kervinen & leftwich

It was when we went back to Halabja and human rights abuses and all Saddam's indubitable sins, as recorded by the discredited Unscorn team, that we started eating the old soup again. Jack Straw may have thought all this "the most powerful and authoritative case" for war - his ill-considered opinion afterwards - but when we were forced to listen to the Iraqi officer corps communicating by phone "Yeah", "Yeah", "Yeah?", "Yeah . . ." - it was impossible not to ask oneself if Colin Powell had really considered the effect this would have on the outside world. - Robert Fisk
