Manifest

1. The poem is a topological space.
 - 1.1 The poem is situated on a topological space
 - 1.1.1 The "blank" space of the page is not "blank."
 - 1.1.1.1 It is volatile; it is active. Words may be in one place and may shift to another place.
 - 1.1.1.2 It is porous and unstable. Words may falls into faults or cracks in the page.
 - 1.1.1.3 It is spongy. Different places on the page have different weights and gravitational pulls. This affects placement of words.
 - 1.1.2 Words may become unrecognizable due to geographic activity.
 - 1.1.2.1 Meaning is secondary to sight.

 02/18/2007 - 02/25/2007
 02/25/2007 - 03/04/2007
 03/04/2007 - 03/11/2007

- 1.1.2.1.1 Meaning must be collected in a treasure hunt through the page. 03/11/2007 - 03/18/2007
- 1.1.2.1.2 Meaning is one of many possible maps through a page. 03/18/2007 - 03/25/2007
- 1.1.2.1.3 Meaning is only possible on the level of the page. 03/25/2007 - 04/01/2007
- 1.1.2.1.3.1 The page's topology determines meaning. 04/01/2007 - 04/08/2007
- 1.1.2.1.3.2 The words' geological placement determines meaning. 04/08/2007 - 04/15/2007
- 1.1.2.1.3.3 History determines meaning. 04/15/2007 - 04/22/2007
- 1.1.2.1.3.4 The reader's specific travels determine meaning. 04/22/2007 - 04/29/2007
- 1.1.2.2 Sound is secondary to sight. 04/29/2007 - 05/06/2007
- 1.1.2.2.1 The page is not a score for reading. 05/06/2007 - 05/13/2007
- 1.1.2.2.1.1 The poem need not be read aloud. 05/13/2007 - 05/20/2007
- 1.1.2.2.1.2 The "blank" spaces of the page are not "scored." 05/20/2007 - 05/27/2007
- 1.1.2.2.1.2.1 The "blank" spaces of the page are not equal. Some spaces are more blank than others. Some blank spaces are larger than other blank spaces that may look equal. 05/27/2007 - 06/03/2007
- 1.1.2.2.1.2.2 "Blank" spaces can be bridged, like a wormhole rather than like a musical measure. 06/03/2007 - 06/10/2007
- 1.2 The poem is a set of topological figures or features. 06/10/2007 - 06/17/2007
- 1.2.1 Words are subject to disintegration, death, and other natural events that individuals of all types face. 06/17/2007 - 06/24/2007
- 1.2.2 The words on the page represent the page at a certain geological moment. 06/24/2007 - 07/01/2007
- 1.2.2.1 This moment implies a history. 07/01/2007 - 07/08/2007
- 1.2.2.2 This moment entails a future. 07/08/2007 - 07/15/2007
- 1.2.2.3 The reader sees merely a moment captured. 07/15/2007 - 07/22/2007
- 1.2.3 The "level of the page" is the only level. 07/22/2007 - 07/29/2007
- 1.2.3.1 The vertical "reader to page" and "author to page" and "author to reader" relationships are eradicated. 07/29/2007 - 08/05/2007
- 1.2.3.2 The horizontal journey through the page, as a hiker on a trail, is the only way to search for meaning. 08/05/2007 - 08/12/2007
- 1.2.3.2.1 As such meanings will be different for each traveler. 08/12/2007 - 08/19/2007
- 1.2.3.2.2 As such meaning is made through memory. Connections are delayed, soundings are delayed, meaning is delayed. Meaning is put together. 08/19/2007 - 08/26/2007
- 1.2.3.2.3 As such meaning is a compound impression of a physically traversed space (the eye moves physically through the space as the mind encounters fragmented signifiers). 08/26/2007 - 09/02/2007
- 1.2.3.2.4 Each poem is a microcosm. 09/02/2007 - 09/09/2007

2. The page is a slice of geological time. It has a past and a future. It has physical features.

2.1 It could have been otherwise.

3. The poem and the page become topological at the same time; as the reader traverses their space, he or she perceives a shifting, coming-into-being topology.

Thomas Lowe Taylor

At The Margin

Thomas Lowe Taylor

Rain stains the window in darkness pinging hard against the glass while swirls of energy rail over the roof like sponges at dawn claiming the night's heirs from their own songs, the coastal dunes reline these grassy knolls into their own eminent strains of being shoreline distances between nothing and nothing else remain strong along the tide's lining of the hollow core of the margin's lane among trees on their sides and piles of vegetable ruin where the open hours reside inside green and blue again.

I'd clung along these leftovers at the edge of this plain next to another plane of gray against a gray which is not the same, but moving forward among what's been left by a continent straining toward completion in hourly dimensions leaning left and forward in one motion..

You'd been the page itself whose words were grains of sand winding among untitled monuments the wind whistling against your face, stinging rows incite the sense of standing in the face of nothing which is the nature of your sign and gesture along the arcade.

Outside, chaos un-tamed by what's been the light source itself, song, movement and time collide against the tides moving one on one as unconverted remains strewn beside tire prints from big trucks as the feet of angels trail beside the forward constancy of motion impel thought in its similarities toward a recognition of air and color specific in the charges laid against unknown substances striking your face and hands like unwelcome dinners set around the table with no one in mind and then abandoned.

You become me in this haven the elements deny themselves, disorder remaining in its own destination from the center blazing inside itself like a sign and outpost of the known into location and faction torn from time and the space it has..

A series of accidents, a series of mistakes belittle your witness what cascades across the margin's opening in the darkness of the storm and call you down into the origin of a safety you think surrounds your partitions, called by the name you give doubt in its own term.

This wound betrays your stasis, walls moving in the sand beneath your feet seem pulled down into the water, clams swimming beneath your stains of sand, billowing inert forces penetrating light-- the door is open and calls you to enter into your own destiny.

This is the hour at hand, the blast from the black edge of the world inhabits your own unknown hand, hesitant on these keys at best believing you stand and hold what's been ignored too long, a sentinel at the peak of the house relives your building and song, lets the dizzying spin of thought's storm become a wandering tide the loom and weft of open powers ride this hour in giving anchor and palm their own distance rising throughout the wind's hour thrown among the rolling dreams which come against your thoughts;

a broad gust reams the window tight against its frame and juncture in the night's beating streams and shores flat and firm along the way, scheming in between what's known and what's not and then dreamed away
too soon to leave and too late to cry a silent prayer into the graying sign

...

They drop a rubber ball through small net-covered hoops at either end and flow back and forth with pure juice and determination unseen before, holding themselves above the play of forms and sentences we call a book nor left among other stars where the beaches erode and foam away at night.

A line grows in front and then out extends into the unwinding sea a grid into unknown darkness filled with organisms and breaths coming as they do from interior marks along the floor and ceiling, an incandescence creates a pathway into structure and form like memory.

You called me down from silence through unbroken layers of roots between what is above and what lies beneath your heart's feet along a wash of light and time coming through the tide again to mark the mind of your dream like blue and green and red mists.

This forgotten density of remove and stain neither clears the air nor calms from beneath what cannot be removed nor claimed from any other line along the sand inside your hand yet not recalled nor left behind in the hurry to get from this precarious layer to a place of safety.

Night's barrier the pinpoints in the sky through empty dark ceiling, reliquary to air's dominion in the discourse of the heavens and the line along which no transparency folds or spasms into something new and fine.

Longer signs enfold and eclipse yet call you forward here at the margin.

Axe no dendrite plain and simple struts these after hours intense emptiness of forgetfulness strikes you in the wind swirling off the sand looking like fog that blinds your eyes foam of the hour curling less remote than the distance ahead.

Fog no hopeful truth its own dominion present in your heart another rope to the infinite which calls you forward again leaning throughout your memory's time like a trimming or a loot on the plane of insignificance you call your own days

your own dishonor came too soon to be recognized for what it was a silent edge on the mirror of forgiveness, your own face unrecognized by the followers behind you crowding up into the figment of the mass which is no other than your other breaking into a billion future scenes or blood on the sands of the hallway, imperial magnificence a stolen bribe

and the raw meat of the sacrifice clings to the rug in the upper hallway where the silent weepers hug the wall without sound or pity in their quiet houses of the holy abandoned and then reground by the stones of time at edge and screen, no specific moment stands out, yet the scene recalls

what it is in the name of silence a matter misting outward calls again your colors red and blue and green an invention of sky's mind which flames and flutters its film among the plenty of the hours.
