Buckeye Express expands service for on-the-run students, staff

By Gina Johnston

Ohio State’s Food Services has expanded its meals-to-go service to provide a quick and convenient way of providing meals to students, faculty, and staff.

The service, Buckeye Express, is a response to the demand of students, faculty and staff who wanted a faster and easier way of getting a meal, said Stephanie Le Duff, director of marketing and public relations for Residence and Dining Halls.

Buckeye Express is available to all OSU students, faculty and staff, Le Duff said.

“You do not have to have a meal plan to use the service. Our goal is to serve a large number of students and make OSU’s food service available to anyone,” Le Duff said.

Buckeye Express is available at Morrill and North commons, which will also have the traditional sit-down dining service. Baker Commons will offer only the Buckeye Express service. Students can purchase items with a meal plan, a Buckeye I.D. or cash, Le Duff said.

The service is available for breakfast, lunch and dinner. It offers food choices that include a daily vegetarian meal, an expanded salad bar, and a variety of hot and cold sandwiches, Le Duff said.

“The reason for more food choices is in response to student requests,” she said.

Jenny Wenland, a freshman, said the meals-to-go service is a good idea.

“I like the variety of food choices and that you can get your lunch to go,” Wenland said.

All three facilities will be open from 6:45 a.m. to 8 p.m.
Busy OSU students can eat on the run

Students at Ohio State who are sometimes too busy to prepare their own lunch can take advantage of the Buckeye Express service.

The Buckeye Express service provides students with a fast meal on campus instead of having to go to a fast-food restaurant or pack their own food. Each meal costs about $3.20 and includes seven items, said Pat Conner, food systems coordinator for OSU Food Services.

The service was first introduced about three years ago with a breakfast-only program. It was intended to accommodate students on the go who had no time to sit down in a commons cafeteria to eat, Conner said.

A lunch service was added to Buckeye Express in Baker, North and Morrill Commons during Autumn Quarter 1994. This quarter, a dinner menu was added because of the demand by students, she said.

Students are happy with the addition of dinner and with the Buckeye Express service as a whole.

“When I have classes, I can take it out when I want it,” said Kelly Rankin, a freshman at OSU.

Shruti Shivpuri, a freshman from Dublin, said she likes the amount of food she gets through Buckeye Express.

“The seven item deal is good. You can get a lot more for the price. You can store it away and eat it later,” Shivpuri said.

Before Buckeye Express was introduced, the only items a student could take from a cafeteria were crackers, a vegetable or a small dessert because the dining halls were all-you-can-eat buffets, Conner said.

Meal plans for students are $775 per quarter for 19 weekly meals, $675 for 10, and $575 for eight. Each of these includes $100 in a Buck ID account that can be used anywhere the card is accepted, Conner said.

An All Plus plan is also offered for $700 per quarter. This plan has no set meals. Money is deposited into Buck ID accounts and can be used however a student desires, she said.

Students will receive a 35 percent discount on their meals if they use the Buck ID account in the dining halls, Conner said.

Without a meal plan or a Buck ID account, breakfast is $4.75, lunch is $5.75 and dinner is $6.75, she said.
Campus venues sport new menus

Several Columbus campus eating places have changed faces for the new academic year.

First, faculty and staff have a new option for meals: the quick and convenient Buckeye Express. Housing Food Services has expanded the meals-to-go service at three locations — Baker, Morrill and North commons. Baker Commons will offer Buckeye Express service only. Morrill and North commons will offer both Buckeye Express and traditional dining service.

Buckeye Express is available for breakfast, lunch and dinner. Selections include vegetarian specials, salad bar and hot and cold sandwiches. Hours are 6:45 a.m.-8 p.m. To complement the new services, the three locations have received scarlet and gray facelifts. All locations accept cash, Buck!*ID and meal plans.

For more information, call 292-1779.

Second, the Terrace Dining Room in the Ohio Union no longer is open for daily luncheon buffets. Ohio Union Food Service will concentrate on expanding and improving catering services and Perks, the deli and bakery in the Ohio Union Mall. Food Service offers “to the door” delivery of box lunches and the Terrace is available for special events. For information about catering, call 292-COOK.

Finally, the Fawcett Center Restaurant is serving in style with a recent facelift. The restaurant is open 11 a.m.-10 p.m. Monday-Saturday and 10 a.m.-9 p.m. Sunday. For reservations, call 292-3238 or 1-800-637-2316.
