The Girls Circle Project

The Girls Circle Project is a service immersion project connected with the University Honors & Scholars Center that trains college women to run Girls Circle in Columbus-area schools and agencies with adolescent and teenage girls. Girls Circles are small, facilitated groups that meet weekly to discuss issues of importance such as relationships, peer pressure, diversity and mind and body issues. The focus is on providing a safe space for the girls to feel empowered as they engage in discussion, decision-making skills and critical thinking.

The college women involved make a difference in their community as they learn to become effective leaders and facilitators; increase self-esteem and confidence levels; and gain a greater understanding of the importance of being a good role model to girls and women in our society.
