical fertilizer," Gene Isler, Ohio State Extension Swine expert said.

A session was held last week to examine information on animal waste processes that are successfully being used in other states' programs and discuss possible education programs, said Donald Pritchard, acting assistant director in Agricultural Industry.

Allen Bandel from the University of Maryland and Doug Beagle of Penn State University talked about the management programs they have in their states. Professors from Ohio State also discussed possible solutions for animal waste management, Pritchard said.

He said there has been talk of proposed state legislation that was not introduced this year but might be next year.

The agricultural community at Ohio State decided to take a pro-active look at waste management, instead of waiting for legislators to propose a bill that would be a major economic burden to Ohio farmers. Agriculturalists decided to find a way to educate Ohio farmers and meet the problem head on, Pritchard said.

Edward Naber, professor emeritus in poultry science, said the main problem is pollution. Excessive amounts of manure applied to the land add nitrates and phosphates that can get in the drinking water and cause human health problems.

"Education programs are necessary to alleviate the problem in this area," Naber said.

Animal waste problems are not much different than the problems Ohio is having with its landfills, only wastes are more dispersed. There is a need to find the most effective and environmentally safe means of disposing of the waste, Naber said.

Isler said Ohio farmers need to be educated on the proper rates of application for maximum production. Swine and animal waste is an excellent way of keeping up the fertility in the land.

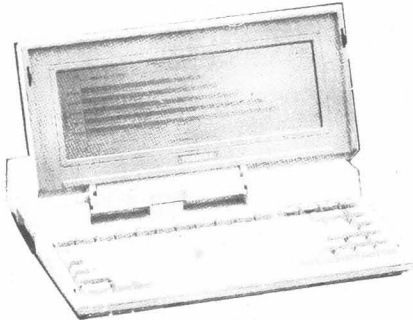

With the rising cost of fertilizer, using natural resources is a great value, he said.
