Ohio State President William "Brit" Kirwan discusses his support of domestic partners receiving financial support similar to that of married couples.

Benefits sought for gay couples

Tough road ahead as Kirwan supports OSU faculty with domestic partners

By Melissa Sharp
Lantern staff writer

Gay and lesbian couples want to qualify for domestic partner insurance benefits that married couples receive, and Ohio State President William "Brit" Kirwan is supportive of their request — which has caused quite a controversy.

"Personal attitudes on homosexuality are changing. There is no question that many more companies are providing domestic partner benefits than there were ten years ago," Kirwan said.

According to Kirwan, there are two ways in which the university could recognize domestic partners. One avenue would be for state government to recognize same-sex unions. This union would be like a marriage, however, partners would be required to sign an affidavit.

"There are much stricter requirements for gay and lesbian couples to qualify to sign an affidavit than it is for a heterosexual couple to get married," said Zach Waymer, program coordinator for student health insurance.

Among the requirements are that the couple must have been living together for at least six months, and the couple must be financially dependent upon each other.

The second way domestic partners could qualify for benefits is for the insurance companies to increase their coverage for people who have alternative relationships.

Waymer and a small group of other gay and lesbian students have been working towards implementing some domestic benefits.

There are two groups of domestic benefits: hard benefits such as health care, medical, vision, dental, prescription drugs and tuition reimbursement, and soft benefits such as group life insurance, global care services, family medical leave and discounts on special events.

Waymer, along with Kirwan and others, is working toward implementing some soft benefits for OSU faculty, staff and students.

In order for OSU to offer domestic partners hard benefits, a proposal would have to be passed through the Board of Trustees.

"We're doing this in a nickel and dime fashion because our board is not ready to move forward on this issue. These (soft benefits) are things that can add value to employees' experiences," Waymer said.

In order for the university to offer domestic partners some soft benefits, Kirwan plans on making some executive decisions. According to Waymer, Kirwan wants to inform the board on what is happening.

"We've looked at the benefit structure and picked it apart. We did our homework and found out what actions we could take now," Waymer said.

Ohio State is one of the five remaining universities in the Big Ten who do not offer their faculty, staff and students domestic partner benefits. Among the Big Ten Universities, Iowa, Michigan, Michigan State, Minnesota, Northwestern and — as of last week — Indiana University all offer hard domestic partner benefits.

"Times change. Just like the turnover of presidents, there will be a turnover of board members," Kirwan said.

Kirwan said as families change, there are different dependencies that

Ohio teaching programs put to test

OSU courses, students pass exam from Ohio Department of Education

By Diane Richey
Lantern staff writer

Teacher education programs have been put to the test in Ohio — and Ohio State's passed with flying colors.

Three performance levels will be used to identify teacher education programs in Ohio that are low or near-low performing by the state's standards, effective in October.

The 51 Ohio colleges and universities with teacher education programs will be placed in either a successful, conditional or low performance category.

Successful performance category is approved for five years by the state or accredited by the National Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education.

The institution must also have a passing rate above 70 percent on PRAXIS II exams. PRAXIS II exams test the professional knowledge of teaching and knowledge of subjects in which teaching licenses are granted. The exams are usually taken at the end of an education student's college preparation.

The pass rate for Ohio State students in education across all PRAXIS II exams was 98 percent. The statewide pass rate was 7 percent lower.

"We are pleased with the strong scores of Ohio State students on the PRAXIS II exams, which include an assessment of both content knowledge and professional knowledge," said Evelyn Freeman, director of the School of Teaching and Learning in OSU's College of Education.

"The (performance) categories represent a fair description of teacher education programs," Freeman said. "The institutions in Ohio that prepare teachers are committed to a unified effort to ensure that all Ohio children have a qualified, competent and caring teacher."

OSU received a 100 percent passing rate in five academic content areas, or teaching specialties, including education in the elementary school, biology and general science, English language and literature composition, art education and Spanish content and knowledge. Other passing rates ranged from 67 to 99 percent.

OSU had 794 students enrolled in pre-service teacher education programs during the 1999-2000 school year and graduated approximately 400 students.

A conditional, or at risk, performance level indicates state approval for only two years instead of the standard five. The passing rate on the PRAXIS II exams will be 70 percent or less. At this level, intervention by the state begins.

"We're currently deciding what that (the intervention) will be," said Marilyn Braatz, spokeswoman for the Center of the Teaching Profession for the Ohio Department of Education. "This could include consulting services and specialists from the areas they (the schools) need."

Following three years at this level, the college or university will be placed in the low performance category. If the school remains at this level for an additional two consecutive years, the school loses state approval.

The categories were developed by the Ohio Department of Education with a special task force, Braatz said.

"The task force has been meeting with us for over a year," she said. The 24-member group consists of representatives from both public and private institutions.

Education graduates in Ohio outscored those of other states in almost every test category, according to the "Report on the Quality of Teacher Education in Ohio," released this month by the Ohio Department of Education. The scores were collected from the 1999-2000 school year.

"Schools throughout the nation come to Ohio to recruit our teachers," said Susan Tave Zelman, superintendent of public instruction in Ohio, in a statement. "The data collected for our statewide report demonstrates the quality of our teacher education programs, and also will help us identify weaknesses so we will know where to concentrate our efforts."

Some of the information in the report will be included in the state report to be given to the U.S. Department of Education on Oct. 7. The information will be used for a national report to be submitted to the U.S. Congress by April 2002. This report was made a requirement when Congress amended Title II of the Higher Education Act.

The reports have been sent to schools, high school guidance counselors and public libraries across the state. The report will be issued annually.

'Diversity' lecturer calls for tolerance, sexual acceptance

By Amanda VanSickle
Lantern staff writer

Three years after the brutal murder of a gay college student from the University of Wyoming, students across the country still feel the rippling effects.

Beth Loffreda, assistant professor of English and adjunct professor of women's studies at the University of Wyoming, spoke yesterday at the Ohio Union on her book "Losing Matt Shepard: Life and Politics in the Aftermath of Anti-Gay Murder."

The residents of Wyoming seemed to live in a comfortable amnesia, Loffreda said. The residents had a way of forgetting who and what was around them.

"They would preach that they lived by the saying 'live and let live,'" Loffreda said. "But what they really were saying was 'if we don't ask, then don't tell.'"

Many of the vigils held in Shepard's honor were only attended by the white residents of Laramie, Loffreda said.

"Many of the minorities within the community were afraid to go out in public," Loffreda said. "Many of them left town for fear of what happened to Matt would happen to them as well."

After Shepard's death, biased crime legislation was passed in Laramie, said Loffreda. But there were not harsher penalties for these types of crimes, and it still has not been proven his death was a hate crime.

Loffreda was the first of 10 distinguished speakers to kick off the Second Annual President and Provost's Diversity Lecture Series.

Despite the name of the series, neither the president or the provost was in attendance, much to the dismay of audience members.

Barry Landeros, an Ethnic Student Services coordinator, voiced his concern about the president and provost's lack of concern for diversity.

"Discussion about sexuality can sometimes be uncomfortable," Landeros said. "But the message given by the University Administrators by not attending is disturbing."

Cincinnati police officer cleared in shooting death

By John Nolan
Associated Press

CINCINNATI — A judge cleared a white officer yesterday of all charges in the fatal shooting of an unarmed black man that set off the city's worst riots in three decades.

Protesters gathered outside the county courthouse and at the City Council's regular weekly meeting at City Hall after the verdicts were read, at times shouting and chanting "No justice, no peace." Police said the city remained quiet otherwise.

Hamilton County Municipal Judge Ralph E. Winkler acquitted officer Stephen Roach of misdemeanor charges of negligent homicide and obstructing official business. Roach shot Timothy Thomas, 19, on April 7 after chasing him into a dark alley.

"Police officers are often forced to make split-second judgments in circumstances that are tense, uncertain, dangerous and rapidly evolving," Winkler said. "Such was the case Officer Roach faced here."

The judge, who heard the case without a jury at Roach's request, concluded that the shooting was "not a culpable criminal act" because the officer had been put into a situation where he believed he had to shoot or be shot.

"I would give anything to change the outcome of what happened that night, but unfortunately I can't."

—Stephen Roach
Cincinnati police officer

"Thomas' actions in running from numerous police and not following police orders ... was unfortunate," the judge said. He added that Roach's record was unblemished, while Thomas' was not, and noted that Thomas failed to respond to an order to show his hands.

The shooting was followed by three nights of rioting in which dozens of people were injured and more than 800 arrested. The city had not seen such racial unrest since the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.'s assassination in 1968.

"Why is it that officers are not responsible for their acts when other citizens are?" Angela Leisure, Thomas' mother, said after the trial.

"My son, I wanted him to be the last — but he won't be the last ... until serious changes are made in our police department this will happen again."

Mayor Charlie Luken called for peace in the streets after the verdict. Police had deployed additional officers on duty as a precaution.

A crowd of up to about 60 people gathered outside the courthouse immediately after the verdicts were announced. A regularly scheduled City Council meeting was briefly interrupted by the chantings of about 50 protesters.

Eric Green, 32, a Cincinnati construction worker, said there might be violence in response to the verdict.

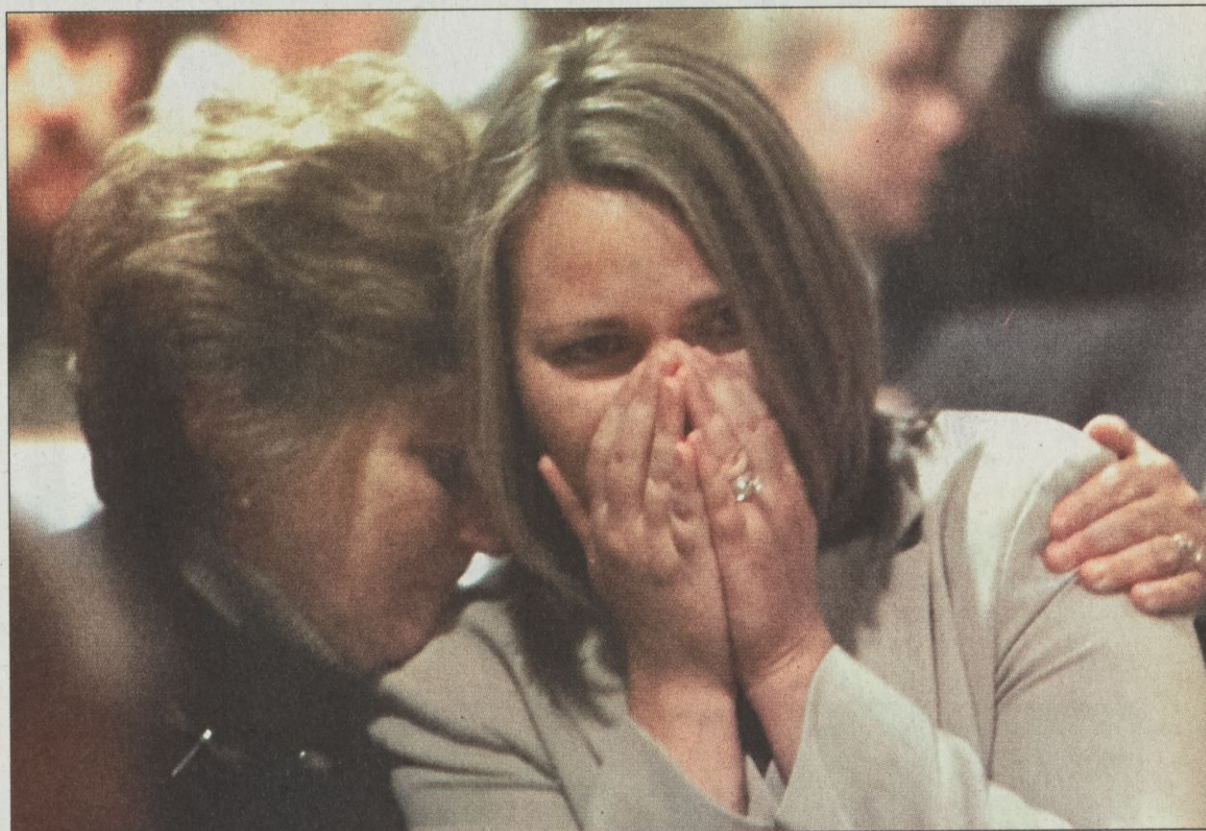

"Meet force with force, meet fire with fire. There's nothing else to do to get our message across," he said.

The verdicts show "that the city is not willing to put a police officer in jail for killing a man unjustifiably," said Kabaka Oba, a Cincinnati Metro bus driver and black activist.

"It was a travesty ... to let him walk," said the Rev. Damon Lynch III, a black leader and minister in the Over-the-Rhine neighborhood where Thomas was shot. "It set this city 10 steps back. Black life has no value in Cincinnati."

Black activists urged people to gather yesterday night at Lynch's church and near the alley where Thomas was shot.

Roach, 27, had faced up to nine months in jail if convicted of both charges and still faces possible department discipline. He glanced down while the verdicts were read, and his wife, Erin, sobbed into her hands.

"I would give anything to change the outcome of what happened that night, but unfortunately I can't," Roach said outside the courtroom, holding hands with his wife.

A city officer since 1997, he was believed to be the first Cincinnati police officer to go to trial on charges of shooting a suspect to death, police officials said.

The shooting took place in a neighborhood that defense attorneys described as plagued by guns, drug deals and violence. Thomas who was wanted on 14 warrants, including traffic charges, was shot in the chest after running from three other police officers.

"This shooting was a split-second reaction to a very dangerous situation created by Timothy Thomas," Winkler said. "Police officer Roach's action was reasonable on his part ... based on information he had at the time in that dark Cincinnati alley."

Prosecutor Stephen McIntosh said Roach ran down the alley with his finger on the trigger of his 9 mm pistol, rather than keeping the finger off the trigger until a threat had been perceived, as Cincinnati officers are trained to do.

Prosecutors also said Roach hindered the police investigation by giving different accounts of the shooting. Roach at first said Thomas made a threatening move, and he thought Thomas had a gun. Roach later told investigators that Thomas stepped around a corner and startled him and that the officer accidentally shot him.

The judge said the differences "were not substantial, and the statements did not hamper or impede the police investigation of the incident."

The story "QB Decision To Come Tomorrow," which appeared in The Lantern yesterday, contained several errors.

Steve Bellisari was not scheduled to be present at the press conference luncheon on Tuesday. It was incorrectly indicated in the article that he was expected to be there.

Also, it was LeCharles Bentley, not Joe Cooper, who was present at the luncheon.

In the column "Coach Tressel: Welcome to OSU," which appeared in The Lantern on Monday, former OSU football coach John Cooper's win-loss record was listed incorrectly. His record at OSU was 111-43-4. Cooper was 25-9-2 as football coach at Arizona State University.

Afghanistan specialists discuss hidden splendor in the sand

By Phil Helsel
Lantern staff writer

A panel of Ohio State faculty and experts on Afghanistan spoke to a large audience at Mer-shon Auditorium, fielding questions and giving insight into the war-torn country.

They described it as a land of blood and sand, a land of incredible history and beauty coupled with equally incredible brutality and oppression at the hands of the Taliban.

"Afghanistan is a beautiful land, certainly an archaeological treasure-house, which has unfortunately been degraded into warring and anarchy over the past twenty years," said OSU History of Art professor Howard Crane, one of the four panelists. "Tragically most of the archaeological material has been destroyed or looted, in part to satisfy religious zealots."

The informational panel session titled "Afghanistan: How Much Do We Know?", held by the OSU Middle East Studies Center, also included Alam Payind, an Afghanistan native and director of the center, Director of International Education John Greisberger and Stephen Dale, a professor of history who specializes in the history of the eastern Islamic world. All of the panelists have either lived or studied in Afghanistan. Jerry Revish moderated the question-and-answer session, which was broadcast live by WBNS-TV.

The secluded central-Asian country has been thrust into the public spotlight as the U.S. prepares for military action against Afghanistan in retaliation for providing refuge to terrorists like Osama bin Laden, the man U.S. authorities believe was responsible for the devastating Sept. 11 attacks on New York City and the Pentagon.

Payind gave a history of Afghanistan that is mired in conflict and factionalism, of a dizzying array of ethnic groups and languages attempting to live together and a territory that has been under almost constant attack by outside states. He also described returning home in the wake of the '79-'88 war with the Soviet Union.

"I went to my home town (Kandahar) and could not recognize my home," Payind said. "The Soviets did a pretty good job of turning Afghanistan to rubble."

When members of the audience asked about the Taliban, panelists were quick to dispel any illusions about popular support for the fundamentalist government. News stations around the world have been broadcasting pictures of anti-American rallies from the region and Afghan protesters recently burned the abandoned U.S. Embassy in Kabul.

"From outside, it seems that people are supporting the Taliban, which is not true," Payind said. Stephen Dale quickly added, "A lot of these protests, they're staged for television," which caused peals of laughter to come from the audience and shrugs from Revish, who was broadcasting live.

Dale emphasized that ordinary Afghans are not overly concerned with the U.S. or at least, don't share the same hard-line stance as the Taliban and bin Laden.

"The Afghan people generally are exactly the type of people Americans should admire, they're hardy and egalitarian," Dale said. "One of my students asked why Afghans hate Americans, they don't. Most Afghans think as much about Americans as Americans think about Afghans."

In the wake of the devastating attacks, some Americans took their anger to the streets against those of Middle Eastern or Indian descent, often against other Americans who have lived in this country their entire lives. In Parma, Ohio, a man drove his pickup truck through a mosque in the days following the attack, causing several thousand dollars worth of damage.

Fears of a backlash have affected students at OSU, as well as everywhere in the U.S., Payind said.

"Some United Arab Emirates students and even some Indian students have just left," Payind said. "There is a fear among them, maybe unfounded, of a sort of backlash. Just like Americans, if something happened in the Middle East they wouldn't want to send their children there."

John Greisberger also showed a collection of photographs taken while he and his wife stayed in Afghanistan with the Peace Corps. Absent were the familiar pictures that dominate the airwaves of turbaned warriors wielding machine guns or burning flags; his pictures were of smiling children, bakers hawking their wares and farmers hand-plowing fields.

the series as well as emeritus vice provost for minority affairs and professor of communication at the university, said the president and provost had prior commitments.

Loffreda made no mention of the missing president and provost, but focused her lecture on the disturbing events following Shepard's death, and the view the people of Wyoming had about gay and lesbian life.

Loffreda left the audience with a lesson she has learned since the death of Shepard.

"Tolerance is not a feeling," Loffreda said. "Feelings need to be substituted with actions."

The next lecturer to speak in the series will be Joyce Fletcher, professor of management at Simmons College and senior research scholar at Wellesley College. She will discuss gender, power and relational practice at work in the Ohio Union on Oct. 10.

"The series provides a wide range of topics that should be of interest to the faculty, staff and students of Ohio State as well as many members of the wider community," Hale said. "These are topics of compelling social significance, presented by nationally respected experts."

The lecture series will span the entire school year.

The series is sponsored by the Office of the President and Office of Academic Affairs. Cosponsors are the Division of Student Affairs (Disability Services, Ethnic Student Services, Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual and Transgendered Student Services), the Women's Place and the Melton Center for Jewish Studies.

All lectures are free and open to the public, and begin at 9 a.m. in the Conference Theater at the Ohio Union.

www.thelantern.comClasses help

computedBy Gretchen W. Schneider
Lantern Staff Writer

Ohio State students, faculty and staff will have the opportunity to polish their computer skills beginning next month when the Office of Information Technology commences its Computing Short Courses.

"Searching the Internet" on Oct. 9 marks the first in a series of free computing courses which will extend through Nov. 28.

According to Alan Albertus, OIT senior systems manager, these courses, which host between 200 and 300 Buckeyes each quarter, are structured for every level of computer use.

"(The courses) are to help people get started in using their computers," Albertus said. "We do offer some intermediate workshops for those who are a little more advanced."

According to Todd Wulforst, senior Microsystems consultant, students make up approximately 20 to 30 percent of the class.

Albertus, who heads the courses, said unlike the undergraduate and graduate computing classes, the courses are not intended to be highly in-depth. They are one-to-three-hour sessions that meet between one and three times on campus.

According to Albertus, the short courses have been offered for at least 20 years and attract a variety of participants.

"It depends upon the workshop," Albertus explained. "Something like statistics would appeal to grad students and some faculty more than to undergrads. Such things as 'Searching the Internet' or 'Creating Basic' Web pages would appeal to undergrads."

Albertus said some of the courses, which host between six and 50 people per workshop, are taught in a lecture format, while others are held in a laboratory environment.

Instructors are OIT staff support administrators who have expertise in the topics of the courses.

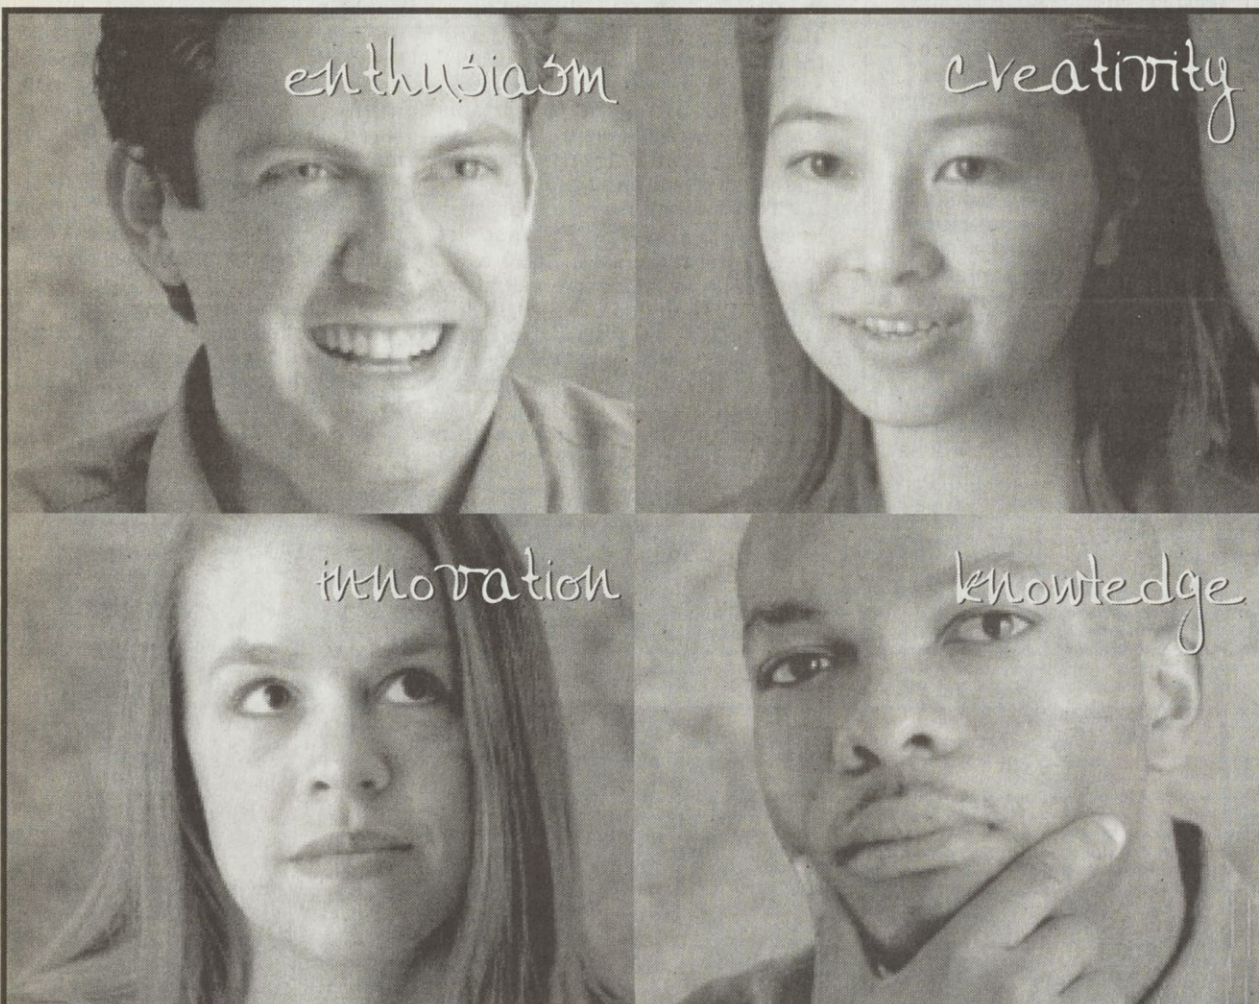

Wulforst will teach the beginning and the intermediate Windows 98 and Microsoft Office 2000 courses. He said he enjoys the hands-on experience one gains in his courses.

"It's a lab environment, so there is a lot of one-on-one," said Wulforst.

According to Albertus, the basic courses are in the beginning of the quarter, while the more advanced will be found later on. All courses are held during the afternoon.

"The grad students and faculty are on a somewhat different timetable than an undergrad," Albertus said. "A grad student isn't going to have to have something this quarter or need something right away that an undergrad might need."

Anyone who is interested in getting involved with the free sessions is encouraged to contact OIT by phone at 688-HELP, or by e-mail at 8help@osu.edu. Students, faculty and staff can also register online at www.8help.ohio-state.edu/short-

Parents scramble to cover tuition

By Liz Sidoti
Associated Press

COLUMBUS — Parents are stocking up on credits for Ohio's prepaid college tuition programs before one of the program's largest rate increases ever takes effect Monday.

"Just like any other shopper, they want to get the best bargain they can," said Judy Cunningham, spokeswoman for the Ohio Tuition Trust Authority.

The program, which oversees the five investment funds that allow parents to buy their children's future tuition at current prices, sets the cost per credit of tuition each year based on the average cost of tuition at the state's public universities.

This year, for the first time in 10 years, lawmakers removed a tuition cap, which last year was set at 6 percent. That meant that Ohio's public colleges and universities could increase tuition as much as they wanted, thereby also inflating the cost of the program's tuition credits.

The cost of one tuition credit in the prepaid tuition programs will increase 9.8 percent, from $51 to $56, about 2 percent more than the nearly 8 percent average tuition increases at Ohio's 13 public colleges and universities.

Last year, credits increased 7.3 percent, close to officials' estimates when the program began in 1989 that costs would increase by about 6.7 percent a year.

At today's prices, a four-year public university averages about $20,000 for tuition, or 400 credits.

Purchases of credits have increased steadily since Aug. 29 when the program announced the new rates, Cunningham said.

She said enrollment in the program also rose over the first nine months of this year as lawmakers discussed lifting the tuition cap and parents anticipated higher rate increases as a result.

"People haven't been beating down the door, but, yes, our numbers are continuing to grow," Cunningham said, noting that more families than usual enrolled in the program's five plans during July and August.

The program started with one fund, and the addition for four more investment plans also contributed to the program's growth, she said.

More than 200,000 people are enrolled in the five plans.

Cards offer students ideal way to save, raise money

By Melissa Goldfein
Lantern staff writer

Every college student is looking for ways to save money, but now there is a much easier way, with State Student Discount cards.

Three years ago, Ideal Results began the discount card selling business on the Miami University campus.

Bruce Twersky, president and CEO of Ideal Results and recent Miami University graduate, has expanded the business to six campuses in Illinois, Kentucky, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin and Ohio. Last year, Ideal Results added Ohio State to its list of schools.

Danny Kronenberg, an OSU graduate, is working with SBX Books and the Undergraduate Student Government to sell the cards as a fundraiser.

"We're selling the cards because they offer good discounts for students and they help enhance funds in USG, which benefit the students," said Sarah Topy, USG chief of staff.

The cards cost $10, and provide discounts on books, apparel, food, lecture notes and tanning. When students buy their books, they can save up to $15.

Paul Watkins, manager of SBX Books, is thrilled with the student response. He was happy to offer the card because he saw how USG was benefiting.

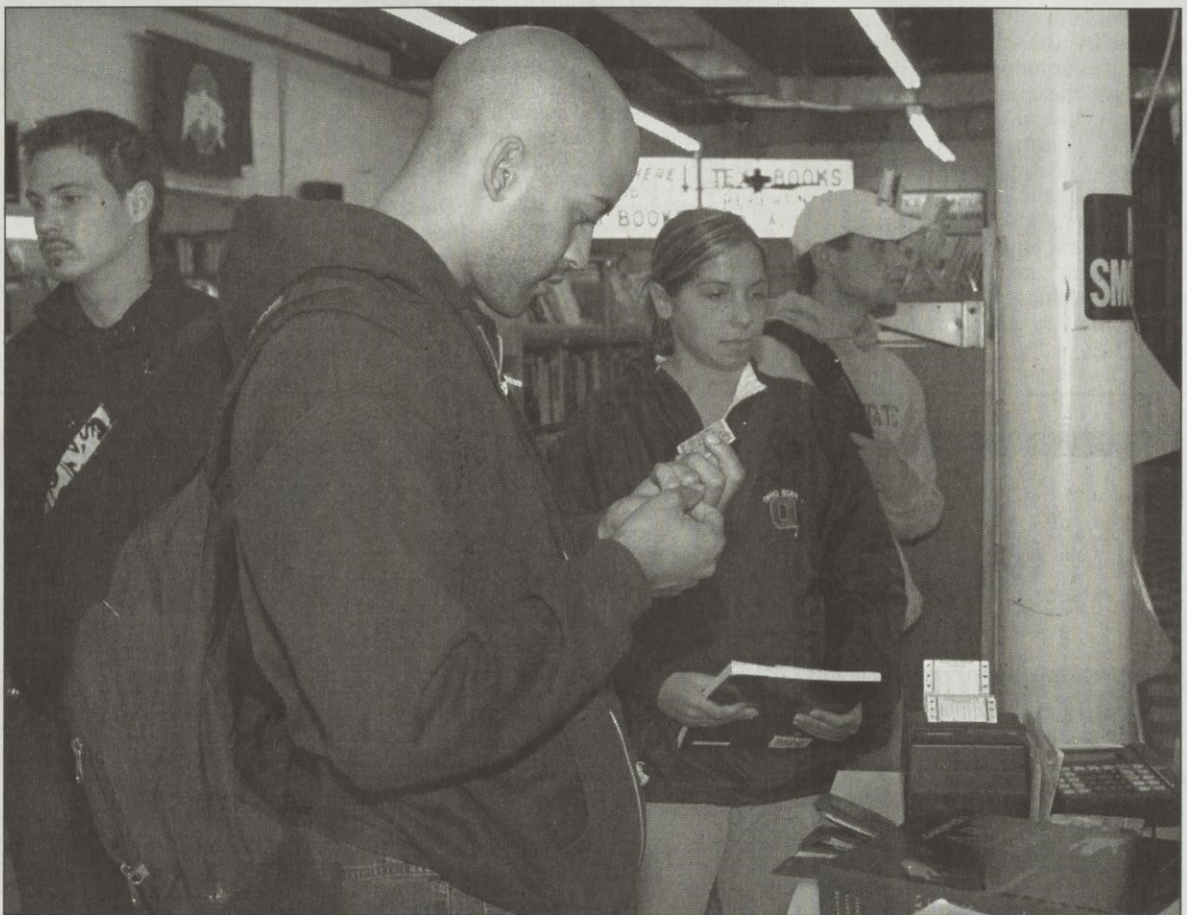

"To receive the discount, students must present the card when ordering food or paying for their books," Kronenberg said.

"This year is the first time that a calling card feature is part of the card," Twersky said. "Once the student calls the toll free number to activate the card, they receive 15 free minutes."

With frequent usage, it is possible for the student to save an average of $50 per quarter, Kronenberg said.

The card is accepted by a variety of different merchants that appeal to the OSU community. On the back of the card is a list of names, phone numbers and addresses of participating area merchants. The card expires in July and has unlimited usage during the year.

The cards are available at SBX Books all year, and periodically through USG. Students can also log on to Ideal Results Web site at www.CollegeDiscountCards.com.

Marshar Mitchell, a junior in art history and philosophy, looks at his SBX discount card. Proceeds from the discount help enhance funds for Ohio State's Undergraduate Student Government.

Prosecutor stays on Traficant case following ruling

By Joe Millica
Associated Press

CLEVELAND — A federal judge rejected U.S. Rep. James Traficant's request to remove the lead prosecutor from the bribery case against him yesterday, but left open the opportunity for Traficant to question the government's conduct at trial.

Traficant has made several motions in the case alleging that the U.S. Attorney's Office bullied witnesses into saying they offered Traficant bribes in exchange for political favors. He asked for the removal of Assistant U.S. Attorney Craig Morford, the lead prosecutor.

Judge Lesley Wells denied that request along with Traficant's request for permission to call Morford as a witness at trial.

Wells wrote in an order yesterday that Traficant failed to provide "reliable factual support" for his allegations of Morford's misconduct.

She also rejected the government's request that Traficant be barred from questioning its conduct at trial.

"We were certainly pleased with it and we believe the law supports all the rulings the judge made," Assistant U.S. Attorney Bill Edwards said of Wells' order.

Traficant's spokesman, Charlie Straub, offered no comment and said Traficant was unavailable to comment.

Although the ruling prevents Traficant from questioning Morford directly, Case Western Reserve University law professor Lewis Katz said the congressman will still be able to cross examine the government's witnesses.

"It's the same old game. Everyone's his enemy and out to do him no good unless you're with him," he said of Traficant's defense.

Traficant is not an attorney, but is representing himself against 10 charges of bribery and racketeering. He faces trial Feb. 4 on charges that he accepted cash, meals and work on his farm in exchange for political favors.

The Youngstown Democrat seems to want to put the government on trial rather than address the charges against him, said Bill Binning, chairman of the political science department at Youngstown State University.

"He's going to want to try to point out that this witness against him was sort of coerced into being there," Binning said.

But Katz said unless witnesses were bribed, their testimony should stand up before a jury.

"If the witness is telling the truth, how the witness was persuaded to come is not relevant," he said. "(Prosecutors) coerce witnesses all the time. There are lawful ways of coercing witnesses and unlawful ways."

"Most witnesses in criminal cases don't want to be there."

Mark Cleland of Austintown, who has voted for Traficant ever since he was Mahoning County sheriff in the early 1980s, said the congressman should have been allowed to question Morford if he felt it was necessary.

Cleland said Traficant didn't produce evidence to remove Morford from the case, but may be holding back damaging information for the trial.

"Traficant is no dummy by a long shot. If Traficant gives that card up, he may not be able to use it in a trial," said Cleland, who vowed that he would vote for Traficant again if he runs for re-election.

Wells wrote in her order that the only material evidence Traficant provided to have Morford removed was a taped conversation between the congressman and potential witness Richard Deter, a former employee of U.S. Aerospace.

Deter's former boss, John J. Cafaro, 49, of Youngstown, has pleaded guilty to conspiracy for allegedly repairing and buying Traficant's houseboat in return for lobbying help.

Wells wrote that the conversation "appears to have been staged by the defendant" and was "extraordinarily mutually self-serving."

She accused Traficant of putting words in Deter's mouth to make it appear that the government forced Deter to lie.

Traficant is serving his ninth two-year term and is up for re-election next year.

society needs to begin to recognize.

"I do feel that attitudes in our nation are becoming more accepting of alternative lifestyles. Therefore we need the extension of benefits," Kirwan said.

Kirwan attempted to get the University of Maryland to accept domestic partner benefits but was unsuccessful. He understands this is a complicated issue.

"It is important for those of us who support domestic partner benefits to recognize that those who do not support domestic partner benefits feel that there are very important principles at stake," Kirwan said.

The chairman of the Board of Trustees, David Brennan, was unavailable for comment.

Tornado tears up Maryland campus

By Melissa Sharp
Lantern staff writer

Tragedy hit the University of Maryland on Monday, when a deadly tornado ripped through campus.

Two students, Colleen Marlatt and her sister Erin Marlatt, were killed when the tornado struck their car. The girls' father, Patrick Marlatt, is second-in-command at the Maryland Fire and Rescue Institute, which is a part of the university.

President William "Brit" Kirwan worked with Patrick Marlatt when he was president at the University of Maryland, and noted he also had a son who recently died.

"They are a wonderful family, and no parent should have to live through such a tragedy," Kirwan said. "It is one of the saddest things I have ever heard."

According to a University of Maryland statement, there were an estimated 25 other students who were treated for minor cuts and bruises. Seven people were rescued from trailers that were serving as temporary housing for the Maryland Fire and Rescue Institute. The trailers were destroyed, and one staff member is still listed in critical condition.

The tornado also caused the university a great deal of damage. An apartment complex for students, University Courtyards, is now uninhabitable. More than students were relocated to temporarily housing.

Academic buildings were not harmed by the tornado, and all buildings on the university's power grid have full power.

However, there was substantial damage caused to the university's new Clearice Smith Center for Performing Arts. The plans for the facility began when Kirwan was president at the University of Maryland.

"It is a $130 million facility with five performing spaces. It holds all of the arts, music, and dance departments. It is a beautiful building. Unfortunately it is brand new and already damaged," Kirwan said.

The grand opening for the center is still planned for this weekend and Kirwan and his wife, Patricia, will be attending the ceremony.

The president's house, which is located on campus, was also severely damaged.

Classes were canceled on Tuesday, but resumed yesterday. There was some minor damage caused to Byrd Stadium, but the football game against West Virginia University will be played as scheduled.

The clean up of the university is still ongoing. Most of the work consists of removing fallen trees and finding the owners of the cars — more than 300 — which were damaged.

"Last week we pulled together to stand behind the nation. This week we come together even more strongly to support ourselves. I am deeply impressed by the immediate commitment of everyone to help the victims and get the campus back on its feet. From helping students, to evaluating damage, removing debris, and finding emergency aid, there is so much to be done. Strength shows itself in times of crisis, and I am impressed by how strong we are," said University of Maryland President C.D. Mote Jr. in a statement to the campus community.

OSU
HEALTH NOTESMayor to discuss diabetes screening

The Central Ohio Diabetes Association and Kroger have teamed up to offer free diabetes detection screenings. The campaign kicks off Monday with Mayor Michael Coleman speaking at 1:15 p.m. at the Kroger Pharmacy at 1630 Morse Rd., in Columbus.

Coleman's speech will focus on the importance of diabetes screening. A statement from CODA said researchers found higher diabetes death rates in Columbus, mostly among minorities.

"Increasing numbers of people in Central Ohio are suffering needlessly from diabetes complications, which far too often result in death," said Patty Mellman, CODA detection coordinator. "A simple one-minute test will determine their blood-sugar level and early detection means less complications from the disease."

Diabetes is a disease in which the body fails to produce insulin or doesn't make efficient use out of the insulin it has. Some of the symptoms of diabetes include drowsiness, excessive thirst, frequent urination, extreme tingling and blurry vision. If left undetected or untreated, the disease can lead to blindness, heart disease, kidney failure, nerve damage, stroke and amputation.

More than 158,500 people in central Ohio have diabetes according to CODA estimates. Half of them are unaware of it.

The detection screening will be from 1 to 5 p.m. Anyone age 18 and over can be screened for diabetes. This simple screening only takes about a minute. Individuals who test positive will receive additional information and should see their physician for a follow up. For more information about the Kickoff Program or upcoming screenings, call (614) 486-7124 or 1-800-422-7946.

Cancer center tests
melanoma therapy

A team of scientists at Ohio State's Comprehensive Cancer Center have been given permission from the National Cancer Institute to test a new approach for treating melanoma.

These scientists have found a new therapy predicted to help enhance the body's defense system fight the disease.

A press release from the James Cancer Hospital said a Phase I study under the direction of Dr. William E. Carson at the James and Richard J. Solove Research Institute was conducted on 46 patients earlier this year.

Melanoma is a treatable and curable disease if found early, said Carson. If the lesions of the disease are thick and deep and have spread, it most likely will not be responsive to any form of treatment.

The therapy the research team has found is based on using a small amount of cytokines, which are naturally occurring chemicals in the body. Cytokines are made of white blood cells that are released into the bloodstream and help other white blood cells fight off cancer. The most powerful cytokines for fighting off melanoma are interferon and interleukin.

In Phase I patients responded to interferon-alpha. With Phase II researchers are trying to find a way to make IFN-alpha more effective. This part could begin as soon as mid-November after the Internal Review Board approves the protocol.

Combining drugs
may fight cancer

Researchers at Ohio State's Comprehensive Cancer Center are hoping they have found two anti-cancer drugs that will be effective in treating esophageal cancer.

The two drugs are mitomycin-C and CPT-11, and each has been used separately for fighting cancer.

In a statement from the University Medical Center, Dr. Miguel Villalona says combining the two drugs may offer some patients a larger benefit.

Researchers say these drugs are most effective when MMC is administered first and CPT-11 second. Because esophageal cancer is typically difficult to treat, Villalona is encouraged by the response in patients after the treatment of these two drugs.

The American Cancer Society estimates there will be 12,200 new cases of esophageal cancer this year. Esophageal cancer has been found to appear more often in men than women, and three times more likely to appear in African-Americans than Caucasians. The survival rate of patients living with advanced esophageal cancer is only one percent after five years.

NATO allies discuss strategy

By Tom Raum
Associated Press

BRUSSELS, Belgium — The United States told NATO allies yesterday it needs more information on how to find Osama bin Laden and his followers and asked their help in gathering intelligence.

"If we need collective (military) action, we'll ask for it," Deputy Defense Secretary Paul Wolfowitz said after briefing NATO military leaders on the administration's campaign against terrorism.

In private sessions with 18 NATO partners and Russia, Wolfowitz emphasized nonmilitary options.

Even when military strikes do come, he said, the principal objectives at first might be to try to obtain additional information, according to participants at the sessions. Among the possibilities, officials said: Strikes designed to shake up suspect hideouts rather than to kill people on the ground.

The Bush administration is trying to keep from inflaming Islamic populations as it reaches out to try to enlist nations in central Asia in the campaign.

In the meantime, much more information is needed on the whereabouts of the terrorist leaders to successfully wage war against them, Wolfowitz told the allies.

Pentagon planners also are concerned that U.S. forces sent into states that harbor terrorists could be subjected to chemical or biological attacks, said a senior U.S. defense official, commenting only on condition of anonymity.

Wolfowitz told the allies that the United States would consider moving some equipment and forces — such as reconnaissance and search-and-rescue units — out of the Balkans if needed in the campaign against terrorism. He said this does not undermine America's commitment to peacekeeping in Kosovo and Bosnia.

He told the allies they could be most helpful by increasing their intelligence operations and helping a U.S. effort to track and block sources of financial funding.

"I think it can't be stressed enough that everybody who's waiting for military action ... needs to rethink this thing," Wolfowitz told a news briefing.

"We don't believe in just demonstrating that our military is capable of bombing. The whole world knows that," he said.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Meantime, Russian Defense Minister Sergei Ivanov said his nation stands ready to help. "This terror is very broad-based and unpredictable," he said.

Ivanov did not specify the form of any assistance but noted that the battle against terrorism "cannot be conducted solely by military means."

Wolfowitz held separate sessions with Ivanov and the defense ministers of Turkey, Britain, France and Italy.

Standing in for Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld, Wolfowitz briefed NATO on U.S. efforts to build an international coalition to track down the perpetrators of the Sept. 11 attacks in New York and Washington and to wage a wider campaign against terrorism.

NATO members reiterated their strong support.

"The suicide bombers may themselves be dead, but the people who drove them and who organized them are still alive," said Lord Robertson, the NATO secretary-general.

Robertson said that, thus far, "The United States has not yet asked the alliance for anything."

Wolfowitz said bin Laden and his al-Qaida network remain the leading suspects in the attacks but other groups and individuals were clearly involved. He acknowledged it was hard to go after groups known for their ability to hide and escape detection.

As NATO allies discussed strategy, Pakistani and U.S. defense and intelligence officials reached broad agreement on major points of an operational plan that includes attacks on camps in Afghanistan, senior Pakistani officials said. However, they said some sticking points remain.

Speaking on condition of anonymity, the officials said all concerned want to minimize the use of ground forces.

Europeans crack down on terrorism

By Daniel Woolls
Associated Press

MADRID, Spain — Europe continued to crack down on suspected terrorists, making arrests in Spain and Britain in an effort to link Osama bin Laden to the Sept. 11 attacks on the United States.

In Spain, police detained six Algerians allegedly linked to bin Laden, the chief suspect in the suicide jet attacks, and to a group suspected of planning attacks on U.S. targets in Europe.

In Britain, authorities captured a French national who was allegedly involved in a plot to attack U.S. interests in Europe. France has already placed seven other suspects in the case under formal investigation, a step before being charged.

Authorities say the eight all are believed to have ties to bin Laden. Evidence found during arrests in France last week suggest the suspects were part of a group scouting out European locations for attacks, with the U.S. Embassy in Paris a prime target, French news reports said.

In Sweden, police have placed some people under surveillance who allegedly went to suspected terrorist training camps in Afghanistan linked to bin Laden.

The six people detained in Spain on Tuesday night and before dawn yesterday allegedly belong to a dissident faction of the Armed Islamic Group, Algeria's most hard-line insurgency movement, Interior Minister Mariano Rajoy said.

The six Algerians have not been charged but "evidently had serious connections with international terrorism and were financially connected with terrorist bin Laden's organization," Prime Minister Jose Maria Aznar told reporters.

Sally Pont

Discussing and Signing — Fields of Honor: The Golden Age of College Football and the Men Who Created It

The daughter of a former Yale football coach and the niece of a Big 10 coach, Sally Pont is dean of students and teaches English at Moravian Academy in Pennsylvania. Her first book, Finding Their Stride was a testament to her experience coaching high school track. In Fields of Honor, she brings the real story of how the game of football emerged after World War II.

Sally Pont offers an intimate look at the legendary football coaches of the 1950's and '60's who gave their all and created the modern game. She features greats such as Woody Hayes and Ara Parseghian, brilliant coaches who created the offensive and defensive strategies that fans reel off today.

As part of our Author Series at Long's Bookstore and the Ohio State University Bookstore, Sally Pont will discuss and sign her book Fields of Honor. She will appear at the Ohio State University Bookstore on Friday, October 5th at 12:00Noon, and on the same day at 6:00p.m. at Long's Bookstore. All events are free and open to the public.

U.S. Embassy in Afghanistan destroyed by demonstrators

By Amir Shah
Associated Press

KABUL, Afghanistan — Thousands of demonstrators stormed the long-abandoned U.S. Embassy in Afghanistan yesterday, pelting it with stones, torching cars and a guardhouse, and ripping down the heavy metal U.S. seal above the entryway.

Heavy new fighting was reported in northern Afghanistan as an opposition alliance pressed its bid to seize territory from the Taliban, the hard-line Islamic movement that governs most of the country.

The United States suspects Saudi exile Osama bin Laden of orchestrating the Sept. 11 attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon, and has ordered the Taliban to turn him over or face punishment.

Shouting "Long Live Osama!" and "Death to America!" the protesters burned U.S. flags and an effigy of President Bush before storming the old embassy compound, which was guarded by a few Afghan security guards who were no match for the crowd. The last U.S. diplomat left the embassy in Kabul in 1989, just ahead of the Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan.

"We are the people of Kabul," the protesters shouted. "We are ready for a jihad (holy war) against the United States."

Smoke billowed into the sky after about five vehicles were set afire in the embassy compound, and several men used hammers to remove the large circular U.S. seal above the front entrance. Taliban authorities eventually dispersed the protesters and extinguished the car fires.

In Pakistan's capital, Islamabad, senior Pakistani officials said Pakistani and U.S. defense and intelligence officials had reached general agreement on an anti-terror program that included some provisions for possible attacks on bases in Afghanistan, but that some sticking points remained.

Speaking on condition of anonymity, the officials said both sides want to minimize the use of ground forces in any strike. They also said some differences emerged during talks that began Monday between high-ranking Pakistani officials and an American delegation that includes senior defense and intelligence representatives.

The points of disagreement include whether the United States or other outside parties should lend support to the opposition alliance, something Pakistan — the only country that still has diplomatic ties with the Taliban — has expressed strong misgivings over.

Other points of contention: what action is warranted against Pakistan-based militant groups, and whether or not the United Nations should approve any operation against Afghanistan.

Some differences were resolved Tuesday when some U.S. delegation members met Pakistan's president, Gen. Pervez Musharraf, the officials said. A final round of U.S.-Pakistani talks was taking place yesterday in Islamabad.

Pakistan was clearly uncomfortable with public discussion of its role in any U.S. strike. A Foreign Ministry spokesman, Riaz Mohammed Khan, said yesterday that "no joint operation or specific contingency plans have been placed before the Pakistan government."

He added that the fight was not against Afghanistan or its people, but against terrorism.

"Pakistan cannot and can never join in any hostile action against Afghanistan or the Afghan people — we are deeply conscious that the destinies of the two people are intertwined," Khan said.

Meanwhile, officials said the State Bank of Pakistan ordered banks to freeze assets of 27 groups suspected of terrorist links, including two groups based in Pakistan — the Al-Rashid Trust and the Harkat ul-Mujahideen, a militant group fighting Indian rule in the Kashmir.

The groups said the U.S. decision to freeze their assets was unfair but would not impede their operations.

Anti-government protests have been held in cities across Pakistan since Musharraf pledged to support U.S. military action in Afghanistan.

Yesterday, attackers threw a grenade and opened fire on hundreds of people gathering in Karachi for what would have been the first public meeting supporting Musharraf. At least 12 people were injured, police and witnesses said. The assailants fled.

In northern Afghanistan, new battles broke out between Taliban and opposition fighters in the provinces of Samangan and Balkh. Mohammed Ashraf Nadeem, a spokesman for the opposition's northern alliance, said both sides used artillery, rocket launchers, tanks and machine guns, but that neither managed to take over new territory.

End of road for some sports cars

By Ed Garsten
Associated Press

DETROIT — Two of America's favorite sports cars are nearing the end.

General Motors Corp. announced Tuesday that the 2002 model year will be the last for the Chevrolet Camaro and Pontiac Firebird.

GM blamed the demise of the Camaro and Firebird on a 53 percent decline in the sports car market since 1990.

More than 4 million Camaros have been sold since it was introduced in 1967. Its peak year was 1978 when 260,201 were sold, but last year sales dwindled to just 42,131.

The Firebird's best year was also 1978 when 175,607 were sold. In 2000, though, sales were just a tad over 31,000.

John Middlebrook, GM vice president and general manager of vehicle brand marketing, said the automaker will celebrate the cars with a 35th Anniversary Edition Camaro and a Collector Edition

Firebird Trans AM.

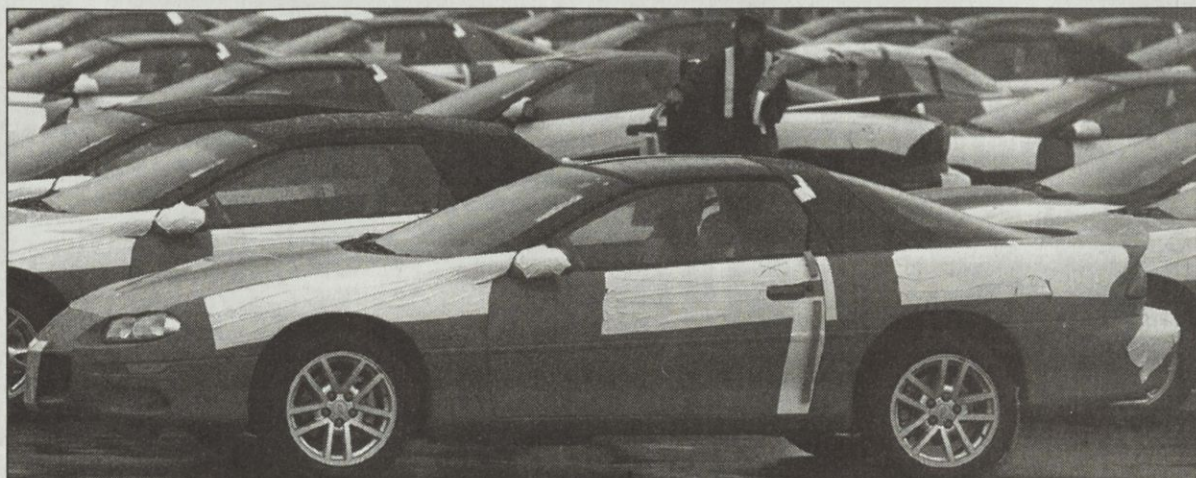

The cars will not be directly replaced, but the new Chevrolet SSR, available next year, is expected to attract some Camaro and Firebird buyers. The vehicle is a cross between a roadster and the now-extinct cult favorite El Camino.

Pontiac will offer the new Vibe GT, Bonneville SSEi and supercharged Grand Prix GTP.

The Ford Mustang is the only survivor of the muscle car glory days. The Chevy Corvette and Dodge Viper sports cars have only two seats and are much more expensive than the Camaro and Firebird.

The Ste. Therese, Quebec, assembly plant where the Camaro and Firebird are produced will close next September. Maureen Kempston Darkes, president and general manager for GM of Canada Limited, said the company tried to discover an alternative to continue manufacturing at the plant, but was unable to find one.

"This is an extremely painful and difficult decision," Darkes said.

Last major airline announces cutbacks

By Justin Bachman
Associated Press

ATLANTA — Delta Air Lines said yesterday that it will cut up to 13,000 jobs, or 15 percent of its work force, because of declining air travel following the terrorist attacks two weeks ago.

Delta also trimmed capacity by 15 percent, sayings its planes are only about a third full on most flights.

"War was declared on the United States of America, using aviation as the instrument of destruction," Delta Chairman Leo F. Mullin said. "As a result, the operational and financial outlook for airlines has changed precipitously, and drastic measures are required if we are to avoid being among the first economic casualties of the war."

Delta was the last of the nation's six major airlines to announce cuts in the aftermath of the Sept. 11 attacks. Overall, U.S. airlines plan to trim more than 92,000 jobs and Boeing Co. up to 30,000 more by the end of next year. Overseas, British Airways, Swissair and other carriers have also announced cutbacks.

Delta spokesman Tom Donahue said the airline has lost about $1 billion since the attacks. The company will get about $600 million from the $5 billion cash relief approved by Congress last week, he said.

"The direct aid granted by the government helps Delta meet its immediate financial obligations, but with passenger demand forecast to remain depressed for at least a year, the need to reduce costs remains a financial imperative," Donahue said.

Delta said a significant number of jobs will be eliminated through voluntary programs. The company has some 86,000 employees.

Delta, the largest employer in the Atlanta area with 32,000 workers, has large work forces at its other hubs — Cincinnati, Dallas-Fort Worth and Salt Lake City. The airline also has extensive operations in Orlando, Fla., New York and Los Angeles.

Other U.S. airlines have announced about 80,000 job cuts since the attacks on New York and Washington, including American, United, Northwest, Continental and US Airways.

Dynamite plant explodes; several workers suffer injuries

MOSCOW, Pa. (AP) — An explosion ignited a series of fires yesterday at a plant that makes dynamite and fireworks, and at least one worker was missing.

Roughly 200 residents within a one-mile radius were evacuated and could be out of their homes until this evening.

One worker with critical burns was taken to a hospital in Allentown, said Jerry Gaughan, emergency services director for Lackawanna County. Two others were treated for minor burns.

Rescuers called off the search for the missing worker a few hours after the explosion.

"There's still fire, several fires, and it's not safe to go in there. Based on information from the owners, there's approximately 10,000 pounds of black powder that they're worried about up there," Gaughan said.

The fires could take several days to burn out, he said.

The first explosion occurred at 7:35 a.m. in a black powder storage facility owned by J & J Pyrotechnics Mfg. A woman who answered the phone at the company said no one was available to comment.

State officials identified the company owner as John Ianarone. There is no telephone listing for him in the Scranton area.

Gaughan said Ianarone was at the site at the time of the first explosion and helped pull the critically injured burn victim from the powder storage area, which he described as a shallow bunker.

The federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms was investigating. The cause of the explosion was not immediately determined, Gaughan said.

Emergency officials received a waiver from the Federal Aviation Administration to fly a helicopter over the facility to determine the extent of the fires. The FAA had barred helicopter flights as an anti-terrorism measure.

Team stands behind Paterno despite Penn State's 0-2 start

By Jeff Rice
Daily Collegian (Penn State)

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. — The critics and naysayers are scrambling out of the woodwork.

"Joe Must Go!" is the new battle cry as the Penn State Nittany Lions, nationally dominant for so long, are suddenly the bottom feeders in the Big Ten and maybe even in their own state.

A second consecutive 0-2 start by the Lions has some wondering whether it's time for head coach Joe Paterno to hang 'em up.

But don't tell that to his team. Paterno's players were quick to their 74-year-old coach's defense Tuesday.

"I really don't think it's Joe," said defensive end Michael Haynes.

"We're just not executing. The game plans the coaches draw up are good game plans."

Despite having two full weeks of practice before last Saturday's game against Wisconsin, Penn State came out flat and stayed there. The Lions did not appear as though they were ready to play the Badgers, which led some to question whether or not their coach still has the ability to prepare them to play.

"When I hear that, I get pissed off when I see how hard Joe works and how enthused he is when he's out there at practice," said defensive tackle Jimmy Kennedy.

Kennedy and the other veteran Lions are saying that the blame is to be placed on their burly shoulders. After all, Paterno isn't the one out on the field missing tackles or dropping passes. It doesn't matter what the coaches do, said Kennedy, if the players don't come to play.

"I think what's gonna cure the problem is guys really looking at themselves, because the talent level is there," he said. "Joe communicates more with the players and bonds with the players than he has since I've been here."

Strong words from a very large, strong man. Kennedy, in fact, has been one of the few Lions playing up to potential thus far.

But he can't do it alone, and he knows his teammates need to pick up the slack.

He also knows that encouragement from coaches can only go so far.

"You can't force a team to play at a level you want them to play at if it's not coming from inside," Kennedy said. "You know what I mean?"

Haynes said he, Kennedy and some of the other team leaders have been trying to rally the troops during practice, "but we need more people to do it."

If the Lions are to turn things around and salvage this season, it will have to start now.

The change will not be easy, but it can be done, Kennedy said.

And the necessary adjustments will be made in front of a mirror rather than on the field.

"It won't change overnight," he said. "But guys can change their personality and level of commitment overnight."

Browns' Jackson silences critics in Sunday win

BEREA, Ohio (AP) — James Jackson raised eyebrows back on draft day in April when he said the Cleveland Browns could call off their search for a feature running back.

Jackson arrived saying he was the man.

Two weeks into the season, there's no doubt he is.

The rookie gained 124 yards on 31 carries in Cleveland's 24-14 win over the Detroit Lions on Sunday, and nobody — not even former college teammate Edgerrin James — is questioning Jackson anymore.

"Hopefully, I can go out and get a few more of those," Jackson said Wednesday. "I wasn't sore, so I think that's the most positive thing."

Jackson's 124 yards were the most by a Browns running back since 1987, and he became the first Cleveland back to get 100 yards in a game since Earnest Byner in 1995.

He also tied Jim Brown's rookie team record for attempts and perhaps more importantly got James, Indianapolis' star back and Jackson's close friend, to cut him a little slack.

Following a 14-carry, 37-yard effort in his NFL debut against Seattle, Jackson said he caught grief from James and others.

"I heard a lot about it on the phone from my home boys," he said. "Edgerrin and those guys."

But as he got back to the locker room on Sunday, his cellphone was ringing.

"Three minutes after the game they were calling me up," Jackson said. "They just said, 'Good game and we're proud of you.' I didn't rub it in."

The Browns' storied history was written by Hall of Fame running backs such as Jim Brown, Marion Motley and Leroy Kelly. But in their first two years back in the league, Cleveland's rushing game was not existent, and the club paraded in all kinds of backs looking for a decent one.

In 1999, Terry Kirby and Karim Abdul-Jabbar got their shots. And last year, Travis Prentice and Errict Rhett got the most carries. But there were countless others who came and went.

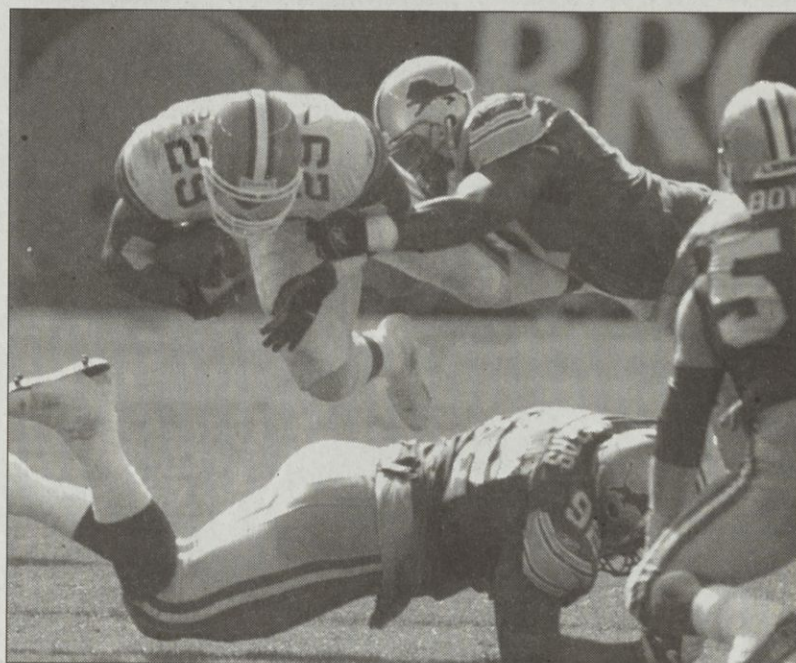

"I don't think I could list them all," quarterback Tim Couch said. "I think we finally found one that's probably going to be here for a while."

Browns coach Butch Davis had Jackson at Miami so he knew what kind of player he got when the 5-foot-10, 210-pound Jackson was selected with the 65th overall pick in this year's draft.

Jackson, who backed up Jacksonville's Fred Taylor in high school, sat behind James for two years with the Hurricanes. But as a part-time player he made the most of his chances, averaging nearly 7 yards per carry for two years before becoming a starter.

Davis joked that there were many times when Jackson made him look bad.

"They wanted to fire the coach every other week," Davis said. "Edgerrin was tearing the country up, nobody was tackling him and half the people in the stands thought we were playing the wrong running back."

Browns running back James Jackson, No. 29, ran for 124 yards on Sunday. ASSOCIATED PRESS

Jordan, Bonds 'converse'

Two egos so large they need separate land masses.

Imagine the spark these two could make burning off some of those weeknight wireless minutes.

MJ: Sending...

Barry: Bonds, here.

MJ: I'm back.

Barry: Yeah, I know my nutritionist saw that. That's great.

MJ: It is great isn't it? I'm just heading up to Chicago to polish my statue, I want it looking great for the pre-season.

Travis Sawchik

Barry: Yeah, I'm lobbying to have my own erected on a buoy out in McCovey Cove but management thinks that may be too much.

MJ: What a joke!

Barry: Yeah, they think having three lockers to myself, a big screen television for my personal use, a PR man, personal trainer, a recliner, masseur in the club house and arriving in a separate bus from the team is rubbing some of the guys the wrong way.

MJ: Well it's not like the team didn't congratulate you after your 500th trot around the bases.

Barry: Actually, they didn't.

MJ: Oh.

Barry: But all that matters is that the people who care about me did. My personal trainer, PR man, masseur and nutritionist were all there for me the day I increased my greatness.

MJ: Hey, at least you know who your real friends are. I mean, who needs a team anyway. I could have won those six rings with three cheerleaders and a chimp wearing a suit.

Barry: Championship, or no championship, there will still be Cooperstown. The things I care about are, 70 home runs and first ballot. I could care less that I have a postseason batting average of .200 in 80 at-bats with one home run.

MJ: Yeah that must be strange playing a team sport.

Barry: It is. So why did you decide to come back? You're 38, you can't possibly win another scoring title. So what is it? Love of the game? Ha, ha, come on. Boredom? Gambling getting old? Family life bogging you down? I mean your airness, it's like Ludi-cious says "different area codes," and the NBA has like, what, 30?

MJ: Come on Barry, gambling wouldn't force me to retire twice. There is much larger reason for my triumphant return. Tiger Woods.

Barry: Tiger's still bothering you, eh?

MJ: I never realized how difficult it would having the spotlight ripped away from me and given to Tiger, and for a brief time this summer, yourself.

Barry: Hey! I've had the spotlight, I'm the player of the '90s.

MJ: Barry, please, I'm the No. 1 athlete of the century. I won't let Tiger, engaging in a recreational activity, make anyone forget that.

Barry: ESPN, sheesh, a horse made that list, although that Barry Bonds Bonanza was excellent on ESPN Classic.

MJ: I'm going to dominate the headlines for months. The Masters is more than half a year away!

Barry: Just keep quiet till I get four more home runs, I want to bask in this glory.

MJ: Are you going to have the Maris and McGwire family at the final games?

Barry: Why would I have them there they don't pamper me, and who is Maris?

MJ: Man, we are going to have some phat endorsements knocking at the door. This could be bigger than CEO Jordan or Space Jam.

Barry: Yeah, you used to wear real bagging clothes and brash jewelry. They wouldn't let you endorse anything unless you...

MJ: Well, Barry I got to run. I have to sell my share in the Wizards and Capitals before I can build on my legend. Just thought I'd let you know the spotlight won't be around long.

Barry: Thanks for the heads up.

MJ: I know. I'm back for the love of myself.

Barry and Michael are two of the greatest athletes ever to play. What they have done on the field and on the court will not be duplicated for some time. It's too bad they fell in love with that.

So Long(ley)

NEW YORK (AP) — Luc Longley, a 10-year veteran who won three NBA titles with the Chicago Bulls, announced his retirement.

The 32-year-old center, who played in 25 games for New York last season, has an arthritic condition in his left ankle that forced his retirement. The 7-foot-2 Longley was a member of Australia's Olympic team. He also played for Minnesota and Phoenix, averaging 7.2 points and 4.9 rebounds for his career.

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — U.S. Ryder Cup captain Curtis Strange said his team will donate $520,000 to the National Disaster Relief Fund, while the PGA of America said it would give $500,000.

Don't ride with me

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. (AP) — Colorado forward Milan Hejduk pleaded guilty to a charge of careless driving in an alleged drunken-driving case.

Under a deal with prosecutors, a charge of driving while ability impaired will be dismissed if Hejduk stays out of trouble for two years, district attorney's spokesman Mike Knight said.

He needs a ride elsewhere

ASHBURN, Va. (AP) — Jeff George was cut by the Washington Redskins yesterday after he failed to lead the team to a single point in its two embarrassing losses to open the season.

Handcuffed in a system that didn't suit him, the quarterback was scoreless in 6 1/2 quarters. The Redskins have been outscored 67-3, with the field goal coming while backup Tony Banks was on the field in the opener against San Diego.

George's 34.6 quarterback rating ranks last in the NFL. In the two games, he completed 23 of 42 passes for 168 yards and three interceptions. He was also sacked six times.

The Redskins are without a touchdown two games into the season for the first time in their 69-year history, which includes three Super Bowl titles.

Riding with anger

Upset with some on-track rubbing and wanting to discuss it with Chad Little, Kevin Harvick instead got a drink poured over his head and wound up in a shoving match that landed him on the ground.

Thinking he was intentionally taken out of a race, Greg Biffle ran down the track and threw a punch at Jay Sauter through his car window.

Rusty Wallace and Ricky Rudd, involved in some serious bumping and banging in three straight races, followed their latest contact last week in Dover, Del., with a physical confrontation and angry name-calling.

As NASCAR hits the home-stretch of a long season, tempers are flaring on and off the track.

The sanctioning body is watching this latest rash of bad behavior and has been busy doling out punishment.

"It's typical of this time of year," said Kevin Triplett, NASCAR's director of operations. "You have a very long stretch of races where guys either aren't doing as they'd hoped to at this point in the year or guys are doing better and are in critical points positions."

Quarterback passes optimism to teammates

By Joe Kay
Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Jon Kitna's optimism is rubbing off instead of wearing off.

When he signed with Cincinnati in the off-season, the free agent quarterback immediately started talking about the playoffs — a place the Bengals haven't been in 11 years.

Fans shrugged. One quarterback after another has said the same things in the past decade, only to get beaten down by the losing. Surely, Kitna was just continuing a Cincinnati football tradition.

Two games into the season, the Bengals are unbeaten and Kitna is a major reason. He's avoiding the mistakes that got him benched in Seattle, and he's getting one of the NFL's least-effective passing games to work.

Better yet, his attitude is spreading.

"I think the attitude is the main thing," Kitna said yesterday. "I expect to win every game I play in. That's how I approach everything."

I never look at anybody and say, 'Aw, I can't wait until this game's over so I can get to next week.'"

A 21-10 victory over the Baltimore Ravens on Sunday demonstrated that the Bengals are much different with Kitna running the offense. Against a defense that had allowed only one touchdown in its last five games, Kitna threw for one and ran for another.

Quarterback has been a recurring trouble spot in the past decade. Akili Smith, dubbed a franchise quarterback when he was taken in the 1999 draft, lost the job in 2000, his first season as a starter.

After making a strong offer for Elvis Grbac before dropping out of the bidding, the Bengals settled on Kitna, who threw 19 interceptions and had 17 fumbles for Seattle last season. No other team was willing to offer him a shot at a starting job.

On the surface, it didn't seem to be a major upgrade. Through two games, it has been.

Kitna has completed 65 percent of his passes for 358 yards without an interception. He has thrown for two touchdowns, run for another and fumbled only once.

Smith had a habit of locking in on a receiver, holding the ball too long or taking off before a play could develop. Kitna has been the antithesis, throwing the ball to eight receivers while taking only three sacks.

"He's distributing the ball to everyone, which is the plan for a successful offense," tight end Marco Battaglia said. "If you keep everybody guessing who's getting the ball next, that's going to work to your advantage."

In the Bengals' system, Kitna doesn't have to throw for a lot of yards. All he has to do is hand off to Corey Dillon and avoid mistakes when he throws.

"He knows his assignments and he's staying very poised," center Rich Braham said. "He's not trying to force balls. He's not looking at one or two receivers; he's looking all over the field. He knows where guys are coming on blitzes, and he's getting rid of the ball."

Besides experience, Kitna has two other advantages over Smith. He's working with offensive coordinator Bob Bratkowski, who has installed the same offense that Kitna ran in Seattle. He's also got Darnay Scott back from a broken leg that sidelined him all last season.

Kitna accepts that he's not going to be the star in an offense that revolves around Dillon.

"Our best option continues to be No. 28 in the backfield," Kitna said. "What we have to do in our passing game is be able to hurt people when the opportunity comes."

The upset of Baltimore helped Kitna's optimism rub off on a team that's accustomed to being disappointed by its quarterbacks.

"When you beat the world champs, everybody in the locker room now believes you can win," Kitna said. "Before, you could feel that some guys are kind of sitting back, waiting for something good to happen. Now it's happened and now those guys believe they can win. This could be a fun time if everybody continues to focus."

Jon Kitna celebrates a 23-17 win over the New England Patriots.

Attendance at local theaters shaky

By Jordan Gentile
For the Lantern

The nation's entertainment venues have suffered an enormous plunge in revenue in the wake of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks on New York City and Washington, D.C.

On Broadway, five shows permanently closed shop and even Mel Brooks' "The Producers," the musical-comedy some have dubbed the hottest ticket in history, failed to fill to capacity for the first time.

While New York has endured much of the brunt, many concerts and performances throughout the United States have likewise been canceled or postponed. In a very short time, the entertainment market has contracted and Columbus-area venues haven't been spared from turmoil.

The Columbus Association for the Performing Arts was forced to make several postponements. Country singer Alison Krauss opted out of her Sept. 13 engagement at the Palace Theatre, 34 W. Broad St., as a gesture of respect. Soprano Kathleen Battle, originally slated to perform at the Ohio Theatre, 39 E. State St., on Sept. 14, was grounded in New York due to the Federal Aviation Administration's unprecedented two-day freeze on all domestic flights. Both have been rescheduled, as has a performance of The Boys of Lough, a Celtic musical group.

Sluggish ticket sales of upcoming CAPA events in the aftermath of the attack have proved to be another setback.

"There was definitely a slowdown in the week of the tragedy," said Kelly Boggs, CAPA spokeswoman. "On Sept. 11, it seemed like things just stopped for all Americans. It was just hard to think about anything else. But lately business has begun to pick up again."

Still, some CAPA employees aren't entirely convinced that the public is once again ready to return to the theatre.

"People got worried, thinking why buy tickets for shows that will be canceled anyway?" said Roshaunda Ball, a ticket office staff member for the Ohio Theatre. "We've got to reassure people that these shows will play."

"The thought of this continuing, the thought of people not going to the theater, is a little scary for me. I mean, this is my livelihood," Ball said.

A similar scenario has played out at Ohio State's University Theatre, 1849 Cannon Dr. Though theatre season has yet to begin, the box-office sells tickets to a variety of local events through Ticketmaster.

"Business has been very slow," said University Theatre box-office assistant Kimberly Hairston. "Many of the students who used to come aren't doing so any longer."

"Last year, we had students lined up all the way out the door. Lately, I've seen maybe only five or six lined up at a time. It's like people are scared to go to anything that's a big event. They're scared to be in a big group," Hairston said.

While box-office malaise continues to grip many venues, reason for optimism can be found. The Contemporary American Theatre Company, 77 S. High St., has managed to buck the trend.

"To our surprise, we've seen a substantial increase in ticket sales since the incident," said Jarred Berry, a CATCO box-office assistant. "People watch the news, they see the flags at half-mast, and they're looking for something to divert them."

However business fares in the coming months, the events of the past week have by all accounts reaffirmed to those who promote acts and sell tickets the importance of their jobs.

"We believe in the power of the arts to mend the human spirit," Boggs said. "In the face of such tragedy, they are needed more now than ever."

Fans of Metal, Punk and Ska float to Gravity 44

By Michelle Woodgeard
Lantern arts writer

Columbus music fans better prepare to "get down" because campus area favorites, Gravity 44 have released their new CD, "A Further Iteration."

Since meeting up in 1999 at Ohio State, this band mixed there ska, funk and metal sounds at such notable venues as the Northberg Tavern and Bernie's Distillery. The band which was randomly formed by vocalist Ty Pierce, bassist/vocalist Lance Weinkamer and drummer Jim Kilburg. The band just recently added guitarist, Matt Good.

In the last three years, the band has gone from releasing the unpublished EP "Escape Velocity" to becoming known as one of the area's best live bands, beating out 14 others to win Ohio State's Battle of the Bands contest this past year.

The group said a large portion of its fan base may not appreciate every musical style that is incorporated into its songs, but the fans keep coming back to see the band's kinetic live shows.

"We have so much fun interacting with the crowd," Weinkamer said. "I think fans really believe our lyrics are honest."

Every original band member contributed lyrics to "A Further Iteration." The album balances personal experiences, including the bands past involvement in less than stellar bands and takes on broader subjects such as the music industry. The group is able to convey messages and stories that many fans will relate to.

"The lyrics are not necessarily personal, but we do put our own spin on universal subjects," Kilburg said.

Good agrees. "One of the main reasons I agreed to join the band was because I felt they had something to say," he said.

The group attributes its ability to play passionate shows to the unity that exists within the group.

"After a week of playing a new song we adapt to each other's playing style and we play the song the same," Weinkamer said.

Members of the group also share similar musical tastes, citing bands such as 311, Reel Big Fish and Incubus as musical influences for the band's hard guitar riffs, ska lyrics and rapid rhymes. The band, however, admits to having some musical influences that may not be reflected in its sound, such as Phish, Green Day and even some tunes from the 1980s.

"Our music really attracts a random crowd," said Weinkamer. "The only thing most fans may have in common with each other is their passion for the music."

Kilburg urges veteran Gravity 44 fans to continue to support the band at upcoming shows.

"With the addition of Matt and this new album, we are able to keep things fresh," Kilburg said.

Manager Jared Rothkopf hopes the new CD will act as a launching pad for Gravity 44, providing more exposure for the band.

"We are all really proud of the quality of the CD," Rothkopf said. "We are different from all the other bands playing around campus."

"A Further Iteration" has a higher sound quality, heavier sound and a more diverse mix of songs than the band's first release. "Space Madness," the opening track, is a hard driving release of screams, pounding beats and heavy bass.

Songs such as "Ideology" and "Sunday" display the group's uncanny ability to combine ska-like lyrics and rap style rhymes and layer them over heavy rock and metal guitar riffs. Written by both Kilburg and Pierce, "Ideology" is a strong attack against those in the status quo who try to force their beliefs on others. Lyrics such as "Change doesn't destroy who we are" truly exhibit the band's views.

"Checking Into 553" is a rollicking tout of the band's eclectic style, beginning with Pierce crooning his way into a tale of a musician that is trapped in an awkward band. As the song progresses, Pierce gives way to all out screams of frustration to portray the avenged musician.

Fans of hard rock, metal, punk or ska should find the CD not only innovative, but also filled with substance, passion and sound.

Gravity 44 will be playing Saturday at the Scarlet and Gray Cafe along with the Jewell Scarabs from Cleveland. Those 18 and older are welcome at the cafe, located at the corner of W. Norwich and High St. Doors open at 10 p.m.

NBC News president juggled terrorism coverage

By David Bauder
Associated Press

NEW YORK — NBC News President Neal Shapiro had a unique responsibility and opportunity in the busy days following the terrorist attacks. He had not just one network prime-time schedule to program, but three: NBC, MSNBC and CNBC.

He used the time for experimenting with different approaches, breaking down some walls at his news organization and remaining true to his roots as the former "Dateline NBC" executive producer.

"This was a chance to rethink everything that we've done before," said Shapiro, who was elevated to his job this summer when predecessor Andrew Lack became NBC president.

With three networks essentially following the same story at the same time, Shapiro opted not to simulcast NBC's coverage on the cable stations, as has been done in the past.

MSNBC, the third-place cable news network that's spent much of its existence in an identity crisis, abandoned its usual taped prime-time lineup for traditional minute-by-minute reporting and interviews. That gave NBC more flexibility.

"If there was a live press conference that we thought was going to be good but not great, we could say, 'OK, MSNBC will stay with the Giuliani news conference," he said. "It was a huge advantage."

CNBC, the prime-time home of Chris Matthews and Geraldo Rivera, stuck with its talk format while spreading its financial news expertise among all three networks.

Prime-time NBC looked more like a newsmagazine than a newscast.

"Generally, on a breaking story, you have your anchor go on as long as he can, do as many interviews as he can, and you just fill up air time," Shapiro said. "What I figured out early was that you're not going to have developments every second."

Each night, Stone Phillips taped a summary of the day's top news developments that was updated and repeated later on NBC and MSNBC. The broadcast network concentrated on lengthier, taped pieces in a storyteller format, like a Kerry Sanders report on the flight training of the suspected terrorists and a Jane Pauley interview with the family of a man who likely fought hijackers on the flight that crashed in Western Pennsylvania.

The changed approach was so subtle one broadcast news expert confessed he wasn't aware of it.

"That was a wise thing for Shapiro to do, not that I noticed it," said Andrew Tyndall, who owns a company, ADT Research, that tracks the content of news programs. "It really makes you look like a broadcaster, instead of a cable network."

Tyndall said, however, he was more impressed with ABC, heavily dependent on Peter Jennings as a sort of managing editor on the air.

Shapiro conceded there was some internal resistance at first to his reliance on "Dateline NBC" personnel and techniques in prime-time, instead of NBC's usual special events unit.

Ultimately, though, there was enough airtime to fill that everyone was involved. The news president said it promoted teamwork among individual shows and the networks more than any event in years.

Television news received high marks from the public for its performance after the terrorist attacks. Shapiro said he's never been prouder of his profession.

"We can't all be down there lifting rubble, but one thing journalists can do is we can be there when people are scared and nervous," he said. "Part of what helps to allay these fears is letting people know that they're informed."

Shapiro rejects the conventional wisdom that this story has exposed the networks' lack of attention to international news and that they'll have to spend heavily to make up for it.

"I think we did more in foreign news than people gave us credit for," he said. "But this has changed things. This is the biggest story there is and a large part of it is foreign. We're going to be covering it and giving it everything we have."

How much NBC, and its rival networks, have to give is another question. Network budgets were tight because of a declining advertising market even before the attack.

After the attack, NBC Chairman Bob Wright estimated in Electronic Media that the company lost $100 million a day before regular programming resumed. Declining revenue and the increased expenses of a demanding news story means Shapiro has budget-related headaches ahead.

"We're going to spend what I think we need to cover the story," he said. "It doesn't mean that you write blank checks."

TERMS AND CONDITIONS

The Lantern cannot accept advertising that advocates sedition or other illegal actions, violates normal standards of morality and taste, or attacks an individual race, nationality, ethnic group, religion or sex. In cases of doubt, the proffered copy, illustrations and layout will be submitted by the Lantern Business Manager to the School of Journalism & Communication Publications Committee and judged by a majority vote of the members. Decisions of this committee are final. Complete name, address and telephone number for each advertiser is required.

- Copy will be furnished by noon three days before publication, except for published special early deadlines.
- All advertisements are required to occupy at least as many inches in height as they do columns in width. Any advertisement exceeding 18 inches in height will be considered full column (21 inches) and charged accordingly.
- The Lantern reserves the right to reject any advertisement that promotes illegal activity or activity detrimental or damaging to the university and its educational mission. It further reserves the right to revise any advertisement which is deemed objectionable for any reason.
- Make-good/adjustments will be considered only for those advertisements where errors occur in the following: business/group name, address, or phone number; item price; date, time, or place of event. The error must be solely the fault of the Lantern. Adjustments will not exceed the cost of the advertisement, and will be based on the portion of the advertisement nullified by the error. Minor spelling errors will not qualify for adjustment. Complaints must be registered to the Business Manager within 45 days of publication to qualify, otherwise the advertiser accepts full responsibility.
- Guaranteed position is sold at the Business Manager's discretion.
- A composition charge may apply to any changes, revisions or cancellations made after deadline.
- No proof will be furnished on any advertisement received after deadline, or for ads smaller than seven (7) column inches.
- If the Lantern finds it necessary to stop contracted advertising because of nonpayment, the advertising agreement will be violated and subject to a rebill fee.
- Advertisers are encouraged to avoid making misleading claims or using art or words that impugn or degrade sex, race, age, national origin, creed or color.
- The Lantern reserves the right to require prepayment for advertising, or to reject advertising, if the advertiser is delinquent in payment, or if advertiser's credit is impaired. Advertisers must prepay all advertising until credit rating with the Lantern is established. CERTIFIED check or money order is required for out-of-town advertisers.
- Contract advertisers will furnish the Lantern with a rate-holder ad meeting contract minimums, for use in any contract period for which the advertiser does not provide an ad.
- A tearsheet will be furnished for all display advertising run in the Lantern. Additional tear sheets are available (limit 15) provided the advertiser notifies the Lantern office prior to publication.
- Advertiser agrees to indemnify and hold harmless the Ohio State University, its Board of Trustees, and its officers, agents and employees from and against any and all loss, cost and expense, including reasonable attorney fees, resulting from the publication by the Lantern of advertiser's advertisement.
- Advertisers in the Ohio State Lantern agree that they will not represent themselves in any way as being endorsed by the Ohio State University.
- All mail-order advertisers are required to submit sample/proof-of-product prior to publication.

Please note that advertisers must request the return of their original ad materials; the Lantern will dispose of such materials 60 days after their first publication.

Brainless comedy rules 'Zoolander'

By Julia Watts
Lantern arts writer

Check your brain at the door, to see "Zoolander," and prepare to be stupefied.

With such trademark looks as "Blue Steel," "Ferrari" and "Le Tigre" and three consecutive "Male Model of the Year" awards, Derek Zoolander thought he was on top of his game — until he met Hansel, his arch-nemesis and rookie model, played by Owen Wilson ("Meet the Parents"). When Zoolander, played by Ben Stiller ("There's Something About Mary," "Meet the Parents"), realizes he is no longer the king of the catwalk, he tries to find his calling in life.

"I'm pretty sure there's more to life than just being really, really good looking, and I plan on finding out what that is," Zoolander said in the movie.

The plot thickens when an evil secretive designer cartel plots to kill the prime minister of Malaysia for outlawing the child labor that fabricates their haute-couture. These fashion elite target the spiky black-haired Zoolander to do the deed. Mugatu, played by Will Ferrell, is the wickedly funny designer and co-conspirator responsible for brainwashing Zoolander. It seems that every major political assassination in past 200 years has been done by male models because of their peak physical condition and their availability to gain entry and do as they are told.

Ben Stiller, also the director, of the film, involved many of his friends and family in the movie. Jerry Stiller, Stiller's father, plays Maury Ballstein, head of Balls Models and Zoolander's agent. Christine Taylor, Stiller's wife, plays Matilda Jeffries, a smart Time magazine reporter covering Fashion Week.

Mugatu's sidekick, Katinka, is Milla Jovovich as Katinka, Ben Stiller as Derek and Will Ferrell as Mugatu in "Zoolander." The film opens nationally tomorrow.

played by Milla Jovovich and other famous people in the movie making cameo appearances include David Duchovny, Andy Dick, David Bowie, Fabio, Cuba Gooding Jr., Lenny Kravitz and Winona Ryder.

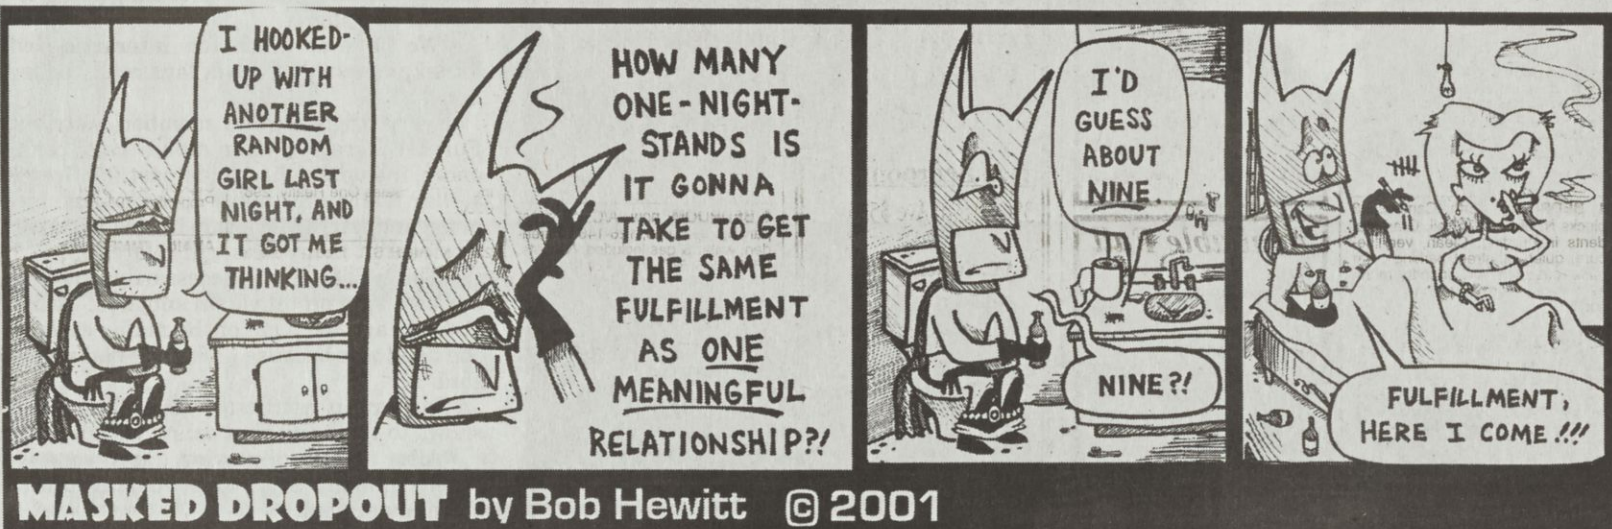

"Zoolander" is a hilarious comedy with some of the best physical-comedic actors in the business. Though a few of the jokes are old after watching the trailers on television, the writing is original and fresh. Stiller is, of course, magnificent in his role of a moronic and narcissistic fashion model.

Possibly the best scene is the runway walk-off challenge between the equally half-baked Hansel and Zoolander. Only Stiller and Wilson could portray such far-fetched characters. They each had to learn martial arts and break dance fighting in preparation for the scene. The actors' expressions and mannerisms are incredibly believable, as though such events actually take place.

"The walk-off scene was uncomfortable for me because I literally have never danced in public, or in private. We had to break dance in front of 75 extras who were cheering and booing," Wilson said in a statement.

The premise of "Zoolander" may seem familiar to some; the movie was inspired by Ben Stiller's own short skit for the 1996 "VH1 Fashion Awards." "Zoolander" opens in theaters tomorrow.

Time and CHANGE...

THE OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY • CAMPUS AREA BUS SERVICE

Thank You Students!

Your patience with the bus route changes during the first few days of classes has been greatly appreciated!!

We know that the changes are difficult, and getting timely, correct information to all students has been a challenge. As our staff have been explaining over the past few days, the following changes have occurred:

WHERE IS THE NORTH EXPRESS ROUTE???

The North Express, formerly running between West Campus and Central Campus, has been re-routed to provide bus service to the only available overflow parking on campus and is now called the Commuter Express. As many of you experienced last year, West Campus parking fills up early, and there is no place to park nearby. To alleviate this problem, and prepare for the impending loss of MORE parking on Central Campus in the next year to construction, we are using the 2,000 space lot located at Fred Taylor Drive and Ackerman Road. No new funds are available to CABS to provide the necessary bus service linking this lot to Central Campus, so a reallocation of existing buses had to be made.

WHY CAN'T YOU ADD MORE BUSES???

CABS is supported solely from parking fees and fines, and parking fees are already increasing to fund the construction of additional Central Campus parking in new garages (two scheduled to open in 2003!). Additional funds were not available to simply add buses, thus the need to reallocate resources and modify routes.

If you need assistance in route planning, have questions related to parking or CABS, or would like to comment on the route changes, please email us at: tpinfo@osu.edu.
