City officials of U.S. "gay capital" says marriage benefits apply immediately

SAN FRANCISCO — In an open challenge to California law, city authorities performed at least 15 same-sex weddings yesterday and issued about a dozen more marriage licenses to gay and lesbian couples.

By mid-afternoon, jubilant gay couples were lining up under City Hall's ornate gold dome and exchanging vows in two-minute ceremonies that followed one after another.

Barbie's single

Plastic pair should patch up

Valentine's Day weekend opens on a tragic note this year, as Mattel has announced the breakup of fabled lovers Barbie and Ken. According to The Associated Press, "Russell Arons, vice president of marketing at Mattel, said that Barbie and Ken 'feel it's time to spend quality time — apart."

There was speculation about whether the breakup was centered around the release of Cali Girl Barbie, a tanned, bikini-top-wearing edition of the plastic bombshell. Arons, however, denied these rumors, hinting toward other possible factors that might have led to the finalization of a 43-year-long relationship.

"Arons hinted Wednesday that the separation may be partially due to Ken's reluctance to getting married," according to the AP.

Another factor the AP listed was the hectic nature of Barbie's careers — which have fluxed from "a rock star to a military medic" — over the course of her 45-year existence, as well as the demand for her presence in "more than 150 countries."

The breakup is a poor move on the part of Mattel, and a sad imitation of the state of long-term relationships in America. In a world where the pillar of partner loyalty has been constantly chipped away by pop culture — for example, shows like "Change of Heart," and rap music — Barbie and Ken's solidarity through times of hardship and temptation has been a model of commitment.

Despite the release of several, equally-attractive friends of Barbie, nary a rumor has been spread about the mere possibility of infidelity by the faithful Ken. "Pregnant" Barbie, however, made a controversial splash in 2003, seemingly a commentary on the increasing trend of women to rear children out of wedlock — DNA tests are inconclusive about the identity of the father, though the ex-couple has alluded it is Ken.

father, though the ex-couple has alluded it is Ken.

Equally worse are reports that a new man looms on the horizon: "a new admirer, Blaine the Australian boogie boarder," according to the AP. This bodes poorly for all parties, as the possibility of Ken reconciliating and rejoining his love seems slimmer, and Barbie's reputation could go from innocent beauty queen to two-bit, man-a-minute hussy.

The split will also severely hurt Ken financially, whose popularity and even existence was made possible by Barbie. Many of Ken's editions have been made to compliment his ex-lover, and there have even been wedding versions of the dolls — vows, however, were never officially exchanged, leaving Ken devoid of any possible monetary settlement. Barbie, however, is expected to be able to stand on her own, though various male companions will most likely have to be produced to continue sparking the imaginations of the young girls who play with the dolls.

In the spirit of Valentine's Day — and more importantly, for the preservation of one of the few American examples of a healthy relationship — Mattel should employ the services of counselors to keep Ken and Barbie together. Without the solid union between the two, Barbie's convertible may be headed for single bars and one-night stands at the Malibu Beachhouse, and that's a poor moral example for the youth of today.

Pill pastor

Pharmacist gets just desserts

On Jan. 23, a rape victim in Denton, Texas went to an Eckerd's pharmacy to fill her prescription for an emergency contraceptive, commonly known as the "morning-after pill." When she gave the prescription to the three pharmacists working there, however, they refused to fill the prescription. One of the pharmacists, Gene Herr, said he refused to fill the prescription for religious reasons, according to an Associated Press story. The victim eventually went to another pharmacy for her prescription.

While Eckerd Corp. has refused to comment concerning the pharmacists' employment status, Herr said Wednesday that "he and two co-workers were fired Jan. 29." Eckerd, however, has only said the company has taken "appropriate disciplinary action."

Herr's refusal went directly against Eckerd's employment manual, which says a pharmacist cannot refuse a prescription for religious, moral or ethical reasons. Herr's decision was based on his belief the pill might kill the developing embryo, and he even said he asked for religious advice before refusing the prescription.

"I actually called my pastor ... and asked him what he thought about it," Herr said, according to the AP.

If the pharmacists were fired, as per Herr's admittance, it was the correct and only option Eckerd could have made. Even had the guidelines concerning reasons to opt out of filling a prescription not been part of their employee policy, Eckerd still would have been held responsible by the public for the immediate dismissal of pharmacists acting completely out of line.

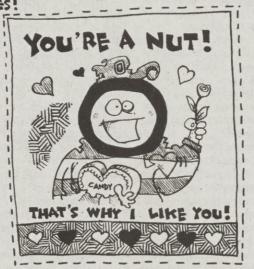

A pharmacist's only responsibility to a patient is his or her medical well-being — he or she is are able to decline to fill out a prescription if the requested drug is known to be harmful when combined with other drugs the patient is taking. But their jurisdiction must end there, and does in the cases of most pharamcies. For a pharmacist to deny a rape victim a day-after pill in his or her own quest to preserve an embryo is a superceding of every ruling, judgement and sentencing concerning abortion rights — no single person has that political power, and should never try to enforce that falsely wielded power.

Kudos to Eckerd — whether it admits it or not — for ridding the medical world of a soldier for religion in a practice that should be unbiased and scientific. The Gospel should be spread from behind a pulpit, not a pharmacy

Fridays never bad luck

She'll huff. She'll puff. She'll make your life a living hell because — guess what fellas — you forgot what day it is. That's right, it's Friday the 13th. What did you think I was talking about, Valentine's day? No way.

What I'm talking about is everyone's favorite day — a day when superstition becomes the royal monarch of our behavior. A day when people like you and I have to keep our radars finely tuned because there's going to be a mass murder somewhere involving teens, sex and a pro football player wearing a hockey mask and tight gloves.

I wouldn't consider myself a superstitious person, but I can tell you one thing for sure my friends haven't nicknamed me Lucky because I've had a million girlfriends. So today, as you're gearing up to spend the weekend spooning your significant other or setting old pictures on fire, I'll be knocking on every maple from here to West Virginia in an attempt to bolster my luck and finally win the lottery.

As for everyone else who got off to a bad start this morning, I've compiled a few things you should avoid — besides the obvious black cat and broken mirror — to keep you alive and healthy for at least one more day.

For starters, there are fortune cookies. Sure you've probably eaten enough of them to realize they're always generic, like "today you will be tired," but I'm convinced somewhere there is a culinary craftsman with a magical, all-seeing third eye, just waiting for an opportunity to drop a misfortune cookie bombshell and leave you wondering what you just ate for dinner.

Second, trucker hats. Ask Ashton Kutcher if he'd be wandering around Hollywood with a brightly-colored target on his head. That's asking for a rampaging postal worker to hunt you down and ship what's left of you to your significant other. Do yourself a favor and take the hat off, write John Deere an apology letter, and then — if you're lucky — his ghost won't slap you.

Third, Dr. Seuss. Despite his magical charm with little kids and Christmas stories, here is a man who created the modern horror genre. Reading his short stories is like asking to wake up in bizarre-o land flanked by Jason and Freddy.

If something strange happens today, we all know that somehow it is Dr. Seuss' master plan to make us so flabbergasted when reading his books that we start speaking in rhyme and completely ruin any chances of finding a date for Valentine's day.

Horton may have heard a Who, but us mortals who'd like to hear the birds chirp this spring will drop the cutesy act and tell you any book with more made up words than real ones has to be occult related.

You probably think all this is stupid, and you should go back to your everyday lives and forget about my insignificant rant on bogus superstitions, but I'm willing to bet you'll be avoiding sidewalk cracks and picking up pennies that are face-down long after today is over.

Superstitions start somewhere, and I for one think if spilling salt is bad luck, then stale cookies, hideous hats, and a brilliant, yet incredibly strange man can be just as unlucky. Either way you look at it, no one's sure why we do some things in life.

We all know the superstitions of today are connotative of people in the past.

Maybe in the future people will say it's bad luck to download music right before you see a concert. No one knows for sure.

The only thing I can say is that today is the luckiest day of the week, because T.G.I.F. — Thank Goodness It's Friday, and no matter how many ladders we walk under or how many umbrellas we open inside, we still have two days before an infectious case of the Mondays, which hits worse than SARS. So pull out your fourleaf clover and keep your eyes peeled, because today there's a light at the end of the tunnel.

Good-love = safe sex?

is a freshman in journalism. She can be reached for comment at corry.8@osu.edu.

opefully, with the exception of last-minute shoppers, all the Lroses and chocolate have been bought, love mix CDs have been made, and sappy poems have been written. With Valentine's Day just around the corner, there's been lots of talk about vaginas - with the Vagina Monologues, safe-sex, good-love and various other sex related topics. This week has been "good-love week" in my residence hall, and there has been a myriad of activities ranging from AIDS jeopardy, condom bingo and sex tips from the expert. Isn't Valentine's Day about love and commitment? So when did Feb. 14 get so sexual? And where did all the love go?

By definition, love is an emotional attachment and a tender feeling of affection. Sex by definition is, well, I don't think that needs to be defined. Besides, I don't know if I could type that without blushing. Anyway, love is affection and feelings on an emotional level whereas sex is, well, sex.

I'm an not saying the promotion of safe sex and sex education is bad because I believe it's something that isn't reinforced enough these days. People have sex — lots of sex — and, I suppose, what better time to cause awareness for safe sexual practices than during love week — good love week if you will.

And I'm also not saying that sex is bad. It's a personal decision between two people. A relationship should be built on love, and then if the couple chooses — sex. You can't just have sex and work on the love part later. It doesn't work that way.

I just don't understand the direct correlation between love and sex. Well, obviously, in some relationships, sex is one way of showing affection and love, but not in all relationships.

Love and sex, to me, are two completely different things on two completely different levels. The general consensus I have come up with is that people are having too much sex , and they don't have enough love.

This year for Valentine's Day I will not be spending a glorious evening with my one-and-only, while he showers me with gifts and whispers sweet nothings into my ear. Actually, I will be spending a wonderful V-Day with my parents at a hockey game — Go Bucks — but maybe they will bring me some of those heart candies with the cute sayings on them.

Sex is a big commitment or at least it should be. For some couples it is, but for others it isn't. I reiterate if people are going to have sex well then please listen to your gym teachers from high school and be safe, and there can never be too much promotion of safe sex.

But what I don't like about good-love week is that it makes me feel as though everyone is having sex, and that it's the cool thing to do. Well, you know what? Maybe I don't want my boyfriend to bring me roses and condoms for Valentine's Day. Maybe I want a committed relationship without the expectation of sex. Maybe I want love.

I cannot claim the idea for this column was purely my own because I actually stole it, with permission, from one of my friend's online journal entries. I hadn't really thought about the idea until I read her entry, but she's exactly right in her questioning the connection between love and sex. She asked me, "Laura, are we the only two humans on the face of the earth not having sex?" And I said "Well, I don't know, but it seems that way."

I know there are many people who feel the same way I do, and I don't want emails telling me I am making rash generalizations that every single person on this campus is having sex, because I know that's not the case.

Love is in the air. Couples are making reservations at romantic restaurants for Saturday night, I am buying hockey tickets for my date with my parents and RAs are passing out condoms. Ain't love beautiful?

Spyware, strippers, but no convictions

With all due respect to Mr. Platfoot and his claims that the U.S Patriot Act has only been used to fight terror, he could not be more wrong if he tried. How many convictions, Mr. Platfoot? That's what you should be asking. How many convictions have been obtained via the Patriot Act's increased police powers? Few, if any.

I also find his claim to have read all 342 pages of the statute rather interesting. How many of those pages did he truly comprehend and understand?

As a law student, I can safely say that had I tried to read a statute of that length before starting my legal training, I would have failed miserably at reading the thing, much less understanding the elements. Perhaps Mr. Platfoot got himself a copy of the Cliffs Notes version?

If his purported claim were true, perhaps Mr. Platfoot can explain how strippers in Las Vegas are connected to the war on terror. The investigative powers granted to the Department of Justice and the FBI are being used to investigate the financial and business dealings of a Vegas strip club owner and several Nevada politicians with whom he may be connected.

Is the target of the investigation terrorism? No, and the DOJ admits that. In fact, their spokesman even asserted that federal law enforcement officials have no qualms about using the act to pursue an array of criminal investigations that have nothing to do with terrorism, such as child pornography, drug trafficking and money laundering. Subpoenas have been issued for financial records for all sorts of individuals even tangentially connected to the subjects of this investigation, yet the Feds won't acknowledge what the investigation itself is about.

Not enough evidence for you? Try on the latest misuse of these new federal investigative powers to keep us safe from "terra."

Drake University and its law school's National Lawyers Guild chapter were served with subpoenas this past week, requesting any and all records about the Guild chapter's membership, their meetings, leadership names, names of people who attended meetings, what was said at any of these meetings, who made the room reservation requests, etc.

The basis for hunting down this deadly group of "terrists" in corn country? They had the temerity to organize an anti-war protest, at which one person was arrested for assaulting a police officer. Although the investigation continues, the demands of records and other such documentation of who did what was only dropped after the public outcry over this egregious abuse of police power over students who are most likely lily-white.

Would a Muslim or other minority organization facing the same intimidation be so fortunate? Would you think twice about joining, or leading, an organization if you knew that it was probable that your name would end up in a file somewhere in terrorism division of the FBI's headquarters?

Exactly. So don't tell me, Mr. Platfoot, that the Patriot Act has not been used to dampen dissent or to punish political opposition.

Finally, given Mr. Platfoot's computer science background, I'm sure he can elucidate the ramifications of Section 213 of the Patriot Act. You know, the one where the law authorizes federal law enforcement officials to "sneak and peek" to gather evidence, without having to tell you they were there. That would include installing spyware or tracking software on your computer that would send all your keystrokes to a data base collecting information about you and your activities.

The great thing, Mr. Platfoot, is that the FBI doesn't have to notify you that they were there. All they have to do is show "reasonable cause" for investigating you, and then show that alerting you as to their presence in your home or office would hinder the investigation. So please spare me the happy, feel-good golly gee, I'll-trust-whatever-my-government-tells-me trip, when it's becoming increasingly clear that becoming increasingly clear that we went to war on falsities, and anything emanating from the administration is suspect at best and distrusted at worst. The precedent of using FBI investigative powers to harass and intimidate political opposite is certainly already developed, and the Patriot Act simply broadens those intrusive, investigative powers.

VIENNA, Austria (AP) -U.N. inspectors in Iran have discovered undeclared designs for an advanced centrifuge used to enrich uranium, diplomats said yesterday — another apparent link to the nuclear black market emanating from Pakistan.

Preliminary investigations suggest the design matches drawings of enrichment equipment found in Libya and supplied through the network headed by Pakistani nuclear scientist Abdul Qadeer Khan, the diplomats told The Associated Press.

The discovery came as Mohamed ElBaradei, the director-general of the International Atomic Energy Agency, called on the United States and other countries to relinquish nuclear weapons to make it more difficult for such weapons to fall into the hands of terrorists.

The four-year-old, whose name means "China-America," landed at a Beijing airport after a 10-hour flight from her former home in San Diego. And no those black rings around her eyes weren't from jet lag.

Hua Mei travels on to the Wolong Giant Panda Protection Research Center in southwestern China today. After one month of quarantine, she'll join the population of about 50 pandas there, including her father Shi Shi, who returned last January.

All panda offspring lent overseas are considered Chinese property and must be sent home by age 3. Hua Mei's trip was delayed for more than a year by the outbreak of the SARS virus in China and other complications.

Three other giant pandas still reside at the San Diego Zoo: Hua Mei's mother Bai Yun, her mate Gao Gao and their son Mei Sheng, or "American Born," who

This billboard in Dallas on Feb. 2 is part of a campaign by Dallas-based nonprofit software company NetAccountability, which aims to help Christians confront the "secret sin" of pornography. The company is urging men to give their wives a special gift for Valentines Day — abstinence from porn. The billboards are scheduled to be displayed today.

Billboards help porn's lovelorn

By Bobby Ross Jr. Associated Press

DALLAS — Chocolates are always nice, and a diamond necklace would be delightful. A Dallas-based ministry thinks it has a better idea for Valentine's Day.

"Her gift for Valentines? Stop looking at porn," proclaim billboards put up by NetAccountability, a nonprofit software company that aims to help Christians confront the "secret sin" of pornography.

If national surveys are any indication, it is a personal battle waged by millions of Christians.

Almost 18 percent of people who called themselves bornagain Christians admitted visiting Internet porn sites, according to a 2000 survey of 1,031 adults by the evangelical group Focus on the Family. In Brandon Cotter and Scott Covinga 2002 www.pastors.com survey, more than 50 percent of responding pastors reported viewing pornography in'the previous year.

'It's definitely the church's dirty little secret," said Mike Foster, co-founder of the antiporn site www.XXXChurch.com, which hosts online support groups for Christians trying to his marriage and his ministry. "It was like a double life," said Anderson, 33.

For 20 years, he found himself drawn to pornographic Web sites, movies and magazines, he said. He would get up at night, telling his wife he needed to study, and would surf the Internet for porn. Later, he would spend hours accessing porn sites from the computer in his church office.

"You go take a shower, clean up and say you'll never do it again. Yet the next day, you fall right back into it," he said.

COURTESY OF RUSS HELLICKSON Russ Hellickson has been coaching the OSU wrestling team for 18 years.

Accomplished coach teaches lessons of life

By Jeff Svoboda Lantern sports writer

When Ohio State wrestling coach Russ Hellickson arrives in Champaign, Ill. for tonight's dual meet against the Fighting Illini, it will be a normal match - except it will be the 500th dual match of his coaching career.

"Five hundred matches — it's not a concept to me. It just means that I guess I've been around for a long time," he said.

Hellickson has been at OSU guiding the team to a 258-142-6 record in his 18 years. In 22 years, Hellickson has an overall coaching record of 329-164-6. He has also accumulated numerous honors. He was named Big Ten Coach of the Year in 1991, when he led the Buckeyes to a sixth-place finish. He also was chosen as Big Ten Co-Coach of the Year and NWCA National Coach of the Year in 2002. He, however, does not use the honors to define himself.

"You can't measure yourself by awards and trophies," he said. "When you start thinking you're a big shot, you've lost all concept of what life is all about. No one else measures you that way. They measure you about how you treat them, how you interact with them."

As a result, Hellickson doesn't measure his team by wins and losses.

"We tend in our society to measure everything by winning, and it's scary sometimes," Hellickson said. "I don't as a coach. I look at it as you want to win a lot more than you lose, but there's a lot of good things that can happen sometimes when you lose. A lot of growth and a lot of maturation takes place when that happens."

Hellickson uses wrestling to teach his wrestlers about life in general. "Wrestling bares the soul," he said. "For an individual who will apply themselves in the sport of wrestling, they will find out who they are very quickly. You don't fool yourself. You figure out what you're all about."

Senior Buckeye John Clark echoed his

"He teaches you about life lessons," Clark said. "He teaches you how to be a man and how to live a good, clean life in college. He's developing you as a wrestler and as a complete person.'

The wrestlers and assistants were quick to lavish praise on Hellickson.

"I think he's had a positive effect on everybody that has ever gone through the program," assistant coach and former Buckeye wrestler Ken Ramsey said.

Senior Blake Kaplan tells an interesting story about how much respect Hellickson commands on a national scale.

"He is definitely one of the most respected coaches in the nation as a person," Kaplan said. "I've had other coaches come up to me and say that if they had to take someone to father their son besides them, they would pick Russ.'

Kaplan said he views Hellickson as a role

"I have been blessed to have him as a coach," Kaplan said. "It's hard for me to describe how much I look up to him. He's just that type of person to me.

While on the surface, wrestling may be about wins and losses, Hellickson views the competition itself as the most important aspect of the sport.

"Competition is the essence of life," he said. "That's the way I've looked at it. I've never made my opponents my enemies. I think if we do the best that we can do, we make each other better."

Hellickson came to OSU after four years as a head coach and 12 years as an assistant at his alma mater Wisconsin. Although he enjoyed his time there, Hellickson was ready for the move.

'I wanted to get involved in a program where I had the opportunity to excel," he said. "Coming to Ohio was a good change for me. This has been a great city and a great university."

Hellickson was chosen to be an Olympic wrestler twice, winning a silver medal at the 1976 Montreal Olympics. He was the captain of the 1980 squad that boycotted the Moscow Olympics.

If President Bush wants to find a weapon of mass destruction, Dick, Donald, or Condoleeza might want to tell him to take a look here in Columbus. Caity Matter exploded for 28 points — a new career high — as Ohio State (14-8, 6-5 Big Ten) defeated the No. 10 Minnesota Golden Gophers 75-57 last night at the Schottenstein Center.

Minnesota never stood a chance as Matter got off to a scintillating start, going 10-for-12 in the first half while also putting away four three-pointers for a first half total of 24.

"I took good shots," Matter said. "The team was getting me the ball in the right places, and I was smart with the shots I was taking."

OSU coach Jim Foster was obviously happy with Matter's performance.

'Caity Matter continues to improve as a basketball player," he said. "She's a multiple-dimensional player instead of a one-dimensional player.

The Gophers struggled with shooting early on going 7-for-26 in the first half.

"We just didn't show up to play tonight in the first half," Minnesota coach Pam Borton said. "I thought every single one of our turnovers turned into a fast break for them.'

OSU ran with the ball considerably last night, tallying 15 fast break points, while Minnesota could only muster two.

During the first half, the Buckeyes went on a 12-0 run which effectively ended the competitive portion of the

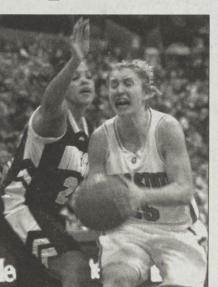

"We were just in to the game," Matter said. "There was a good intensity on the floor, and we got on a little bit of a roll. It was nice to get a lead."

The Buckeyes also excelled down low with LaToya Turner scoring 12 points, and freshman Jessica Davenport adding 13. It seemed nothing went right for the Gophers, as their leading scorer and two-time All-American Lindsay Whalen didn't return after halftime because she injured her right hand in a collision with Turner. She will be evaluated today in

"I think it really took a toll on us when she went out in the first half," Borton said. "But I give my team a lot of credit for coming out and playing hard in the second half and holding ourselves together without (Whalen)."

Matter was also cognizant of better," she said.

Bruce back in Buckeye town

By Marcus Hartman Lantern staff writer

When the Columbus Destroyers play at Nationwide Arena tonight, it will be the first home game for the expansion franchise. But it will not be the first game in Ohio's capital for their head coach, Earle Bruce.

Bruce, who also serves as general manager of the Destroyers, led his new team to a victory in its inaugural game, defeating the Indiana Firebirds 54-48 Saturday. But tonight's game will represent the Hall of Fame coach's return to the city in which he began his career.

Though the stadium is smaller and the field is shorter, Bruce, who was head coach at Ohio State for eight years, said coaching football in Columbus still has the same pressure to win.

"It was great playing on the road," Bruce said. "But we're looking forward playing (in front of) a full house at Nationwide Arena — at our home."

dence in his players.

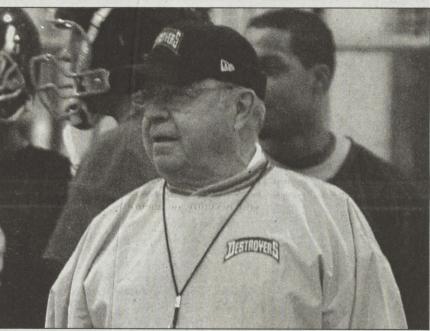

"It's good to coach because you're always surprised about how well a guy plays — how well a guy rises to the occasion. That's what I'm looking forward to. That's the fun of coaching — to see a kid play above himself," Bruce said.

Football brought Bruce to Columbus for the first time in more than 50 years ago. The Cumberland, Md., native was a running back at OSU until 1951, when a torn meniscus in his knee ended his playing career. Though he never played football again, Bruce's life in football was far from over.

Then first-year head coach Woody Hayes asked Bruce to be an assistant for him, and Bruce accepted, remaining on the staff until graduating in 1953.

While Hayes went on to lead his Buckeyes to the national championship the following year, Bruce went on to become a successful head coach at the high school and collegiate levels.

When Hayes was fired after the 1978 season, Bruce was brought in to succeed his mentor at his alma mater.

In his nine years at OSU, Bruce led his teams to four Big Ten Championships and was named Big Ten Coach of the Year in 1980.

Bruce's career ended unceremonious-1987. But his final game as head coach in Ann Arbor after which his players carried him off the field on their shoulders.

a great motivator and praised his adaptability. He expects his old coach's style of football to translate well from college football to the Arena Football League.

"He'll have a tough defense that will really step up and hit you in the mouth," Lachey said. "He'll put a big emphasis on special teams. He'll probably have a great kicker, and then on ly with a mid-Michigan-week firing in offense, he will find a way to beat you - whether it's eleven-man line-up and was an upset victory over the Wolverines run it at you, or here in Arena where you mix it up trying to get your playmakers the ball as much as possible."

Now in his sixth decade of coach-Destroyers coaching staff returning to ing, Bruce's influence continues to spread. Destroyers offensive specialist Jarrail Jackson, in his second AFL season, spends his off-seasons coaching eighth-grade football in Norman, Okla.

Jackson said Bruce reminds him of his high school coach and credits Bruce with teaching him the importance of practice.

"You've got to show (your ability Lachey described his former coach as and effort) on the practice field," Jackson said. "I need to take that with me because when I coach I know what players can do in a game, but I need to see it in practice."

College ball has respectful programs

f someone would have told public relation offi-cials at the NCAA prior to the 2003-04 college basketball season that St. John's would have to issue a statement in February denying rumors that the university would be suspending the school's basketball program, the department at the NCAA might go into cardiac arrest. So far this season, the St. John's basketball program has seen the departure of coach Mike Jarvis, the dismissal of six players who were expelled from the university and the dismissal of senior guard Willie Shaw, who was arrested for possession of marijuana.

All of these issues surrounding the St. John's basketball program came just seven months after Baylor basketball player Patrick Dennehy's body was found in a gravel pit after he was allegedly killed by one of his teammates. Fortunately for the NCAA, St. John's off-the-court scandals and past scandals from St. Bonaventure and former Georgia coach Jim Harrick have been overshadowed by Stanford and Saint Joseph's, both of which remain undefeated in the second week of February. This has given the public relations branch at the NCAA a sigh of relief. As a fan, you could not ask for more unique programs than Saint Joseph's and Stanford and two more squeaky-clean coaches than Phil Martelli of Saint Joe's and Mike Montgomery of Stanford. Last season — just when it seemed college basketball had created an environment that skews priorities and breeds scandal — two programs have emerged that prove the current system of college basketball however flawed it may be still works.

Despite being ranked in the top 5 in February (Stanford is ranked No. 2 and Saint Joseph's No. 3 in the Associated Press poll), chances are, neither Stanford nor Saint Joe's will be able to finish the season undefeated. Both have brought respect back to NCAA basketball, which should not devalue the impact of what these two programs are accomplishing even if only from a public relations standpoint.

Neither coach has ever been the target of an NCAA or an internal investigation. Their players improve steadily through their careers, most notably St. Joseph's senior Jameer Nelson, who was told at 5-foot-11-inches he was too short to play major college basketball when he was in high school. Now he is considered the best pure point guard in the nation and a sure-fire NBA lottery pick.

Both coaches realize success is based on more than wins and losses. Both programs boast tremendous graduation rates and rarely have disciplinary Stanford and Saint Joseph's represent big-time college basketball at its best instead of its worst and both do so with hard-working and dedicated student-athletes.

All five starters from Stanford average between 10 and 13 points per game. Ten others average 11 minutes or more per game, while Saint Joseph's relies on relentless pressure to create lay-ups and open three-

Despite what transpires for these two teams on the court toward the end of the season, it is safe to say that these basketball programs have successfully turned high school boys into mature young men — something other programs like St. John's have failed to do.

The Unabomber, Ted Kaczynski, on the other hand, would have his pick of the Ancient Eight. Shakespeare and Kaczynski are just two of four famous writers whose work the Princeton Review graded according to the standards created by the College Board. Those same standards will be used to grade highschool students' essays on the new writing portion of the SAT. Its findings will run in March issue of The Atlantic Monthly.

The test prep company had its trained essay-readers grade samples of writing from Shakespeare, Kaczynski, Ernest Hemingway and Gertrude Stein based on the rubric provided by the College Board for how the essays would be graded.

While Kaczynski received the highest possible grade of six the others did not fare so well. Hemingway received a three, Shakespeare a two and Stein the lowest possible score of one.

The new writing portion of the SAT "doesn't measure anything about a student's writing ability, Erik Olson, co-author of the article said. "Its superficial, begs for satire and cannot measure anything about writing beyond a simple
