CONSTITUTION
THE OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY
FACULTY CLUB

MARCH, 1963
CONSTITUTION OF THE OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY FACULTY CLUB

ARTICLE I
NAME

The name of this association shall be The Ohio State University Faculty Club.

ARTICLE II
PURPOSE

The purpose of this organization shall be to facilitate University, College and Departmental interests through the establishment and operation of a faculty commons for the use of its members as prescribed by the House Rules and By-Laws.

ARTICLE III
MEMBERSHIP

SEC. 1. CLASSES OF MEMBERSHIP. There shall be six classes of membership: I, Active; II, Associate; III, Temporary; IV, Affiliate; V, Special; and VI, Honorary.

Class I. Active membership shall comprise the five following groups:

IA Members of the faculty with the rank of professor and other personnel in positions equivalent in responsibility to that of a professor.

IB Members of the faculty with the rank of associate professor and other personnel in positions equivalent in responsibility to that of an associate professor.

IC Members of the faculty with the rank of assistant professor and other personnel in positions equivalent in responsibility to that of an assistant professor.

ID Members of the faculty with the rank of instructor and other personnel in positions equivalent in responsibility to that of an instructor.

IE Active members who have retired from the University through length of service.

Note: When a husband and wife are both eligible for active, associate or temporary membership in the club, they shall, in order to enjoy the privileges of active membership of the club, each take out membership.
Class II. Associate membership shall comprise part-time members of the faculty and officials of university related governmental and professional agencies and societies.

Class II A. Those housed on the Ohio State University Campus.

Class II B. Those not housed on the Ohio State University Campus but located within Franklin County.

Class III. Temporary membership shall comprise members of the faculty and administrative officers employed temporarily for twelve months or less, and other visitors at the discretion of the Membership Committee and the Board of Control.

Class IV. Affiliate membership shall comprise former members of the instructional, research, or administrative staffs who previously had been members of the club; alumni of the University; friends of the University; distinguished visitors to the University; and others. There shall be two subclasses:

Class IV A. Those permanently resident within a fifty-mile radius of The Ohio State University Campus.

Class IV B. Those permanently resident beyond a fifty-mile radius of The Ohio State University Campus.

Note: This class may be closed at the discretion of the Board of Control.

Class V. Special membership shall comprise widows or widowers of University Trustees, of former Trustees, or of members of the club who at the time of their death or for a minimum of ten years during their lifetime were active members of the club.

Class VI. Honorary membership may be extended to Trustees of The Ohio State University or to persons who have attained high distinction in education, research, or public life.

Sec. 2. Election of Members:

(a) Membership in Class I shall be extended automatically to members of the faculty who come within that class as defined above upon their filing an application and paying the membership deposit. Election of other persons to Classes I, II, III, and IV shall be made in the following manner: An applicant for membership to Class I, II, III, or IV must be proposed to the Membership Committee by two active members. If the Membership Committee acts favorably upon the petition and the Board of Control approves, the applicant's name shall be posted on the Club's bulletin board. If within two weeks no objection is made, he shall automatically become a member. Any objection to an applicant shall be made in writing or by appearing personally before the Membership Committee. If the Membership Committee acts unfavorably upon an application and the Board of Control approves such action, the applicant's sponsor or sponsors or any other interested active member may, by letter or personal appearance before the Membership Committee, ask reconsideration of the action taken. In either of the above situations, the action of the Membership Committee on rehearing shall be final, subject to the approval of the Board of Control and the provisions of Article V, Section 3.

(b) Special membership shall be extended automatically to those who come within that class as defined above.

(c) Honorary membership shall be extended upon the unanimous recommendation of the Membership Committee, subject to approval of the Board of Control.

Sec. 3. Termination of Membership:

Except in the case of Class VI, membership in any class shall automatically terminate when the eligibility under which the member was elected ceases to exist. Eligibility shall terminate in Class I upon resignation, but not upon retirement from the University; in Class V upon remarriage; and in Class IV upon action of the Board of Control, with or without cause. Membership may at any time be terminated earlier by resignation.

Sec. 4. Privileges of Membership: Members of all classes shall enjoy privileges, but only Class I members shall have voting power, hold office, or serve on standing committees.

ARTICLE IV

Withdrawal, Forfeiture and Reinstatement

Sec. 1. Withdrawal. Every resignation from the Club shall be submitted in writing to the Secretary-Treasurer who shall place the request before the Board of Control for action. No resignation shall be accepted until the member presenting the same shall have satisfied in full his credit indebtedness to the Club. Members resigning more than fifteen days after dues are payable shall be liable for the same.

Sec. 2. Forfeiture. Membership shall be subject to forfeiture for failure to comply with any and all By-Laws (including House Rules) of the Club. All decisions as to non-compliance shall be made by the Board of Control but no decision shall be made without written notice to the member involved and an opportunity provided to appear for explanation.
SEC. 3. REINSTATEMENT. One whose membership has been terminated either by resignation or by forfeiture may seek reinstatement under Article III, Section 2, after one year from the effective date of his resignation or forfeiture.

SEC. 2. CHANGE OF STATUS. Any change of status as between classes or subclasses of membership shall be accompanied by the appropriate adjustment in the member’s deposit. Any refunds shall be handled on the same basis as employed in Section 4 of this article.

SEC. 3. TIME OF PAYMENT. Deposits of new members must accompany applications for membership; provided, however, that the applicant may have the option of advancing one-fourth of the deposit and paying the remainder in three equal quarterly installments. Additional deposits required by Section 2 of this article shall be met in like manner.

SEC. 4. REFUNDS OF DEPOSIT. Forfeiture of membership shall be accompanied by the return within 60 days of any deposit required by Section 1. Deposits shall be similarly refunded in the case of resignation from the Club. In the event of a member’s death the deposit shall be returned to his estate. All refunds of deposits shall be without interest, less any indebtedness to the Club.

ARTICLE VI
MEMBERSHIP DUES

SEC. 1. DUES. Dues shall be set by action of the Board of Control.

SEC. 2. TIME PAYABLE. All dues shall be payable in advance. Dues of new members shall be pro rated for the quarter in which they are elected.

SEC. 3. EXEMPTIONS. Any exemptions from payment of dues shall be made by action of the Board of Control.

ARTICLE VII
MEETINGS

SEC. 1. ANNUAL MEETINGS. The annual meeting and election of the Club shall be held in the Winter Quarter, the date to be fixed by the Board of Control.

SEC. 2. SPECIAL MEETINGS. The Board of Control may, and upon the written requests of fifteen Active members, shall, call a special meeting of the Club at any time.

SEC. 3. QUORUM. Ten per cent of the Active members shall constitute a quorum.

SEC. 4. NOTICE OF MEETINGS. Notice of all meetings shall be posted on the Club’s bulletin board for two weeks in advance of the time set.

ARTICLE VIII
OFFICERS

SEC. 1. DESIGNATION AND TENURE. The officers of this Club shall be a president, a president-elect, and a secretary-treasurer. Each shall serve for one year or until a successor is chosen.

SEC. 2. MODE OF INCUMBENCY. Vacancies occurring in the Presidency or Secretary-Treasurership shall be filled through appointments by the Board of Control, the appointment to run for the duration of the unexpired term. In the event of a vacancy in the Presidency-elect before November of any year, the office shall be filled at a special election. Otherwise, the vacancy shall not be filled but a President chosen at the annual election next following.

SEC. 3. NOMINATIONS. The president shall appoint, from among the Active membership, a Nominating Committee of three, which shall present two candidates for each office to be filled at the annual election. Nomination may also be made by petitions bearing the signatures of at least thirty-five Active members.

The Nominating Committee shall place its nomination in the hands of the secretary-treasurer at least twenty days prior to the date fixed for the annual election; whereupon that officer shall immediately post on the Club bulletin board, the candidates named. All nominations by petition must be in the hands of the secretary-treasurer ten days preceding the election date, and that officer shall immediately post any such nomination in like manner as for those made by the Nominating Committee.

SEC. 4. ELECTION PROCEDURE. Prior to the annual election the president shall name three tellers whose duties it shall be to conduct the annual election and to certify both to the out-going secretary-treasurer and to the Board of Control at 1st meeting next following, the results of that election. The method of voting in any year shall be by mail, by ballot, or by a combination of the two, at the discretion of the Board of Control. A plurality vote of those exercising the franchise shall control. The right to vote shall be governed by Article III, Section 4.
SEC. 5. SPECIAL ELECTIONS. Special elections, when necessary, shall be conducted in the same manner as provided in Section 3 and 4 of this article; provided, further, that as to notice, all special elections shall be controlled by the provisions of Article VII, Section 4.

SEC. 6. POWERS AND DUTIES. The powers and duties of the president, the president-elect, and the secretary-treasurer shall be those generally pertaining to such offices and those specifically set out in this constitution. The duties of the president-elect shall include assumption of the office of president in case of extended absence or incapacity on the part of the incumbent of that office. The duties of the secretary-treasurer shall include the keeping of the minutes of all annual and special meetings and the recordation, in the same minute book, of all election results as certified in Section 4 of this article and of all constitutional amendments adopted and certified as provided in Article XII, Section 3. The president and the secretary-treasurer shall sign all contracts and general obligations which have been duly authorized by the Board of Control or the Club membership. The secretary-treasurer shall pay only those bills approved as provided in the Club By-Laws, and shall be bonded in such sum as shall be determined by the Board of Control.

ARTICLE IX

BOARD OF CONTROL

SEC. 1. COMPOSITION AND TENURE. The officers designated in Section 1 of Article VIII, together with the retiring president and four active members elected by the Club as hereinafter provided, shall constitute a Board of Control. An elected member shall serve for four years or until a successor is chosen. The retiring president shall serve for one year only. Remaining members shall serve during their incumbency in office.

SEC. 2. MODE OF ELECTION OF ELECTED MEMBERS. Election of the four members named directly by the Club’s Active membership shall be so staggered as to require the election of one member at each annual election. The nomination and election procedure provided for in Article VIII, Sections 3 and 4, shall be applicable to elections to the Board of Control to the same extent as though such provisions were expressly incorporated herein. Unexpired terms created by resignation or other causes shall be filled by the Board of Control; provided, that such appointments shall run only to the next annual election at which time a successor shall be named, under the procedure above provided, to serve the unexpired term.

SEC. 3. MEETINGS. The Board of Control shall assemble for at least ten meetings during the year and at the call of the president. Chairmen of the standing committees shall attend Board meetings but shall have no voting power.

SEC. 4. ORGANIZATION. The president of the Club shall act as chairman of the Board of Control. The secretary-treasurer of the Club shall act as secretary of the Board, recording in a separate minute book all meetings and transactions of said Board.

SEC. 5. DUTIES AND POWERS. The Board of Control shall have those powers and duties specifically enumerated in other parts of this Constitution together with the following: It shall have the general supervision and management of the funds and properties of the Club. It shall adopt necessary house rules and by-laws for the management of the Club; provided, however, that house rules and by-laws so adopted shall be reported to the Club membership through posting or other suitable means. In carrying out the purpose of the Club, the Board may exercise all of the powers of the Club, subject to this Constitution and to action of the Club’s voting membership at any annual or special meeting. The Board of Control shall employ a manager whose term shall continue at the discretion of the Board. The manager shall appoint, direct and dismiss all employees, purchase supplies, approve bills, receive and adjust complaints and enforce such regulations and rules as may be in force.

ARTICLE X

STANDING COMMITTEES

SEC. 1. NUMBER, APPOINTMENT AND TENURE. Each incoming president shall appoint as standing committees, a House Committee, a Publicity Committee, a Program Committee and a Building Committee. The members of which shall serve for one year or until their successors are appointed. He shall also name two members to a Membership Committee, those members to serve for three years or until their successors are appointed. The president shall be a member ex-officio of each standing committee. Committee appointments shall be made known at the first meeting of the Board of Control following the election of new officers, after which they shall be posted on the Club’s bulletin board for the duration of the year.

Interim vacancies occurring in any committees shall be filled by appointment by the president. Such an appointee shall serve during the remainder of the term for which his predecessor was appointed.

SEC. 2. COMPOSITION, POWERS AND DUTIES. (a) The Publicity Committee shall consist of one member whose task will be, in addition to serving on the Program Committee, the suitable publicizing of the Club’s functions and activities.

(b) The Program Committee shall consist of six members, with the Publicity Committee ex-officio. This committee, subject to the supervision of the Board of Control, shall be charged with providing entertainment on suitable occasions.
(c) The Membership Committee shall consist of six members, two to be appointed each year. Its duties shall consist of the general administration of Article III and (of the formulation and oversight of) rules governing the admission of guests. The Committee’s recommendations shall be subject to the action of the Board of Control.

(d) The House Committee shall consist of three appointed members, the president-elect and the secretary-treasurer. Subject to the final authority of the Board of Control, it shall, in consultation with the manager, act as the Board’s management committee. It shall have power to formulate, for Board action, House Rules for the general governance of the Club rooms, and, between Board meetings, may establish such special and temporary regulation as may in its judgment be required. It shall also fulfill the budgetary duties prescribed by Article XI, Section 2. The Committee shall meet as often as necessitated by its overseeing functions and shall, through its chairman, report at each regular meeting of the Board of Control.

ARTICLE XI
FISCAL CONTROL

SEC. 1. FISCAL YEAR. The Club’s fiscal year shall be from July 1 to June 30.

SEC. 2. BUDGET. The president, president-elect, and the secretary-treasurer, in cooperation with the manager and chairman of the House Committee, shall prepare (for the June meeting of the Board of Control) a Club budget of income and expenditures estimated for the ensuing year. This budget shall be submitted to the House Committee for review prior to transmittal to the Board of Control for final approval or revision. Thereafter, a condensed statement of the budget shall be posted for the information of the members.

SEC. 3. AUDITS. The Board of Control shall engage the services of a certified public accountant to audit the Club’s account annually at the end of the Club’s fiscal year, or upon request of the Board. A report of any audit shall be presented to the Board at its next succeeding meeting, after which it shall be available to any member upon request.

ARTICLE XII
AMENDMENTS

SEC. 1. METHOD OF PROPOSING. The Board of Control or any thirty-five active members may propose amendments to the Constitution. The proposed amendments shall be posted by the secretary upon the bulletin board and shall remain so posted for a period of two weeks. After the expiration of such period, the proposed amendments may be voted upon at any meeting or election of the Club.

SEC. 2. VOTING. A two-thirds vote of those balloting shall be necessary for adoption. The method of voting shall be controlled by Article VIII, Section 4.

SEC. 3. CERTIFICATION. Where voting on amendments to the Constitution occurs at any regular or special election, it shall be the duty of the tellers named in Article VIII, Section 4, to certify the results of the balloting in the manner there provided for elections. Where such voting occurs at a special meeting of the Club, the president or other presiding officer shall name from among those present three tellers who shall carry out the duties aforementioned.

The Faculty Clubber October, 1965

The Faculty Club is extending a special welcome this year to newly appointed faculty members. Through the issuance of “Newcomer’s Privilege Cards,” these faculty and their families are being offered Club hospitality and services without membership deposit or dues for the first quarter of appointment. Information on the offer, and newcomer’s privilege referral cards, have been sent to each department chairman for distribution to new faculty. The Board of Control hopes the plan will help newcomers more readily become acquainted with their colleagues.

Ohio

For the convenience of members, this issue of the Faculty Clubber carries the schedule for all seventeen of the Club’s programs for 1965-66. Additional details on later events will be given in the monthly Club Calendar, but the listing below should help members make early plans for taking part.

Release on Receipt

Dr. James Payson Dixon, president of Antioch College, will speak at Ohio State University's 28th Annual Town Guest Night at 7 p.m Tuesday (3/3) in the Faculty Club, 181 S. Oval Dr. The invitational event will bring University faculty and members of the Columbus community together on the campus for a banquet and Dr. Dixon's address.

In his speech, "The Socialization of the Academe," Dr. Dixon will comment on the need for a third political party, as well as academic responsibility and the student.

Antioch president since 1959, Dr. Dixon's professional activities have been in the fields of chemistry, medicine, education, and public health.

He has served on three presidential commissions, contributing to the report, "Goals for Americans," prepared by the Eisenhower Commission on National Goals. He also assisted in the preparation of a blueprint on national health and welfare needs and was a member of the seven-man Advisory Commission on Narcotics and Drug (MORE)
Abuse for the late President Kennedy. During the Johnson administration, Dr. Dixon was on a 13-man advisory council reviewing the social security system.

Dr. Dixon holds an M.D. degree from Harvard University, an M.S. in hospital administration from Columbia University and honorary doctoral degrees from Nasson College, Springvale, Maine, and Rhode Island College.
Three Injured In Faculty Club Fire

27 Mar '69

By JAY R. SMITH
Lantern Staff Writer

A fire believed to be fed by exploding aerosol cans injured three persons, and did an estimated $1,000 damage to the Faculty Club Wednesday afternoon.

The club will not be open for lunch today, but it will be open for dinner, according to James L. Kay, kitchen manager.

Columbus Fire Chief Robert E. Lynch, who made the estimate, said the cause of the fire is still under investigation.

Injured In Fire

Injured were: Lt. Dave Barrows, of the Columbus Fire Dept.; Joseph P. Sharry, of Worcester, Mass., a guest at the club; and George Bailey, campus fire prevention chief.

Barrows was admitted to University Hospital for treatment of smoke inhalation. He is in satisfactory condition.

Sharry and Bailey were given oxygen outside the club, but were not taken to the hospital.

Sharry refused further aid saying he had to catch an airplane to Athens, Ohio in an hour, fire officials reported. They said he inhaled smoke while helping persons out of the club.

Started in Janitor's Room

Richard K. Rohde, manager of the club, said the fire started in a janitor's room used to store cleaning materials. The fire was reported at 2:41 p.m.

He said the fire was quickly discovered since the flames spread rapidly into the hallway and an adjoining coatroom.

Rohde said exploding aerosol cans fed the flames.

Some coats in the coatroom caught fire, Lynch said, but he did not know how many. Club employees carried undamaged coats out to their owners, who waited patiently in the cold.

One woman returned, however, claiming she had been given the wrong coat. For those without coats the club supplied busboy jackets. Rohde said some 80 persons were in the club when the fire was discovered.
Faculty Club to See
Continued Expansion
1-6-65
Some 2,300 Ohio State Faculty Club members will soon be enjoying better food service in a larger building.

The second phase of a $145,000 modernization and expansion program at the club will begin soon, according to Prof. Lawrence E. Kunkle, Club president. The first phase, which began last summer, was recently completed.

Mainly Kitchen
The first part of the remodeling plan was concerned primarily with kitchen equipment and expansion. It cost approximately $45,000.

Completion of the kitchen changes and additions will be part of the second phase. But this plan also includes construction of a three-floor extension on the south-east side of the building. This second phase will cost about $100,000.

"These plans were made last year," Kunkle said. "But then there was no money. That is the major reason for the two-phase plan."

Members' Loans
Funds for the current improvements will be obtained through members' loans.

These members will later be repaid from club income. The Faculty Club is a non-profit organization supported by its membership.

"The modernization of the kitchen will enable us to do a more efficient job in serving meals here," Richard K. Rohde, Faculty Club manager said. "Normally we serve about 500. These changes will help us to serve them faster and eliminate much of the waiting."

The Faculty Club was established in 1923. Since 1940 it has occupied its present quarters at 181 S. Oval Dr. According to Rohde some of the kitchen equipment was brought from pre-1940 quarters in the Administration Building. Much of it however was new when the building was built.

Heebner Named
Club Manager
8-30-69
Harry Heebner, former director of food and drink operations, has been named general manager of the Faculty Club at Ohio State.

Heebner replaces N. Gwynn Fletcher who resigned to become general manager of the Dayton Country Club last week.

At the time of his resignation, Fletcher said the financial problems of the club had been solved, and he felt the job he was hired to do had been accomplished.

R.H. Davidson, chairman of the board of control, the governing body of the Faculty Club, confirmed that, despite financial losses resulting from the University closing Spring Quarter, the club is in better financial shape than when Fletcher became general manager.

Davidson added, however, that monthly dues had to be increased from $5 to $10 for June, July and August to compensate for the losses during the campus closing.

Heebner also said the financial position of the club had been improved.

"We are able to pay bills and show some improvements in the club," he said.

He said monthly dues will return to normal in September.

According to Heebner, his former post as director of food and beverage operations has been combined with the general manager's position. He declined, however, to give his salary for handling both jobs.

Heebner said he anticipates giving pay increases to the staff, depending on how business goes at the club in October.

"We like to pay people what they are worth and we have a fine staff here," he said.

Heebner, who came to Ohio State with Fletcher in December 1969, said he plans no major changes in the operation of the club.

Selected
11-13-69
Newton Fletcher will succeed Richard Rhode as manager of the Ohio State Faculty Club Dec. 1.

Fletcher comes to Ohio State from a position as assistant director of the Club Managers' Association. His duties included long range plans for facilities and programs.

With a masters degree in education, Fletcher was a football coach at the University of North Carolina.

He helped establish officers clubs in Europe for the Air Force and has served as director of the Air Force's recreation programs.

Rhode resigned as Faculty Club manager after 11 years, becoming manager of the Country Club at Monroe, Michigan.
Traffic problems hamper Faculty Club’s business

A shiny white skull perched high on the top of a bookcase, appears to smile as if enjoying some private joke.

The skull’s smile comes to rest on the greying man, lounging in the swivel chair, hands cupped behind his head. The man is Ralph H. Davidson, professor of entomology and president of the Ohio State Faculty Club.

He was about to be asked whether his job as president consumes much time, when a seven minute phone call about the Faculty Club interrupted the interview.

An ox roast is to be held on Oct. 28 for Faculty Club members and their families. Davidson answered the club manager’s questions and smoothed out details.

Takes job seriously
He takes his job seriously. He feels responsible for the success of any project, even to the smallest details. Davidson began his year as Faculty Club president in February after serving a year’s apprenticeship as president-elect.

During his term, three club managers have come and gone. There has been a large turnover in staff. The club is just ‘pulling away from the losses suffered when it was closed last spring, he said.

Davidson’s current problem is a result of the pedestrian campus. Complaints are coming to him from university staff whose offices are located in the Center for Tomorrow.

No time for lunch
Driving to the main campus, having to park in the stadium lot and the having to walk to the Faculty Club is so time consuming that staff members find there is not enough time left for lunch, he said.

Davidson said the new parking rules also pose a problem for Faculty Club members who work in downtown Columbus or elsewhere in the city. It is difficult to have lunch at a club if a member cannot get there.

Davidson does not know what the answer is to this problem but he is currently working on it with the parking commission.

Attends campus functions
Davidson’s official duties are comprised largely of presiding and welcoming. He presides at the Faculty Club’s monthly business meeting and attends campus functions such as the reception at the Ohio Union Monday, where he welcomed new faculty members.

Davidson said he enjoys his office. He has found though, that it takes more of his time than he had thought it would.

When asked why he sought election, he said that he was asked to have his name put on the slate. “I guess it’s an honor,” he added.

Davidson said the addition of liquor to the club’s menu this past year has improved business. He added that the club’s busiest time is still at noon.

As soon as funds will permit, there will be more club redecoration.

Davidson answered those faculty members who have complained about the club’s food quality by comparing it to that of a popular downtown restaurant. He added that the difference lies in the modest prices charged by the Faculty Club.
Faculty Club hires students to tend bar, wait on tables

BY GLORIA J. SWANSON
OA Ume Special Writer

Almost 50 students contribute to the operation of the Faculty Club and, according to Harry Heebner, Faculty Club manager, the club could not get along without them.

Heebner said the student waitresses, busboys and bartenders, "contribute immensely to the overall operation of the club."

Students have always been hired as waitresses and busboys, he said.

In the past they were supervised by permanent non-student help but now students are supervised by students.

The system has worked out so well that Heebner said he will continue this policy.

Paid by hour

Students are paid by the hour and time spent on the job ranges from two to five hours or more a day depending on the individual student's class schedule.

Tipping is not allowed in the Faculty Club but, according to Heebner, this does not stop the students from putting forth maximum effort.

No experience is necessary and students are given on-the-job training.

Uniforms are provided for the girls and meals are provided for all student workers.

Turnover high

Heebner said there is a 20 to 40 per cent quarterly turnover in student help but that the club still manages to operate smoothly. Graduation, conflicting class schedules and transfers account for the majority of the turnover, he said.

Occasional complaints come from Faculty Club members concerning hair length of busboys and waiters.

Hair, for men or women, must not come forward over the shoulders.

Cleanliness is no problem with either sex, Heebner said, nor is neatness in appearance for the girls. Levis are frowned upon, especially during evening hours.

Heebner said that he has had no trouble with student dishonesty, petty or otherwise.

Students dependable

Heebner said the students are aggressive and dependable. He cited last spring's riots as an example, saying that the student help continued to come to work even when the Faculty Club was closed.

Jane Hodge, a senior from New Carlisle, is in her third quarter at the Faculty Club. She began as a waitress and now operates the typewriter machine in the club office.

Her Faculty Club pays and a student loan enables her to pay her own way through college. She got her job through Student Services.

Donna Salisbury, from Ottawa, Ohio, graduated in June and now works as a lab technician at University Hospital during the day and as a dining room waitress at the Faculty Club at night. She is hostess in the dining room on Sundays.

Thomas Jackson, a senior from Louisville, Ohio, has worked at the Faculty Club for a year. He began as a busboy and is now the bar supervisor with a staff of five bartenders and five cocktail waitresses.

He said the most favorable aspect of his work is seeing and mingling with professors away from the classroom situation.

Former Clock owner to head Faculty Club

Donald P. Herb, former owner of the Clock Restaurant in downtown Columbus, has been appointed as the new manager of the Ohio State Faculty Club.

Herb replaces Harry Heebner, who has become the manager of a VIP restaurant in Columbus. Heebner was with Ohio State for 22 months.

The Faculty Club is a private club with more than 2,100 members. The majority of the members are Ohio State faculty and administrators, but some are business and professional men active in civic affairs.

Several campus organizations join as a group.

The club, located on South College Drive next to Mendenhall Lab, serves lunches and dinners in both a cafeteria and a dining room.

The club also houses holiday parties, dinner-dances, teas and wedding receptions.

Herb is vice-president of the Columbus branch of the Food Services Executive Association, and international food services organization for the education and exchange of ideas.
There's Lot of Hot Air in Faculty Club at Noon

Rumor Can't Be True:
If the rumor turns out to be true, the originator of the rumor is docked all points he has gained plus another 10. Armitage said.

Once a year prizes are awarded for the "Best Rumor Monger" on the basis of the points accumulated, he said. Awards are also given for the best and worst stories. The "Potter Award" is given for the worst story, named after Mervin Potter, retired assistant commander of the ROTC. Armitage said.

Pop-Up Theory
Many theories were presented on how to raise the ship, he said, but the final solution involved building a tube that was sunk into the center of the ship and shooting ping pong balls into it until the ship surfaced.

On another occasion the group formed a committee to study a book that was written by one of its members, Harold E. Burtt, Armitage said.

Burt is chairman of the psychology department and his book was about the behavioral patterns of birds. The book even won high praise from the New York Times, Armitage said.

The committee began the study by purchasing one copy of the book and studying it thoroughly, he said.

The club refused to honor the book, however, because it did not include a chapter about the sexual behavior patterns of the birds. Members charged the elderly author with failing to keep up with the sexual revolution, Armitage said.

Can't Be Complimentary
One article in the club's unwritten constitution, Armitage explained, says that members may not say anything complimentary about another member. Thus the book review.

The group discusses serious problems also. It provides a free exchange of views from people of different areas of the University," Armitage said.

Many controversial topics concerning the University have been thrown open for discussion at the group's meetings before they became University policy, Armitage said.

"The Anvil and Billows Club has had an influence on University policies because many distinguished and important people have belonged to it," he said.

Members have come from all areas of the University and have included many former vice presidents of the University such as Alfred Garnett, Edward Q. Moulton, executive vice president of the office of the president, and Woody Hayes are also members, Armitage said.

Not a Closed Club
Many new members of the Faculty Club think the membership for the Anvils and Billows club is closed, but it's not, he said.

The Faculty Club offers a place for people to meet and exchange views, Armitage said, adding that the club has a unifying effect for the faculty and administration of the University.

Armitage said he doesn't know the significance of the Anvil in the club's name, but the billows definitely stand for the displacement of "hot air."

The Faculty Club at Ohio State is unique, Armitage said, and "the Anvil and Billows Club is just one example of what can happen at the Faculty Club when its members get together."

When Anvil and Billows Club Meets
Club members now lifetime

The Ohio State Faculty Club has established a lifetime membership, according to Richard Bohning, president of the club's board of control.

The lifetime membership will cost $100 and be available to any retired faculty member of at least 10 years standing or to anyone who has reached mandatory retirement age while a member for his entire eligibility period. Bohning said.

A $100 deposit is required of all faculty members, Bohning said, which can be used to pay for the lifetime membership. Active members of the club pay $2 per month toward retirement.

"The potential saving for a lifetime membership...can easily be calculated," Bohning said.

The membership plan commemorated the club's 50th anniversary Dec. 10.

Faculty Club elects 1st woman president

The Ohio State Faculty Club has the first woman president-elect in its 50 year history. Isabel Miller, associate professor of early and middle childhood education, is the president-elect for 1974 and will assume office in February 1975.

The Faculty Club, which was 50 years old on Dec. 10, 1973, is a private organization open to University faculty and their spouses.

After being nominated by a faculty committee, Miller was elected by secret ballot by active Faculty Club members, those teaching at the University last quarter.

According to Faculty Club manager Donald P. Herb, "We are very proud to have Isabel Miller as our new president-elect.

Miller has served as club secretary for three years.

"I was very surprised at winning the election because there are so many more men than women in the club," she said.

"I feel I can serve the University better by being involved in the activities.

Miller said she does not feel sexual discrimination has been a problem for her.

"I feel that anything I haven't gotten in life is because I wasn't qualified for it, not because I was a woman and discriminated against," she said.

Students find ideal jobs at Faculty Club

By James Yavorcik

Despite the current recession and rising unemployment, about 80 students have found "ideal" jobs at the Faculty Club, Marti Boldman, assistant club manager, said.

Boldman said the turnover rate of part-time student employees has been low, especially when compared to other campus area employers.

"We lost only one worker Autumn Quarter and that was to graduation," she noted.

The Faculty Club is a private organization of about 2,300 faculty members and spouses. It provides food service, banquet and reception facilities for its members and work for students.

Jobs include waiters, busboys, banquet help, cocktail waitresses and bartenders.

Boldman said many of the bartenders are graduate and professional students since they must be 21.
Old profs keep hot air rising

By Mimi Dekker

There's one group of men who would rather let out 'hot air' than play cards or chess in the Faculty Club after lunch.

"We knock all the time and blow like hell," said Merwin E. Potter, assistant dean emeritus of the College of Administration.

They are all members of the Angel and Bellows Club, (A & B) meeting daily in the faculty Club Lounge to further the art of problem solving, story telling and sitting around.

"IT GOT TO BE a habit and we just kept coming," said Harold E. Burtt, professor emeritus of psychology, and oldest regularly attending member of the A&B Club.

The members themselves are unsure how large the club is.

"Generally there can be anywhere from three to 14 members here each day, with a mean of seven," Burtt quipped. "Our average age here is 67, with a standard deviation of five."

Any faculty member can join the A&B Club by attending a meeting.

"IF AFTER a month of appearing and still no one talks to you, I'd give up," Potter joked.

Most of the members carry membership cards they consider collectors items.

"The guy who made them died, so if you don't have one now, it's too late," said Brevton Berry, professor emeritus of sociology and anthropology.

Potter feels there have not been any women "with enough fortitude to withstand the meetings. There has never been a card-carrying woman in our group," he added.

A PROBLEM the club tried to solve was how to raise the famous Italian ship, the "Andrea Doria," which sank on its maiden voyage off the coast of Nantucket. After many theories they decided to fill the ship with ping-pong balls until it surfaced.

Even though President Harold L. Enarson frequents the Faculty Club, he has never attended an A&B Club meeting. "Former President Novice G. Fawcett attended only one meeting," Potter said.

THE CLUB offers its members several honorary degrees. One degree is in psychoceramics.

"It's for the crackpots," Potter said.

Awards are also given for the best and worst story told by a member. The Potter Award is given to the member who tells the worst story.

"Certain stories can be told only on certain days," Berry said. "On Friday, anything goes. There are no subjects barred."

The A&B Club is a nationally recognized organization. "We are listed among groups of learned societies," Berry said. "We also have representatives who have carried the gospel of the A&B Club to other parts of the country."

"We have a representative in Clearwater, Fla., who sends us various newspaper clippings. So far three of our members have tried to take his scissors away but have not been successful," Berry joked.

"WE USED TO put all the clippings under the cushions in the chairs in the lounge here," Potter said. "But now that there's this new cushionless furniture and because of the thorough cleaning woman, we've gradually lost our library."

"We feel we're a subspecies of the Faculty Club. We meet here because there is no reason for us to be separated from our roots," Potter jested.

"Here we get away from our wives and work," Samuel B. Folk, professor emeritus of engineering mechanics, said. "I usually get invited out to lunch two or three times a week when my wife tells me to come here for lunch."

"I feel as though I'm in a big adult education project," Barry said. "We meet here to learn and to solve problems, and we enjoy the seminar atmosphere. This is a give-and-take situation. If you can't take it, you better not give it."
1st woman president leaves Faculty Club

By John Roller

When a photograph of the 51st president of the Faculty Club is placed alongside the previous 50 in the club’s reading room, it might stand out from the rest.

That’s because for the first time the president is a woman.

ISABEL MILLER’S presidential term expires Feb. 24. Miller is an associate professor of early and middle childhood education and has been president since January 1975. She said she was surprised at being elected by the predominantly male club, even though she was invited to run.

Miller established a first during her term by calling an open meeting of the club membership to discuss club activities and finances. She the international dinners, related to programs at Mershon Auditorium.

Miller’s duties as president included presiding at Board of Control meetings and attending various club committee meetings. Miller said she was secretary of the club for three years before being elected as president, and therefore “knew pretty much about what went on.”

Miller joined the Faculty Club 25 years ago when she began teaching at Ohio State.

“ONE OF the nice things about belonging to the club is you get to meet people in other colleges,” she said. This is especially valuable in a big university like Ohio State, she said.

Tradition is also part of the club’s attractions, Miller said. They include a Christmas dance, a shrimp peel, Canadian cheese soup on Tuesdays and apple pie for dessert.

“Apple pie is always offered for dessert,” she said. Whenever it isn’t listed on the menu, people actually become concerned, she added.

Miller said there was no special reaction to her as a woman president, except for occasional “teasing.” After her term expires, she will serve a year on the Board of Control, after making history in what she called “an interesting year.”
Facility Club provides leisurely atmosphere

By Barbara Lippman

Because of Ohio State's massive size, many students as well as faculty, tend to feel a sense of anonymity. Students have numerous opportunities to meet other students through classes, clubs and organizations. But what do faculty members have? Well, there is the Faculty Club.

THE FACULTY Club, at 181 S. Oval Drive, next to Orton Hall, is more than just a place to eat.

It is a place to relax and a place for faculty members to meet those outside of their own department. The moderate prices — $3.50 for prime rib at lunch — and the leisurely atmosphere, makes the club a "logical place to socialize," according to Maurice Giltz, professor in the Department of Zoology.

The club is a "good way for faculty to get to know each other and develop a feeling of being a part of the campus," said Marion Smith, associate dean of the College of Engineering.

MEETING PEOPLE in other departments seems to be the main reason for most people joining the club. However, not everyone is eligible for membership. Only faculty and staff with responsibilities equal to those of instructor or above, are eligible.

There is a $50 non-refundable initiation fee charged to all new members and all members must pay $9 monthly dues. Meals and social activities are not included in the dues. They are charged to the member's account and the person is then billed once a month for dues and any charges on his account.

DUES COVER such things as tipping and free private use of any dining-meeting room.

It's lunchtime at the Faculty Club at Ohio State University. Michael Porter, assistant day cook, ladles up a dish of Canadian cheese soup. Beside him, almost hidden, is Olivia Cox, head day cook, who has been at the club for 34 years. Preparing plates across from them is Ella Mixon.

Menu variations are even more important at a private club, said Marti Boldman, manager of the Faculty Club at Ohio State University. "You get a lot of the same people. I don't want them to get bored," she explained. The club south of the Oval has about 2,700 members, including professors and other faculty at OSU, administrators, and "friends of the university" such as big-money contributors.

Ms. Boldman said requests for favorite dishes are not unusual, and she even keeps a list of people to be called when certain dishes are on the menu. Scalloped oysters, for example, are a favorite with many members. Other favorites are served weekly, always on the same day, so members will know.

"We have Canadian cheese soup every Tuesday," Ms. Boldman said. "People come from miles around for our Canadian cheese soup."

How does she know how much people will eat? "Pure luck," said Ms. Boldman puckishly. She has been at the Faculty Club 10 years, two as manager. Like other restaurant managers, she keeps a close watch on special events in the area — in her case, campus activities — to help estimate how many will be dropping in. Home game football Saturdays are a classic example. "I usually get here at 9:30 a.m.,” Ms. Boldman said. "Believe it or not, there are already people here waiting to go to lunch at 11:30."

In planning menus, she tries to select dishes which can be cooked to order. "I don't want anything prepared ahead and sitting in a walk-in locker," — even for banquets. Entrees like duck are partially cooked, and sealed in their juices. "We freeze them and thaw like six a day," Ms.

Boldman said. If duck sells well early in the evening, the cook may take out a couple more.

While food for a large banquet at a big hotel may be partially cooked as long as three days in advance, at the Faculty Club "we do everything at the moment," Ms. Boldman said. The club even offers diners a choice of entree — the night of the dinner. It can do this because "I know in my head who will take what," Ms. Boldman said. For example, guests at an upcoming banquet were to be offered filet of sole or roast tenderloin. "We know probably 85 percent will take the beef — particularly because they're young people," she said.

"We only had a disaster once." She knew the group had eaten meat the night before and thought that most would choose the fish entree. They didn't. "We made it, but it wasn't satisfactory," she said of the flurry to put together more meat dishes.

The club serves meals on three floors out of one kitchen. Diners — as many as 500 at a time — can be munching in the basement cafeteria, the second-floor dining room or in meeting rooms throughout the building. To make things easier for the cook, if beef Wellington is served at a banquet, it will be featured in the dining room, too.

Some items not generally considered popular in central Ohio sell well at the club. "We sell a ton of lamb chops," Ms. Boldman said. "Steaks aren't a big item here. . . . I suppose — and I don't mean to sound snobbish — it's because you're dealing with a higher education level." She also surmised that members may be more concerned with eating what's good for them than the average restaurant guest.
Faculty Club 'serves' students

By Michele F. Mihaljevich

A cracked crock of soup and a dumbwaiter have provided memorable experiences to one Faculty Club worker, while other student employees say a job is simply a convenient way to earn money while going to school.

About 70 students work in the Faculty Club dining rooms, according to Marti Boldman, club manager. Furman Ammons, a former OSU student from Lilliard, recalls the time he had to carry a split crock of soup to a table.

Ammons, who now attends Columbus Technical Institute, says he asked another busboy to bring a fan for the leaking crock.

The crock broke before he could get it into the fan and soup spilled, he says.

"I had red hands for a while," Ammons says "and stampers wondered what was going on."

Another time, after a sorority party, a dumbwaiter got stuck under the weight of food and china led on by new busboys who did not realize the dumbwaiter was only for plates.

Ammons says he managed to get the double set doors open enough to get some of the plates and off. When he did that, "the dumbwaiter shoved up and my hands were stuck. I pulled them out, but I was bruised and bleeding."

Some of the food in the dumbwaiter fell to the bottom of the shaft, Ammons says. Keys to the shaft couldn't be found, so the club manager had to jump into the dumbwaiter. The manager had to sit on the shelf and hand plates out to free it.

"As waitresses, we don't prepare salads, or carry out to the tables," she says. "We just take the orders and set the tables. That can get dull at times."

Some students like working at the club because they see their professors in a less formal setting. Others enjoy the excitement of famous visitors like Charlton Heston, Frank Reynolds and internationally known academicians.

Donna Kalinos, a graduate student from Springfield, says she likes the club even though it can get hectic at times.

Kalinos said the worst times are football Saturdays. "People go from one group or meeting to another and it gets hard to remember which group it's what."

Kalinos, like McClung and Ammons, has worked at the club for three years.

McClung has worked on both the lunch and dinner crews. She says she is amazed at the difference between the two times.

"It's almost like a culture shock," she says. "Dinner is formal and elegant, with linen napkins and the works. Lunch crowds are generally in a hurry so everything is informal."

As part of the formality, busboys used to wear red jackets, but because of the flimsy material, they were dangerous at times, Ammons says.

Ammons' jacket once caught fire from the sterno he was using but he did not realize it at first.

"I smelled smoke but I didn't know it was me until a waitress told me, he says. "I ended up with a big hole on the side of my jacket."
Garver named 'Chef of the Year'

By Becky Stiles Belt 2-3-82

Dispatch Food Writer

It's not often that a guest of honor has to work at his own party. Keni Garver did just that at last week's Columbus Chefs Association's Champagne Ball.

Garver, association president for the past five years, had volunteered to host the eight-course dinner at the Ohio State University Faculty Club where he is executive chef. He had cooked for a number of past association balls, but this one was to be extra special; it would salute the Chef of the Year award recipient and the next association president.

But when Garver was told that he himself had been voted Chef of the Year by the 53 other association members, he was dumbfounded. Instead of going to the gala, sitting back and basking in hard-earned culinary glory, he would be orchestrating the gourmet dinner.

BY PLANNING ahead, however, Garver was able to enjoy his own party after all. Helped by his Faculty Club kitchen chefs Ora Lee, Jeff Hartman and Ralph Frame, Garver did most of the cooking several days beforehand and found his last-minute host duties minimal.

And what a party it was. Beginning with an hors d'oeuvre table which fed the eyes as well as the stomach, the dinner was better described as a royal feast.

Two salmon were covered with overlapping cucumber slices resembling fish scales. The salmon were surrounded by clear gelatin cut to look like ice cubes, and around these cubes were individual salmon mousses decorated with pimiento, green pepper and truffle flowers. A huge bowl of shrimp and a shell filled with cocktail sauce completed the seafood portion of the table.

Silver chafing dishes with stuffed mushrooms and chicken strudel were next to the table's centerpiece, a stuffed pheasant standing amidst irises, ferns, eucalyptus leaves and peacock feathers.

WHEN HARPIST Muriel Gundersheimer of the Columbus Symphony Orchestra began playing, the first dinner course was served: Le Potage de Laitue Francois au Creme, French Cream of Watercress Soup, garnished with a puff pastry crescent.

Next was La Thermidor de Fruits de Mer, Seafood Thermidor in a shell with a border of Duchess potatoes.

The third course was Salade Caesar; this was followed by a palate refresher, Sorbet a la Framboises, raspberry sherbet.

One entree was Le Filet de Boeuf a la Farci, beef tenderloin stuffed with a spinach, sour cream and onion mixture. The other was Le Caille Roti, stuffed quail in a potato boat over a wild rice pilaf.

Accompanying the entrees were a broiled, crumb-topped tomato and La Arichout a la Maison, artichoke hearts stuffed with asparagus spears, wrapped in bacon and topped with Hollandaise Sauce.

White and rose wines were served with the dinner.

A sponge cake torte iced with whipped cream, drizzled with orange brandy and covered with fresh berries was served as was an apricot-glazed cheese ring and cream puffs.

After the sweet table was cleared, the Jerry Wolfe Orchestra played.

Garver said the evening was a special one, even if he did do the cooking.

The 40-year-old chef has loved cooking since he was a child. After practicing on family and friends his first 18 years, he entered the Culinary Institute of America, considered by many to be America's best cooking school.

THERE GARVER had "a taste of everything": cooking (meats, soups, sauces, etc.), pastry making, baking and ice carving. He preferred cooking, especially in foreign cuisines, to baking or decorating, and still does. Today he also specializes in Jewish foods.

After graduating from the Culinary Institute, Garver served as a Columbus restaurant apprentice for a short time, then was chef at several Ohio restaurants.

As Faculty Club's executive chef and as the owner of a catering firm, Katering by Keni, 651 Cranfield Pl., Garver works about 12 hours seven days a week.

"Most chefs are used to this," he said. They should expect this before ever deciding to enter the field, he added.

Garver was chosen Chef of the Year for his contributions to the culinary trade. He has won about 35 trophies in chefs' competitions, taught Garde Mange (cold fancy foods) classes at Columbus Technical Institute and organized or headed many events during his five terms as Columbus Chefs' Association president.
retroactive to Jan. 1.

Harry E. Ezell of the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology was named clinical professor emeritus and Marjorie P. McMillin of the College of Social Work was named associate professor emeritus, retroactive to Jan. 1.

The trustees authorized employment of an architectural and engineering firm and the advertising for bids for renovation and improvement at the Faculty Club, 181 S. Oval Drive.

The firm, Withers Associates Inc., of Columbus, has completed a master plan study and remodeling feasibility study for renovations estimated to cost $1.2 million. Renovations will cover selected areas in and around the building; modification of interior space arrangements to comply with appropriate building codes; modification of trash handling and loading dock arrangement, and improvement of the existing kitchen layout.

Trustees also approved employment of an architectural and engineering firm, McDonald, Cassell & Bassett Inc., of Columbus, for a major upgrading of the Central Service Building, 2009 Millikin Road. The firm has completed a feasibility plan for the renovation of the building, whose past function will be assumed by the new Stores and Receiving Building under construction at 2650 Kenny Road.

Phase I of the project, for which $1,325,000 in university funding will be available, will renovate the first and second floor for general classroom space and the third floor for the University Architect's office. Phase II will renovate the basement and ground floor to house the University Bookstores operations and provide utility services.

In other actions, the board:

--Authorized purchase of property at 124 W. 10th Ave. for the appraised value of $65,000 from Thomas Graham of Columbus. The property is located within the south campus acquisition boundary of the university's master plan.

--Granted a 15-year easement of a pole line along Kenny Road in the vicinity of the University Services Center to the Columbus & Southern Ohio Electric Co. for the placement of anchors on electric lines relocated due to highway improvements.

--Adopted housekeeping amendments to the Bylaws of the Board of Trustees and the Rules of the University Faculty reflecting changes in titles of several university officials.

--Adopted amendments to the Rules of the University Faculty establishing an emeritus member of the Faculty Compensation and Benefits Committee appointed annually by the president in consultation with the Ohio State University Retirees Association.

The Faculty Club is targeted for a $1.5 million renovation to begin this summer.

James Buffer, president of the Faculty Club, 181 S. Oval Dr., said the renovation will include a remodeled kitchen, improvements to the loading dock, a new elevator and general improvements to the whole building.

Buffer said the $1.5 million needed to renovate the building will be provided by the Faculty Club and the university. The Faculty Club must repay half of the money given to it by the university.

The Faculty Club is a private club, reserved for members of the faculty and the President's Club, and members have to pay an initial fee, as well as monthly dues. Outside membership may be granted by approval of the Controlling Board.

Regardless of the money generated by the members, the university is responsible for the maintenance and general upkeep of the building.

The club was built with private donations in 1940, but during the 1960s, the building was given to the university on the grounds that the building would be maintained by the university.

Richard Jackson, vice president for business and administration, said the university feels justified in putting so much money into the upkeep of the Faculty Club because the club provides a great service to the university.

The club is a place for interaction between faculty members and it employs a number of students, Jackson said.

"(It) is a good university-community asset," he said.

Joanne Murphy, assistant dean of the Law School, chaired the building committee that proposed the renovations.

Murphy said the Faculty Club has been in need of improvements for several years but until recently no money existed to do anything about it.

She said it was only after Serge Hardy took over as manager of the Faculty Club two years ago, that the club has begun generating its own resources.

Murphy said the club had experienced problems such as not being able to pay their bills on time, but since Hardy took over, he has helped to turn the situation around.

"OSU is rather unique to have a place like the Faculty Club," she said.

It is important for a university this large to have a place for faculty members to interact and exchange ideas, she said.
Faculty Club renovations spur protests

Twelve people marched from Stillman Hall to the Faculty Club Thursday where they protested what they call “selective spending.”

The Faculty Club is targeted for a $1.5 million renovation to begin this summer. Some people feel the university should not be spending so much money on the Faculty Club when students are facing financial aid cuts and possible tuition increases, several protesters said.

James Buffer, president of the Faculty Club, 181 S. Oval Drive, said the $1.5 million needed to renovate the building will be provided by the Faculty Club and the university.

The university will provide all of the money needed to renovate, but the Faculty Club will pay half of it back, Buffer said.

Rowane Sloan, a senior from Gallipolis, is a member of the International Committee Against Racism (InCAR) and helped to organize the protest.

Sloan said she was expecting about 50 students to turn out for the rally, but only about 30 did.

She said no one person or organization was responsible for the rally, but most of the 12 protesters who started the march were either associated with the College of Social Work or the committee.

“It is criminal for the university to pump that much money into the Faculty Club,” Sloan said.

She said there is no way the university can justify spending so much money on the Faculty Club when more and more students, especially minorities, are wondering how they are going to pay for school.

Members of the protest carried signs and chanted phrases like, “Education, yes — racism, no, selective admissions has got to go.”

Charles Ross, associate professor of social work who spoke at the rally, said the university had “misplaced priorities.”

“$1.5 million could go a long way in providing financial aid for students sitting in Cleveland and Cincinnati with no opportunities,” Ross said.

Ross said minority enrollment has been decreasing in the past few years and the university is not helping by dumping money into the Faculty Club and ignoring issues like minority recruitment.

“We have watched the policies of this university change,” Ross said. “We will not stop until justice reigns on this campus.”

James D. Cawley, assistant professor of ceramic engineering, called the concerns of the protesters “justified but misplaced.”

The issue of cost and tuition is determined at the state level and that is where it should be raised, he said.

The issue of selective admissions should be raised at the high school level because that is the source of the whole problem, he said.

The Faculty Club is a private club, reserved for members of the faculty and the President’s Club. Members have to pay an initial fee as well as monthly dues.

Outside membership may be granted by approval of the Faculty Club’s controlling board.

Regardless of the money generated by the Faculty Club, the university is responsible for the maintenance and general upkeep of the building.

The club was built from private donations in 1940, but during the 1960s, the building was given to the university on the grounds that the university would maintain the building.

Richard Jackson, vice president for business and administration, said the university feels justified in renovating the Faculty Club because the club provides a great service to the university.

The club is a place for interaction between faculty members and it employs a number of students, Jackson said.

“(It) is a good university/community asset,” he said.

Bette Kelly, office manager of the Faculty Club, called the protest ridiculous and said the renovation was badly needed.

The renovation will include a remodeled kitchen, improvements to the loading dock, a new elevator and general improvements to the whole building.
Club relays faculty, staff
OSU Reflections

BY LEAH WEAVER
Lantern staff writer

Because all work and no play can leave college students feeling drained and isolated, many opportunities are provided on campus for them to relax, unwind and socialize. But what about the faculty?

For them, there is the Faculty Club, a place for professors and staff to hang their hats, warm their seats, and settle back to enjoy conversation and camaraderie.

James Buffer, president of the Faculty Club, said the club serves as a campus focal point where professors and administrative staff can gather, not only to eat, but also to talk.

"The Faculty Club provides great opportunities for mixing and exchanging ideas with men and women from all branches of the university," Buffer said. "You begin to feel like you're part of a family."

Buffer, who is also the associate dean of educational administration, joined the OSU faculty in 1967. He said his interview lunch at the Faculty Club 20 years ago sold him on coming to Ohio State.

"Part of the thing that brought me here and has kept me here is the friendship and collegiality of the people I've met through the Faculty Club," Buffer said.

The need for a place where professionals could get together dates back to the 1900s when the progressive growth of the university produced an accompanying sense of anonymity among the staff.

At that time, male students had their social center, the Ohio Union, and females had a separate (but equal) facility, Pomerene Hall. However, there was no similar setting where all faculty members could meet and mingle.

Thus when the old administration building (now Bricker Hall) was completed in 1924, university trustees designated the third floor for "a new and much desired addition to university life - the long-looked-for Faculty Club."

An OSU Monthly article written in 1924 by Professor William Graves describes the delight of the faculty over the new club.

"It is all we've been waiting for through weary years, and we are at last on a social level with college professors anywhere."

"So far as our feelings go, they need never again be hurt by our having to stand in line with a tin tray while someone splashes tomato soup on us," Graves wrote.

Graves pointed out that the beautiful furniture, velvety rugs and plush surroundings were merely long-awaited amenities, not causes for haughtiness.

"But we aren't snobbish," he continued. "It just seems nice to eat in a big, sunny room where we can get acquainted with each other, bring our friends, and pretend we are more or less plutocratic, if we like."

The expanding faculty soon outgrew its quarters in the administration building, and in 1938 plans were approved for construction of the present home of the Faculty Club, located next to Orton Hall on South Oval Drive.

Funds for the new building were provided by a federal grant, and club members assumed 55 percent of the total $185,000 cost.

Good-natured fun and games ensued during a mortgage-burning ceremony in 1945 when Faculty Club members retired the last of their bonds used to finance the building.

For the occasion, a special mortgage-burning device called the Ceremonial Hydro-kata-schizoid-rotary-diatherm was introduced by Harold Burtt, professor of psychology.

During the festivities, Burtt presented a "learned lecture" on the "complexities" of the instrument, which consisted of scissors, hatchets and a match affixed to a piece of wood. The operation was a success.

Burtt, now professor emeritus of psychology, said he joined the OSU faculty in 1919 and served on the original committee that proposed the idea for establishing a Faculty Club.

Also, he is associated with a Faculty Club tradition that is nearly as old as the club itself. At the age of 97, Burtt is the oldest member of the Anvil and Billows Club (A & B), a Faculty Club lunch group that was formed nearly 47 years ago as an alternative to playing cards or chess after dinner.

Burtt explained the club got its name because the members like to "knock and blow."

"Our purpose is to have no purpose," Burtt said. "We just argue in a friendly way about how to solve the world's problems."

The group, which meets weekly at the Faculty Club to "discuss and cuss a variety of issues," once tackled the problem of retrieving a famous Italian ship, the Andrea Doria, which sank off the coast of Nantucket on its maiden voyage. The answer? Fill the ship with ping pong balls until it surfaces.

Burtt said any Faculty Club member may join their after-lunch group.

"First you come to a meeting with a current member," Burtt said. "And you sit, for maybe three or four years, until someone talks to you. Then you know you're starting to get through the initiation process."

For all their "hot air," the members of the Anvil and Billows group have come to represent the purpose of the Faculty Club for the 2,600 staff members who belong: a place for discussion and socialization that can lead to lasting friendships.

And although he will pretend otherwise, no one knows this purpose better than Burtt.

Perhaps remembering the schizoid mortgage-burning device as he spoke, the glint in Burtt's eyes reflected his appreciation for the history of the Faculty Club while indicating his openness to change.

"Our members have dwindled through retirement, moving and death," Burtt said.

"But we need new members." And then smiling, "Preferably younger and of the opposite sex."

Faculty Club gets renovation

$2 million facelift to be completed in December 1990

By Tricia Gibson
Lantern staff writer

The Faculty Club is getting a make-over which will cost nearly $2 million.

Renovation work budgeted at a cost of $1,916,386 began last week, said Franklin J. Gencur, Faculty Club director.

Gencur said some of the renovations are necessary in order for the club to comply with current building codes.

A sprinkler system and fire alarms will be installed in the club, he said.

Half of the money used to renovate the club is provided by club membership dues, Gencur said.

He said the university does pay part of the costs but only those which will be done to comply with building codes. Because the club is on university property, the university is responsible for these costs, he said.

The renovations are expected to be completed by December 1990, Gencur said.

The kitchen area also will be renovated to improve efficiency of operations, said James P. Swiatek, coordinator of the renovation project and associate university architect with the University Architect’s Office.

A food storage area and walk-in freezer will be added, he said.

While a majority of the work being done is within the club, an exterior fire stair and loading dock will also be constructed, said Swiatek.

The renovations being made are extensive and will be done in phases, said Scott Snyder, an employee of Cody Ziegler, the project’s general contractor.

The removal of asbestos from the building was completed Tuesday, he said.

Swiatek said construction must be done in phases because all of the project’s funds are not available at this time.

Scott Snyder of Plain City, a heavy machine operator working for Cody Ziegler Inc., uses a back hoe jackhammer to remove the sidewalk on the east side of the Faculty Club. The sidewalks and loading ramp are being renovated to make the building wheelchair accessible.

Until then, construction will affect pedestrian and automobile traffic, Swiatek said.

A fence will enclose areas north and east of the club, he said. As a result, parking spaces behind Hagerty Hall will be lost, and the parking area north of Otton Hall will be accessible from North Oval Drive, he said.

Swiatek said pedestrians will still be able to walk through the area.

He said pedestrians and drivers should exercise caution because of the increase in traffic. He does not anticipate any problems if people pay attention and drivers abide by the established speed limit.

Elisabeth Connoughton, assistant director of Traffic and Parking, said she agrees with Swiatek.

She said Hagerty Drive will remain open and no student parking spaces will be affected. The spaces lost due to construction are those of faculty members, she said.
It's not that cold yet

Gary Allwein, a chef at the Faculty Club of The Ohio State University, puts the finishing touches on a ram carved out of ice. The sculpture will be a decoration at this Sunday's brunch. Allwein tries to do an ice carving every week.

Dear Professor Berry:

The Program/Publicity Committee of the Faculty Club is hard at work on arrangements for a gala reception in celebration of the 50th anniversary of our Faculty Club building.

It is for this reason that I am writing to you. The Board has decided unanimously that you are the ideal person to address the gathering on the subject of the Founding of the Club. A three-minute speech is all we are requesting. There will be two other speakers -- one on the Meaning of the Faculty Club, and the other on the Future of our Club.

In view of your long association with the Club, your colleagues would greatly appreciate the privilege to hear you discuss this important subject. We plan the reception for Thursday, October 25 from 4:00-6:00 p.m. at the Club.

If you can be with us on this date, I shall announce the good news in the next Newsletter. I can assure you that we will have a peak attendance to hear you.

Sincerely,

Anne S. Pruitt, Chairperson
Program/Publicity Committee
I have been asked to tell you, in three minutes or less, something about the origin of the Faculty Club. Although I was not here seventy years ago, when the club was conceived, and although I was not here fifty years ago, when this building was constructed, nevertheless I do have a secret about the club's origin, which I learned in 1930, when I was on this campus briefly. That secret has been stored in my memory for sixty years, waiting for a suitable opportunity to be divulged. Now, at long last, that moment has arrived, and I am prepared to disclose it. It so happens that I know who was the founding father of this club. It was he who conceived the idea, rallied the support, and nurtured it to fruition. And, when this building was erected fifty years ago, he was the President of the club.

That man was my mentor, my benefactor, and my role model. I first met him in 1923, when he was a visiting professor at Yale, and I was his student. His name was Frederick E. Lumley, and you will find his picture hanging on the wall of the club's library.

Lumley was a Canadian, born in 1880; and, although he lived in the United States for forty years, he never surrendered his Canadian citizenship. When he retired, in 1945, he returned to the village in Ontario where he was born, and there he died a few years later. In 1912 he received his Ph.D. degree at Yale, and for the next eight years was on the faculty of Butler University, in Indianapolis. In 1920 Dean James E. Hagerty brought him to Ohio State.

Lumley told me that when he moved from a small, cozy, intimate college to this huge, frigid university, with its seven thousand students and hundreds of professors, he was uncomfortable. Here he was, a sociable creature, surrounded by strangers, lonesome, alienated. And so he wrote a letter to the Lantern, declaring that what this place needed was a faculty club, and he invited any who felt as he did to communicate with him. The response, said Lumley, was encouraging. Meetings were held, ideas were debated, and finally the decision was made to establish a club. Where it was housed, or if it was even housed at all, I cannot say. But, when the Administration Building — now Bricker Hall — was finished, in 1924, the Faculty Club was allotted the entire third floor. There it remained — and flourished — for sixteen years, until this building was erected, fifty years ago.

All this I learned from Fred Lumley — a modest man, who never seemed to crave — or need — recognition for his accomplishments. And, because it was Lumley who told me this, I can assure you that it is the truth.

The Faculty Club building will celebrate the 50th anniversary of its inauguration with a special members’ reception on Thursday, October 25, 1990 from 4:00 to 6:00 in the Grand Lounge. That date marks exactly 50 years to the day that the Club held its inaugural event. It is shaping up to be a beautiful reception complete with elegant hors d’oeuvres and a string trio.

Anne Pruitt and the rest of the Program/Publicity Committee have planned a wonderful afternoon of entertainment. Your personal invitation will be arriving in the next few days. Please plan to join us as we celebrate 50 years of The Ohio State University Faculty Club.
FOOTBALL SATURDAYS

There are still some spaces available for the home football Saturday pre-game brunches at the Club. The remaining games are earlier, so please note the service times listed below. We are also requesting that the final counts for the reservation be to us by the dates listed below, so that we may properly prepare for you and your guests.

Improvements made to faculty club

By Rob Malone
Lantern staff writer

About $2 million in interior and exterior renovations at the OSU Faculty Club should be completed in December on schedule, Franklin Gencur, club director, said.

Half of the funding for the project, which began in January, came from the university, while the other half came from the club, he said.

He said the club, 183 S. Oval Drive, will be better suited to perform its function as both a restaurant and a meeting place for the 2,500 faculty and staff members.

Potential members must have a faculty position of instructor or above, or be of equivalent rank in the university administration or professional staff, Gencur said.

Exterior improvements include a loading dock for delivery trucks, a fire stairway and improved access features for the physically challenged, said Associate University Architect James Swiatek, coordinator of the renovation project.

Interior changes are mostly in the cooking areas. "The main improvements will be in improved operation of the kitchens," Gencur said. "Much of the kitchens dated back to the '30s."

New heating and air conditioning equipment was also installed, Gencur said. "There weren't squirrels running (the old system), but it seemed like it," he said.

Changes to the membership areas will include a new members' lounge, a new coat room and conference room, Gencur said.

He said artwork will be displayed in the new lounge.

Swiatek said all renovated areas of the club have been equipped with modern sprinklers and fire alarms in compliance with building codes.

"We're very happy with the design and the construction," Swiatek said. "The membership and the community itself has been very patient, and it is greatly appreciated."

The club remained open during most of the renovation period, Gencur said.

"The easiest route would have been to close down," Gencur said. But, he added, that would not have served the needs of the membership.

"I think the members will be very pleased with the results," Gencur said.
Faculty Club chef turns ice into art

By Erika Crawley
Lantern arts writer

The artistic talents of the Faculty Club's executive chef, Gary Allwein, came to life in an ice sculpture shaped like an eagle created for the Faculty Club's open house on Tuesday.

Allwein said he learned his ice sculpting technique at Columbus Technical Institute, which is now Columbus State. He said that he graduated with a degree in hospitality management and chef apprenticeship.

Allwein said he has been the executive chef of the Faculty Club for four years. His job is to make sure that every facet of kitchen operation runs smoothly, from the time the food is ordered until it is served.

Allwein said if he is sculpting something for the first time he starts by drawing a picture before he begins. He then takes a 400 pound block of ice and lets it sit for a while, because if he starts too soon he could crack the entire ice block.

When he begins forming the ice into its shape he uses a chainsaw to take out the large pieces of ice. After removing the large pieces, he uses various chisels and ice picks to create a more detailed sculpture.

Allwein finishes his ice sculpture by using saws to smooth it out. He also pours water on the sculpture to get rid of unwanted ice chippings and to give his sculpture a smooth, finished look.

Allwein said it usually takes him two or three hours to create one of his sculptures. They start losing their shape after an hour or two.

Allwein said he also does ice sculptures outside of work when he is not spending time with his wife and six children. Allwein also said he enjoys fishing. He said, "I just like to get out. I've got to get away from things every once in a while."
Mr. Raimund Goerler, Univ. Archivist
169 Converse
2121 Tuttle Park Place

Dear Mr. Goerler:

Last October the Faculty Club celebrated the 50th anniversary of the completion of its present home with a "gala reception" in the Grand Lounge. The Program Committee, no doubt suspecting that I was the oldest member who was still ambulatory, asked me to say a few words about the origin of the club. It so happens that, unknown to the committee, and probably unknown to anyone else, I knew the "founder" of the club; and I revealed that secret at the reception. A number of those who were present suggested that I send a copy of my talk to the University Archives. I failed to act upon their suggestion; but last week, when I was at the club for lunch, I was chided by some of my friends for my negligence. I am therefore sending you such material as I have about the event. If you find that it is not archives material, I wish you would return it to me, and I will place it in my files.

Nowadays the Faculty Club appears to be hardly more than a place to grab a quick lunch, but for many years it played an important role in the affairs of the university. It was the center of social life for the members of the faculty and their families. Receptions, dances, and parties were held there, and in the evening the dining room was a busy place. The area downstairs, presently used as a cafeteria, was a game room, filled with card tables and three tables for chess. Members would hurry with lunch so that they might enjoy a few hands of bridge or gin rummy, or a game of chess, before rushing to a one o'clock class.

The Faculty Club performed the very useful function of converting an aggregation of professors into a community. When I came to Ohio State in 1946 the chairman of my department took me immediately to the club to establish my membership, as did other departmental chairmen. It was there that I became acquainted with my colleagues from other disciplines and formed my most cherished friendships.

I am familiar with faculty clubs at several other universities - Chicago, Yale, Penn State, Missouri, Rhode Island, Michigan, Minnesota, Edinburgh - and I believe that Ohio State has a valuable asset in its club, which is without an equal.

Cordially,

Brewton Berry
Professor Emeritus of Sociology and Anthropology

Your on-campus dining guide

FOR THOSE PLANNING TO feed high school recruits on the Ohio State University campus, here's a handy-dandy list of possibilities.

Ohio Union: Quick-service restaurants as well as the Terrace Room featuring the daily luncheon buffet.

The Barnstormer Restaurant: Soups and sandwiches in a hangar at Don Scott airport. It's farther from main campus, than, say, Damon's restaurant on Olentangy River Road, but it's still university-owned.

Golf Course Dining Room: The Scarlet and Gray Golf Course also is separated from the main campus. Open to the public for lunch and Sunday brunch.

The Faculty Club: Rub elbows over lunch with card-carrying members.

The Seasons Cafeteria: On the first floor of Rhodes Hall—University Hospital in the Medical Center. Grim, but nutritious.

Fawcett Center Dining Room: The OSU student handbook says, "Your folks will enjoy sitting at a table and being waited on." Your recruits will, too.

Matt Corbett, a criminology major from Centerville, sets a table at the Faculty Club's Main Dining Room. The majority of the entries featured in the dining room cost $5.75. Students are prohibited from being members.
Secretaries will have a special week

The third week in April is Secretaries Week, and, as has become the tradition, breakfast buffets will be served at the Faculty Club.

Faculty and administrators take note: The special buffets to honor support staff will be available April 19, 20, and 21 in the main dining room.

The buffet will include omelets made to order, Belgian waffles, and bagels flavored with cream cheese.

Make reservations early. For more information, call 292-2262.
There's lots to do at the Faculty Club

The Faculty Club exists to help break down the walls between departments and colleges, according to Dick Lanese, membership committee chair.

Activities at the club include two-for-one dinners, international dining series, Broadway shows, Family Nights and the Open Table concept, where anyone is encouraged to sit and talk.

For details on these or other activities at the club, call the club office at 292-2262.

From time to time it’s nice to be familiarized with some of the people working behind the scenes. So let me introduce to you our Executive Sous Chef, Leroux L. Schnell. Chef Schnell will be starting his third year at the Club this September. Leroux’s first two years have made a major impact on our cuisine and the organization of our kitchen.

Leroux, originally from Orlando, Florida, graduated from Mid Florida Technical Institute in 1980. His experiences include the Lake Buena Vista Hotel in Orlando, and The Southern Hills Country Club, in Tulsa. Closer to home he has helped to prepare extreme cuisine for the Scioto Country Club, Worthington Inn, and as an Executive Chef at 55 on the Boulevard and Peasant on the Lane.

Leroux has been a welcome addition to the Club and has supplied the culinary talent, leadership, and along with myself, a unique blend of cuisine which has put the Faculty Club in a class by itself on the OSU campus. Please come in for dinner to taste a bit of Chef Leroux’s Extreme Cuisine.

Ohio artist exhibits work in sculpture

By Richard Marple
Lantern arts writer

An exhibition of artwork created by Ohio artist Viki Blinn will be on display at the Ohio State Faculty Club now through April 25.

The opening reception party will be tomorrow at 5:30 in the Faculty Club. Blinn will be attending the reception and will be available to answer any questions regarding her artwork.

Blinn's artwork is known as "abstract expressionism." It combines her personal visions, as well as multimedia forms of art, which together make for very interesting pieces of work.

"I was instructed by Edwin Frye one summer," Blinn said. "He was a great teacher."

"The Faculty Club is reestablishing a strong commitment to the art exhibition program," said Marion K. Fisher, art coordinator for the club. "We're trying to show different and strong varieties of artwork."

The Viki Blinn exhibit will be running through April 25 at the Faculty Club during regular business hours. All of the artwork on display is for sale.
You are cordially invited to The Ohio State University Faculty Club for an Opening Reception in honor of the exhibition "A Ralph Fanning Retrospective" and to meet Dr. George Paulson and Mr. Jim Keny, curators of the exhibition Friday, January 12, 2001 6:00 to 8:00PM RSVP to the Club by January 9th at 614-292-2262

This exhibit continues through March 1, 2001 Please see reverse side for directions to the Club

Dining

At the Ohio State University Faculty Club you can be assured of the finest service, food and hospitality.

Our tradition speaks for itself...

Relaxing

At the Club

We at the Faculty Club believe that good food should come good conversation. Two of our rooms create such an atmosphere.
A favorite room at the Club is the Library. With over fifty current publications available for your reading pleasure, this room is an ideal setting to enjoy quiet conversation or simply to relax in the pages of your favorite periodical.

Reserving

For many years the Faculty Club has provided more than just a place to dine. Our long tradition of hospitality and campus location make it the ideal setting for hosting receptions for visiting scholars, departmental gatherings, anniversaries and wedding receptions.

As a member of the Club, you will find that reserving a room is as easy as picking up the phone. Reservations are taken on a priority schedule basis and rooms may be reserved for either academic or private affairs.

Our hospitality services manager will help you coordinate your event. From menu planning to arranging the flowers, our expert staff will look after every detail, leaving you free to enjoy the company of your guests.

The Private Dining Rooms. The perfect setting for an intimate dinner party or quiet dining space. The Club offers six such rooms that can accommodate up to 20 people each.

The Club Room. For relaxed and informal dining, experience our buffet-style lunch. This room opens onto the Club Garden and Patio and may be reserved for a range of social gatherings.

In contrast, the Member's Lounge is a colorful and inviting room available to our members for after work cocktails and conversation. The Lounge features a travelling art exhibit you can enjoy as you relax in warmth and style.

Our commitment to hospitality excellence touches each and every one of our members and brings together the rich history and tradition of The Ohio State University in a relaxing, comfortable atmosphere.

Experience the difference...
Special Events

The Club offers its members an array of special events to enjoy throughout the year, including Broadway series packages, candlelight gourmet dinners, fashion shows, shrimp peels, football tailgate parties, and holiday galas.

Our tradition speaks for itself...

Guidelines for Membership

The Ohio State University faculty, administrative staff, and alumni are eligible to join the Ohio State University Faculty Club. For more information about membership requirements, please contact the Club at (614) 292-2262 between 8:00 am and 5:00 pm Monday - Friday.

The OSU Faculty Club is a member of the Association of Faculty Clubs International (AFCI). Members enjoy reciprocal privileges at more than one hundred AFCI faculty, staff and alumni clubs throughout the United States, Canada and the United Kingdom.

A non-profit organization, The OSU Faculty Club is guided by a board of control elected by the membership and comprised of representatives of faculty, administrative staff and alumni of OSU.

Your Club Offers

Membership provides equal privileges to spouses. “From candlelight dinners & dances, to events for children & grandchildren”. See the Members-Calendar-of-Events for details.

Home-Away-from-Home: Meeting someone on campus - feel free to come a little early and utilize the members lounge to collect your thoughts. Need to get away from your office, but don’t want to leave campus – the library is the perfect spot to catch up on a little work. Time in between campus activities – come to The Club and have a cup of coffee and maybe read the Times or catch up with the days events on the big screen TV. The Club has several nooks and canuins, from the library and members lounge, to the comfortable couches in the Grand Lounge for your enjoyment.

High Speed Internet: Get OnLine! The recent addition of high speed internet and wireless internet connections in all of our private dining spaces as well as Colleagues, the Library, and Club Lounge makes meetings and a quick check of the email even more convenient. Just stop by the business office, sign out a cable, and speed your way through cyberspace while at lunch or during a break.

Ticket Exchange: If you have football, basketball, or Broadway series tickets that you are trying to find a buyer for – The Club can help. Watch the e-mail postings for updates.

Seven Small Private Rooms: A small dinner, a graduation party or bridal shower. A monthly card group get-together or a business meeting. The Club has the space, and amenities from continental breakfast, served luncheons, a wide assortment of snacks and break items and of course dinners ranging from light fare to an elegant gourmet feast.

The Grand Lounge: Members have access to this picturesque space to hold wedding ceremonies, receptions, departmental meetings, lovely formal luncheons, lavish afternoon festivities, dance parties, music recitals (the Grand Lounge is home to a handsome baby grand piano) and beautiful anniversary celebrations.

Happy Hour: Every Thursday evening The Club hosts a Happy Hour in Colleagues. From 5:00 – 8:00 p.m. there are reduced prices on appetizers and house drinks.

On Site Executive Chef: The extensive lunch and dinner menus always offer numerous new selections each quarter…so there are always fresh and exciting items to try. Additionally, the Chefs tempt you with innovative weekly specials. Banquets are no exception, the expansive meal selections are just the beginning, as the Chefs are happy to accommodate your tastes and desires.

Special Dietary Needs: Tasty selections are always available whether you are dining in Main or lunching in Colleagues. If you are planning an event – the catering managers will help you select an item to complement your other menu choices.

Catering Services: Professional Catering managers to help you coordinate your events, from room setting and diagram decisions, to linen, flowers, and menu selections—all to make the occasion a success and maximize your time with your guests.

Reciprocity: You have the privilege of access to over 400 private clubs worldwide with our reciprocity agreements through the Association of College and University Clubs (ACUC) and the International Club Network (ICN).

Rotating Art Exhibits: The main hall and members lounge have display space where you will see some of the best works from Ohio State faculty, alumni and current students. The Artist Opening Reception - hosted by the Faculty Club – is open to you and your guests, the perfect opportunity to talk with the artist directly. The majority of the artwork displayed is available for sale.

Overlooking both Mirror Lake and the Oval, the Ohio State University Faculty Club is a dignified, sandstone retreat in the middle of campus. Since 1923, the club's building and appointments have enhanced the beauty of the university. It is one of Ohio State's most attractive destinations for quiet conversation, lunch with colleagues, stimulating lectures, a gourmet dinner or a look at the latest art exhibit. In short, the Faculty Club is the university's living room.

The Faculty Club is your connection to complete banquet facilities to accommodate meetings, family gatherings and special functions.

The Faculty Club is your place for bringing colleagues and clients, friends and family. For business or pleasure it's always an easygoing atmosphere of congeniality and casual elegance.

OHIO STATE FACULTY CLUB’S ART AUCTION
WILL HONOR MEMORY OF THOMAS MINNICK

The Ohio State University Faculty Club’s 12th annual art auction on Friday evening, March 11, will honor the memory of Thomas L. Minnick, long-time university administrator and advocate for the visual arts in central Ohio.

The art auction will consist of both silent and live auctions. The preview and silent auction will start at 6 p.m. The live auction will begin at 7:30 p.m. Hors d’oeuvres and cash bar will be available. Both auctions will be free to the public and held at the Faculty Club, 181 S. Oval Drive on Ohio State’s Columbus campus.

The event will benefit the restoration of the Faculty Club’s 1923 Steinway Baby Grand Piano.

Minnick, who had retired as associate dean of University College at Ohio State, died Aug. 29, 2015. He was a resident of Clintonville for many years.

Minnick began his long association with Ohio State in the 1960s, earning three degrees in English. His dissertation was on English poet and painter William Blake. Upon receipt of his Ph.D. in 1973, he began a long career in University College, first as an advising coordinator, then as college secretary, and finally assistant and then associate dean. After retirement, he worked part-time for the Office of Minority Affairs and assisted in teaching the course titled “The History of Ohio State.”

“Tom’s love of the university and its history was rivaled only by his love of the arts,” explained Jeff White, executive director of the Faculty Club. Minnick’s avocation was as an art collector and dealer.

Minnick joined the Faculty Club in 1973 and served as president of its Board of Control in 1996-97. He brought his interest in the arts to the club and was instrumental in working with his colleagues to establish the club’s arts program, including the annual art auction.

“The Faculty Club is very pleased to honor Dr. Minnick’s legacy with this year’s auction,” White said.

David G. Terry, a Columbus auctioneer (licensed and bonded by the State of Ohio), will preside over the sales. A recognized painter and art restorer, he directs his own company, Dave Terry Fine Art Restoration.
Artists and collectors with ties to Ohio State and central Ohio are contributing artworks and collectibles to the live and silent auctions, including paintings, prints, sculpture, ceramics, glass and tribal art.

The Faculty Club's handsome sandstone building, completed in 1939, stands along the south rim of the Oval between historic Orton Hall and the William Oxley Thompson Memorial Library. For more than 20 years, the club has hosted an ongoing series of art exhibitions, featuring artists with ties to the university.

The art auction is an opportunity both for community members to contribute items to the auction and for the art collector, new or experienced, to find in one place a rare mix of pieces from estates, university donors, artists, collectors, and club members — all happening on one relaxed evening.

Terry, who lives in Valleyview, is the art auction committee chair. Serving on the auction committee are: Fred Fochtman, of Clintonville; Lisa Craig Morton, of Victorian Village; Steve and Karen Sterrett, of Clintonville; Sharon Weiss, of Columbus; Marion Fisher, of Worthington; and White, of Lewis Center.
