The Ohio State University recently consolidated its Occupational Medical Services (Wilce Student Health Center) with the Ohio State University Medical Center Employee Health Program. The new University Employee Health Service, is located in area 2A of the University Hospitals Clinic Building, 456 West 10th Avenue.

The University Employee Health Service (EHS) is designed to provide a variety of healthcare services relating to occupational injury, illness or disease. Services include: medical evaluations, acute care for work-related injuries, return-to-work medical evaluations, immunizations or medical monitoring / surveillance. Participation is based on Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) regulations and / or requirements of accrediting agencies.

Some jobs may require medical monitoring or evaluation. If your job meets these requirements, a letter will be sent to your home requesting that you schedule an appointment with EHS within 30 days. All employees can get minor work-related injuries treated at EHS without an appointment.

The EHS Program and the Office of Environmental and Occupational Health and Safety encourage your active participation in this program.
