Sec. 18. This act shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage.

Passed March 22, 1870. [57 v. 20.]
At a meeting of the Trustees, held on June 20, 1877, the following action was had:

Resolved, That the curriculum be changed, by striking therefrom the Department of Political Economy and Civil Polity, and substituting therefor the Department of Mines, Mico Engineering, and Metallurgy.

Resolved, That Henry Newton, A.M., M.E., be appointed Professor of Mines, Mine Engineering, and Metallurgy, in the Ohio Agricultural and Mechanical College, at the same salary as the other Professors.

Mr. Newton having visited the College, accepted the position, expecting to commence his labors at the opening session in September, 1877.

In the meanwhile, under an appointment of the United States Government, he visited the Black Hills, to complete some geological investigations upon which he had been employed; but, unfortunately, he was almost immediately prostrated by mountain fever, and died after a brief illness.

The professorship was now offered to William E. Guy, E.M., of St. Louis, a graduate of the Mining School of Freiburg, Saxony. He also visited the College, and left with the expectation of accepting the place, but on his return to St. Louis found it impracticable on account of business connections, which could not be at once dissolved.

The position was then tendered to and accepted by John A. Church, E.M., an experienced Metallurgist and Mining Engineer, who immediately proceeded to equip and put in order the department, and entered on his work of instruction in January, 1878.

The College faculty, with the consent of the Trustees, offered to give a course of lectures on agriculture and cognate subjects—to extend throughout the winter term, commencing in January, 1878, provided thirty or more applicants should signify their intention to attend the lectures. Seven persons, however, were all that appeared at the appointed time; and by reason of this meagre response, the lectures were not given.

The Executive Committee abolished the entrance examination in Algebra, before required of all students for admission; but at the November meeting, at the unanimous request of the faculty, this action was reversed by the Board.

In May, 1878, a third reorganization of the Board of Trustees was effected by the legislation that follows. The name of the institution was also changed by this act:

AN ACT

To reorganize and change the name of the Ohio Agricultural and Mechanical College, and to repeal certain acts therein named.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, That the educational institution heretofore designated as the Ohio agricultural and mechanical college shall be known and designated hereafter as “The Ohio State University.”

Passed March 22, 1870.
Reuben P. Cannon is recognized as the true “father” of Ohio State University. As a member of the Ohio House of Representatives in 1870, he introduced the bill “to establish and maintain a Mechanical and Agricultural College.”

Peter H. Clark, a resident of Cincinnati, became the first Negro member of Ohio State’s Board of Trustees when he was named to the board in 1878. He served until 1887, when he resigned after nine years on the board.

Norton S. Townsend was a member of the University’s first faculty, teaching agriculture. A native of England, he was educated in the United States and became a physician and later a politician. He was also one of the University’s first trustees.

Albert B. Graham, ’90, Hon.’53, was founder of the 4-H Clubs of America in 1902, then came to Ohio State to head up agricultural extension work until 1914. He later worked for many years with the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Alma W. Paterson, ’04, was the University’s first female trustee (1925-33), a former president of the Alumnae Council and a co-founder of the Alumnae Scholarship House. A fund collected when she died in 1947 helped support the Scholarship House program.

Rutherford B. Hayes, 19th President of the United States, was Ohio governor during Ohio State’s first years (1868-72 and 1876-77)—the Board of Trustees met for the first time in his office, and he served as a member of the Board of Trustees from 1887 to 1893.

Joseph V. Denney was head of the English department from 1904 to 1931 and dean of the College of Arts, Philosophy and Science from 1910 to 1921. He was particularly interested in Shakespearean drama, and was one of the top authorities in the country on the subject.

Joseph R. Taylor, ’87, professor of English, began his career in 1889 in the engineering department, transferring to the English department in 1894, where he stayed for some 44 years. Artist, poet and author, he was a longtime friend of artist George Bellows.

Gaius G. Atkins, ’88, Hon.’33, was an author and clergyman who concluded the University’s diamond jubilee year with his famous 1949 Sunset Supper address. A former Alumni Association president, he taught for many years at Auburn Theological Institute.

Ernest K. Coulter, ’93, was founder of the Big Brother Movement, a national group designed to provide help for troubled young boys. Also active in other youth work, he helped organize the New York Children’s Court and was its clerk for 10 years.

Ralph W. Hoyer, ’06, was alumni representative to the Athletic Board for 20 years (1913-33), having been captain of the 1905 football team. He was an assistant football coach for one year, and has been active in the insurance profession and alumni affairs.

John B. C. Eckstorm, ’03, led Ohio State to a 22-4-3 record as football coach from 1899 to 1901, then coached at Ohio Medical College. He returned as team physician in 1906, and later aided the local boxing and wrestling commissions and the Ohio Pententary.

Clarence D. Laylin, ’04, ’06, Hon.’63, was a member of the College of Law faculty from 1915 to 1937, and is considered an expert on taxation. He has counselled many state, federal and local groups on the subject, and has served as Ohio Attorney General.

Jimmie Kelley, a well-known figure to the University’s early students, was a combination campus policeman, janitor and groundskeeper. The old Irishman mowed the grass, cleared the lake, shoveled the snow and leveled the roads of the University in the 1880’s.

Edmund H. (Gogless) Deibel, ’17, was cheerleader from 1915 to 1917, and that period included two championship teams (1916 and 1917). He amazed fans of Ohio State football’s “Golden Era” with the “front flip,” a tumbling exercise he invented while in school.

The Ohio State University Charter

The Ohio State University began in 1870 as the Ohio Agricultural and Mechanical College. It was established under the Land Grant Act signed by President Lincoln on July 2, 1862. This legislation revolutionized our nation's approach to higher education, bringing such education within the reach of all high school graduates.

This act provided grants of public land to the states. From the sale of this land, the states were to finance colleges whose "leading object" was to "promote the liberal and practical education of the industrial classes," primarily in the areas of agriculture and mechanics. Each state legislature was free to write its own charter for one or more colleges.

In all, sixty-nine Land-Grant institutions have been established in the United States. The Ohio State University (the new name was adopted in 1878) being the only one in Ohio.

After President Lincoln approved the Act of Congress providing for Land-Grant colleges, many Ohio communities made determined efforts to obtain the new educational institution. For eight years the legislature, its committees and commissions, had considered several sites, chief among them Oxford, Urbana, and London. But it was not until several months after the state legislature formally approved establishment of such an institution that a site was finally agreed upon.

On March 22, 1870, the Ohio State legislature chartered The Ohio State University with "An Act to Establish and Maintain an Agricultural and Mechanical College in Ohio." This day has since come to be known as the "Charter Day" of The Ohio State University.

From those early beginnings, The Ohio State University has become the principal university in the State and prominent in graduate and professional study.
