CAMPUS PERIODICALS 1986

This list is in three parts.

Part one, pages 1 - 40, lists periodicals with a circulation of 100 or more currently produced on campus and some regional campuses.

Part two, pages 41 - 53, lists by college and organizational unit those periodicals which are distributed to alumni.

Part three, page 54, lists periodicals produced by University Communications.

Note: Many campus periodicals change editors and publication schedules frequently. No guarantee of total accuracy is offered for this list.
CAMPUS PERIODICALS 1986

This list includes those periodicals produced outside the Communications Services Department by various colleges and campus organizations.

Publications can lend help

Several Ohio State publications may help academic and administrative departments recruit faculty and students, respond to requests for information or promote the University.

Available are:

- Facts, handy reference to annual data and figures about Ohio State. About $14 for a pack of 25 copies.

The three booklets can be purchased through Stores, 292-2501.

Another publication of interest particularly for faculty recruitment or fund raising is the University Financial Report. Copies are available at no charge from the Office of the Controller, 292-6220.
New magazine offers alternative to OSU

By Douglas Honig
Lantern staff writer

An alternative creative writing magazine that will be targeted towards students will be available the second week of Winter Quarter, editor Hank Paloci said.

This new magazine will be for more creative writing, editorials and fiction, editorial editor Chris Berhalter said.

"AP style takes away from your own style. Creatively writing or a different genre is much different than AP — it's more your own style," Paloci said.

The Lantern and the arts magazine are not enough for this campus as far creative expression, he said. The magazine will do anything as long as it is quality, he said. In-depth articles instead of just on-the-surface stories are just one goal for the staff, he said.

"They feel that there is a huge group of students who don't feel served by Mosaic," faculty adviser Michelle Herman said. Mosaic is an existing creative writing magazine that comes out annually through the University Honors program.

"We won't exactly compete with the Mosaic because it's annual and upscale," Paloci said. "We want to be provocative and interesting," he added.

The magazine will be comprised of students who are in a wide variety of majors, including journalism, English and many others. The magazine is for good writers and people who enjoy writing creatively, Paloci said. The magazine will be 24 to 28 pages, depending on how much copy they get, Paloci said.

Through fliers posted around campus advertising for writers, Paloci said he talked to about 30 to 35 people who were interested. Paloci said that he wanted to change the fact that journalistic types of writers haven't contacted him about the magazine. The magazine will run feature-length news stories, and stories about campus issues, reviews and interviews.

"It's to be an alternative underground type of magazine. A faculty hands-off, entirely student-run," Herman said.

A printing facility has not yet been determined, but Paloci has about 12 quotes from printers, he said. He also looked into purchasing a used printing press and copier, and printing the magazine himself. This could be done at about 60 percent of the cost of the professional printers, he said. The staff will be working over winter vacation to put the magazine together, he said.

The magazine will be sold through subscriptions and will contain advertising. "It's a supplement for OSU students," Paloci said. The first issue or two will be free in order to raise support, he added.
